

Proposed Center Includes Pool, Gym, Office Space

A city-wide recreation and community center is in the works if plans of a conglomerate of local organizations are carried out.

Fred Aucamp, representing the Good Government Association, appeared before the Parks and Recreation Commission Tuesday to request its aid in planning the facility. The center, if built, would be located on city-owned land and operated by the city.

The facility would include an indoor swimming pool, gymnasium, tennis courts, meeting rooms and offices for United Communities Fund agencies (Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, YWCA, Child and Family Service, etc.).

"The UCF already wants to build an office complex in Virginia Beach," said Aucamp. "They've learned from their mistakes in Norfolk where their agency offices are scattered all over the city and some services overlap." He added that UCF could be expected to help financially.

When questioned by Commission Chairman Maury Rignato about whether or not the UCF would attach "any strings" to its money, Aucamp replied, "George Rice (Health, Welfare and Recreation Planning Council of the UCF) was very receptive, and if there are any strings, or roadblocks we'll have to cross those when we come to them."

Rignato said, "We've tried to initiate things like this before. I think we should be first and the UCF secondary."

Aucamp said that the center was planned to serve all the people of all age groups in the city. Groups which have already pledged their support include the Good Government Association, an ecumenical group in Princess Anne Plaza, Ruritan's

Lions, Health, Welfare and Recreation Planning Council and the Virginia Beach Federation of Women's Clubs (eight). Aucamp added that he had been in contact with the group who are trying to start a boys club in Bayside area, but they are not interested in the central facility. "Their idea is good, but it's too limited," said Aucamp.

The group is hoping for a 26-acre site in the Princess Anne Plaza area. It has been tentatively called the Community Services Park. Rignato, appointed Parks and Recreation Director Harold Whitehurst and Stanley Phillips to work with the group in planning.

Aucamp said the facility will be financed by a "gigantic capital funds drive." He emphasized the need for all interested groups to work together and said that a speakers bureau would be organized later to speak before other groups.

In other business, the Commission proposed that a new surfing area be established at Croatan Beach. The area is at the end of Washington Street in Camp Pendleton. A statement in the surfing report read, "The Parks and Recreation Department feels that the existing time limits and designated surfing areas have been established in a fair manner and cannot be improved upon. However, the Department does feel that if an additional surfing area can be established in the Croatan Beach area, if only for one summer, it would help to solve the dangerous conditions that presently exist at the Steel Pier surfing area during the summer season."

The Parks and Recreation Annual Report was also presented. It showed that in the last year 1035 adults registered for classes at the Activity Center at Kempsville. In athletics, 1,485 adults and children took part in basketball, 260 boys in soccer, 2,240 children and adults in baseball and softball, 1014 boys in football and 128 adults in flagball.

A total of 9,035 high school students participated in after school and city-wide physical education tournaments. Total attendance at after school playgrounds was 143,612 or an average daily attendance of more than 1,000.

Surfers were everywhere. The approximate season total of surfers at the Steel Pier was 40,000 with another 20,000 at Little Island. Another 10,000 were counted at areas controlled by time limitations.

Last summer was the best season recorded for the Boardwalk trains. There were 52,255 paid riders for a total of $25,127.50. The department also reported construction of seven new parks and playgrounds, and three school playgrounds.

Among other things, the Parks and Recreation Department sponsored the Golden Age and Golden Years Club, the Virginia Beach Concert Orchestra and Singers and the Virginia Beach Junior Playhouse.

More tax woes are hitting property owners in Virginia Beach.

First it was merely talk of the possibility of a 5 per cent increase in the real estate tax in the next operating budget following an increase of more than 60 per cent a year ago. But before that could be coped with, some property owners found that reassessment had caused their tax bills to go up as much as a whopping 2,000 per cent.

Reappraisal notices began going out Monday from the City Real Estate Assessor W. W. Connell, whose office had made a new citywide appraisal at the request of the City Manager and City Council.

The new appraisals, the first since merger in 1963, was begun to base property value on present day standards, since the face of so much of the city has changed. Connell said the actual fair market value was considered in the new appraisals.

While individual homeowners do not feel the bite of the new assessments as much as others, many will not escape, especially if they live in subdivisions where lots are appraised lower than the current market value. Those hit the hardest are business properties along the major arteries and commercial corridors of the city where the value has gone up quickly. The reassessment is only on property, not buildings on the property.

The 1969-70 operating budget of the city is partly based on the new appraisals, since about $2 million is expected to be gained from the new tax bills. This, added to the proposed additional small real estate tax increase overall, has those hit the hardest up in arms, since this could make the increase this year so great.

City Treas. V.A. Etheridge issued a statement saying his office was not responsible for the increases and said he foresaw a "tax rebellion" in the city. He also criticized the sharp increases.

Connell said Etheridge was speaking only in generalities, and that if he thought the reassessment was wrong it was his privilege.

Several other city officials said the reassessment has been common knowledge for some time, and that nothing about it had been done in secrecy.

Meanwhile calls continued to come in to Connell's office. He said that any citizen who does not believe the new assessment is justified may contact his office, then the tax appeal board and as a last resort take the matter to court. He added that they will have to prove that their taxes are less than those on similar properties to get the new assessments reduced.

The Virginia Beach operating budget countdown has begun, and there are indications it may end abruptly before the April 1 deadline. City Manager Roger Scott legally has until then to present his fiscal 1969-1970 budget to City Council for adoption, but he says it may be presented sooner. Some sources expect it within a week or so.

The proposed budget now stands at $44.7 million, already pared down considerably from departmental requests according to a number of reliable sources. Revenue estimates, on the other hand, are reported to amount to about $200,000 to $300,000 less.

Scott discussed the budget be-

Day in Court Set

Another chapter in the Thoroughgood controversy will be written tomorrow morning in Virginia Beach Circuit Court. Representatives of the Thoroughgood Civic League will receive a hearing before Judge Robert Wehbe (whom they requested) on their petition to stop the commercialization of the entrance to Thoroughgood.

Although the land has been zoned commercial since 1955, a number of residents said they had been led to believe it would remain undeveloped. They asked City Council to zone it. On the advice of City Attorney Harry Marshall and Planning Director Patrick Standing the matter was referred to the city planning commission for a public hearing in April. Marshall pointed out that otherwise he felt the city was leaving itself wide open to a lawsuit for damages should the zoning be changed.

The Thoroughgood developers appeared before an informal meeting of Council and showed tentative plans for a cluster of Colonial buildings on the site. For the professional offices, incidentally, a use permit will also be needed but not for the specialty shops.

The jubilant residents had their victory shattered after the matter was referred to the planners. They learned that the developers had gone ahead and filed for building permits prior to shops and professional offices on about 12 acres of land previously undeveloped off Pleasure House Road at the entrance to Thoroughgood.

City Schools Maintain Open Door Policy

Last week the daytime uses of the Virginia Beach public schools were examined. This week the night time uses will be considered.

Adults enrolled in night school classes offered by the Virginia Beach Public Schools have increased 500 percent in a year. Last year there were eight classes; this year there are 41. And there is money allocated in next year's budget for 70 classes.

But this is far from the total picture. There are also classes sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department, physical education programs and classes offered by three colleges—a fourth will be added next fall.

The City's adult program is divided into five sections. One is the Basic Education program which is designed to meet the educational needs of adults who have not completed the eighth grade. There are presently six classes.

Second is the General Adult Education program which can satisfy high school diploma requirements or be used for personal improvement. Frank Taylor, director of adult and vocational education, told of one husband and wife team who will both get diplomas this year.

Another program is General Educational Development. Students passing the GED test is the equivalent of a high school diploma and enables students who so desire to take College Board exams. The next is scheduled for March 29. About 400 persons a year take the test, Taylor said.

Enrichment courses were added last fall to give adults an opportunity to pursue special areas of interest and to develop leisure time avocations. Included in this is crafts.

There are also a number of Special Job Training classes which include everything from business courses to drafting, woodshop, welding and upholstery.

Part of the increase is attributed to the lowering of fees to $2 plus books.

Said Taylor, "The most significant thing is that it's the adult program is growing faster than any other educational program we have in the city. That's a nationwide trend. Five years from now we could easily have 5,000 persons."

Old Dominion University, and William and Mary are offering 11 courses at Princess Anne High School in the Spring Semester. In addition the University of Virginia is teaching nine courses at First Colonial High School. Next fall Virginia State College has requested and been granted permission to teach classes in the schools.

Many of the college classes (16) are tuition aid classes for the benefit of teachers, although some other persons also enroll. The teachers receive tuition grants from the state for taking the courses. Taylor said that $11,600 was applied for and approved for classes last semester and $18,000 in state funds was approved for the Spring Semester.

Then the Recreation Department is currently teaching 14 classes in eight schools. These include gymnastics, slimnastics, decoupage, ballet, quilting, oil painting, cake decorating and Bishop method sewing.

Added to this are Friday Game Night for children and Teen Centers for High School students. Game night activities include table tennis, basketball, volleyball, soccer, tag games, box hockey and crafts. These are held at five schools from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Special shows and events have been movies, traveling puppet shows, bowmen and K-9 Corps demonstrations.

Teen Center activities include gymnastics, tennis, sports table games, special events and movies.

When considering night activities of schools, one should not overlook school extra-curricular events such as football, basketball, class plays, etc. There are also a number of night meetings by outside groups such as Boy Scouts, churches, PTA's and civic organizations.

Next week: Schools in the future.

Council Suggests Changes

Virginia Beach City Attorney Harry Marshall Monday presented City Council with a dozen clarifying recommendations concerning the proposed Virginia Constitution now being worked on by the Virginia General Assembly in Richmond.

Marshall's report was the consensus of a battery of legal officers serving on a special legislative committee of the Virginia Municipal League. The Council took action on each proposal and Marshall said he would pass along the Council's feelings to the League and to the legislators.

The League suggested an amendment that would take away the setting and regulating of water rates from the State Corporation Commission and place the responsibility entirely with the subdivision selling the water. Virginia Beach City Council quickly turned that proposal down, since the city buys its water from Norfolk, which already charges Virginia Beach considerably more than it charges its own residents. City Council would prefer to have the SCC keep a watchful eye on the matter.

The only other League recommendation that received considerable discussion by Councilmen was eventually passed over with Council taking no official position.

The League suggested a constitutional change that would allow land to be taxed according to use rather than value. While Councilmen noted they were in sympathy with taxation of such land as farmland at a lower rate, they recognized that some farmland, owned or leased, is currently only being farmed until the value is high enough for it to be sold for development profit.

Council also endorsed a League proposal that the laws concerning taxation of exempt property, such as church properties, be strictly construed. Other proposals endorsed by Council included a change in an amendment that would require a population of 7,500 for incorporation into a city instead of the proposed 25,000 population, a change that would require judges to be selected from the political subdivisions where they would serve, an amendment allowing continuance of entirely local bills in the legislature and a clarification of "charter counties" being treated as cities if they have a population over 25,000.

City Council also acted to raise the speed limit from 35 m.p.h. to 45 m.p.h. on Virginia Beach Blvd. from London Bridge eastward almost to First Colonial Road at Oceana. At the initiation of Councilman D. Murray Malbon an investigation of the limits on the four-lane divided highway there was begun. The Traffic Safety Bureau then recommended the higher limits.

The City Council and City Manager met last Monday for the first time in the plush conference room of the new Administration Building at City Hall for an informal staff briefing.

'Impact' Gets Few Responses

Apparently not too many people are interested in the continuance or discontinuance of impact funds in Virginia Beach. Fewer replies were received to last week's SUN SURVEY questions concerning the funds than to other questions in recent weeks.

But of those who answered the question, "Should the federal government continue its policy of distribution of funds to localities such as Virginia Beach, to aid in the education of federally-connected students?", 87 per cent said "Yes" and 13 per cent said "No".

Several who answered affirmatively said the practice of appropriating the impact funds since the early 1950's has helped keep the taxes lower in this area. (Virginia Beach received about $2.5 million in impact funds last year.)

The Nixon administration is currently conducting an investigation into the usefulness of the funds and how they are used by localities with large federally-connected populations.

While the public opinion survey does not profess to represent the thinking of all residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent a cross section of those who took time to clip it and return it to us.

Your attention is called to this week's SUN SURVEY question also, which appears below in the box at the lower left corner of this page.

Each week a new question will appear and the results will be published the following week. The questions will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more responsible the opinion.

Decision Expected On Bids

Bids received for rebuilding Kings Grant Elementary School included four different proposals.

The low bid of $510,300 was submitted by Robert R. Marquis, Inc. of Portsmouth and was for replacing the building as it was without renovations.

The first alternate was to re-arrange some of the floor plan and to add air conditioning. A second alternate would have included a gymnasium. The third alternate was to air condition only the cafeteria, which was almost undamaged in the fire that heavily damaged the rest of the school before Christmas.

The school building in 1960 including initial equipment cost about $534,000.

The School Board is expected to make a decision on the bids at its March 18 meeting.

Although the school was not too extensively damaged by fire, extreme heat caused extensive structural damage. Architects and insurance inspectors recommended rebuilding the school from the concrete slab up.

Sancilio Reports on Cancer Unit

At a recent Board of Directors meeting of the Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society held at the Black Angus, Lawrence A. Sancilio, president of the local unit, made a progress report on the past five months of activities carried on by the Service Program. Sancilio stated, "It is indeed noteworthy that the Virginia Beach Unit has been fulfilling its functions as a health agency to all those who need the services of our unit here in Virginia Beach. The service program is always referred to as the heart of the Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society."

Continuing with this discussion Sancilio stated, "We have loaned 74 pieces of hospital equipment; 747 bed pads, 497 Chux, 1,792 dressings, 22 Johnny coats. Mrs. Robert S. Wahab, Jr. and Mrs. Sidney Kellam, chairmen of Dressings and Loan closet, have done an outstanding job in seeing that these items are made available to those who need them."

The Board saw the new film "The Embattled Cell" which was reviewed by all.

Sancilio said, "I am pleased to report that all committees are doing an outstanding job and that not only is the service program in full swing but both public and professional education are going ahead full speed. All this makes the Virginia Beach Unit an important part of community life."

Monday City Council meets in regular session, and the meeting should be a long one, especially in disposing of the large number of controversial zoning matters on the docket.

The general aviation airport application by C.H. Byler on a tract of land near Larkspur is expected to draw a large number of opponents, but Byler has said he will ask deferment of the matter until all the facts are in.

P.T.A. Meets March 11

The John B. Dey P.T.A. will meet March 11 at 8 p.m. A Physical Education demonstration will be given by children from the school as part of the evening's program.

Police Continue Search

Police continue the search for the person, or persons, who stole an auto with an infant inside then abandoned the car. According to investigators the auto was taken from the parking lot of a 7-Eleven Store at Broad Street and Kellam Road while Mrs. Juanita Patterson was inside the store. Upon leaving the store Mrs. Patterson, 20, of Brain Avenue, discovered that the auto with her 3 months old daughter Daphne inside was missing. The car was found minutes later abandoned near Broad Street and Independence Blvd., the child still inside and unharmed. Some $200 in a wallet on the front seat of the car, and $40 attached to the car's sun visor, were untouched.

Burglary Suspects Held

Two 19-year-old Virginia Beach residents have been bound over to a Circuit Court grand jury on charges of burglarizing Miller's Department Store on Virginia Beach Blvd. Police officials said James J. Anderson of Little Neck Road and Robert A. Franklin of Lillian Avenue were discovered sitting next to a safe in the reception counter area of the store. The suspects were arrested Feb. 2 when police surrounded the store after discovering a chain had been attached to the roof through an air vent leading inside.

Charge Nolle Prossed

Charges of storebreaking filed by police against Ronald L. Boyce have been nolle prossed in Circuit Court. Boyce, E. Ocean View Ave., Norfolk, was identified by police as part of a well organized burglary ring operating in Virginia Beach last October and November. Charges against Boyce were nolle prossed after an alleged accomplice refused to testify against Boyce. Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans says he is considering the possibility of renewing the charge against Boyce.

Appeal Filed

Peter Edward Land's defense attorney has filed an appeal of Land's conviction of the rape and murder of Mrs. Carol J. Dorschel with the State Supreme Court of Appeals. The appeal contends admission of evidence regarding Land's previous record during his trial constituted an error in the trial. Land, 30, is serving two life sentences for the December 1967 assault and killing of the 28-year-old woman. Her body was found in a ditch at London Bridge one week after she was reported missing from her dish washing job at the Pine Tree Inn. Previous motions to grant Land a new trial have been denied by Virginia Beach Circuit Court Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr.

Stolen Property Found

Four adults and two juveniles are facing charges resulting from a Monday night raid on a Princess Anne Plaza residence. Police said some $1600 in merchandise, which reportedly was stolen during a recent series of burglaries in the Sandbridge area, was found in the Hannibal Street dwelling, along with a quantity of pills normally obtainable only on prescription. According to police a 17-year-old juvenile; William Stancel, 18; John Fowler, 20; and Billy McHenry, 19, face charges of possession of stolen property.

Officials said McHenry is also charged with illegal possession of dangerous drugs, and failing to register as a felon. Police also said Susan Cummins, 18, and a 17-year-old juvenile face charges of frequenting a disorderly house. According to police an earlier raid, last Friday night, on the same dwelling resulted in the charging of Dennis Stewart, 19, with illegal possession of dangerous drugs.

Student Wins Scholarship

Charlene Jones, a Bayside High School student, has been announced as a winner of a $1,000 National Achievement Scholarship.

Charlene is one of 340 winners in the fifth National Achievement Scholarship Program for outstanding Negro students.

Manpower Unavailable For Station

Efforts are being made to continue operation of the Cape Henry Weather Station which the Department of Commerce has scheduled for closing within 60 to 90 days.

The station, located at Fort Story, is one of 13 such facilities in the United States marked for closure for reasons of economy.

Operation of the station has been through a joint effort of the Weather Bureau, the Hampton Roads Maritime Association, and the U.S. Navy, which have each provided personnel to man the station.

Hurtis Smith, meteorologist in charge of the Norfolk Weather Bureau, said "We would like to save the station and see if its continued operation, but it appears now the station will be closed."

Smith also said the Bureau has offered to leave its equipment in the station for continued operation, and offered such operation to the HRMA if the Association would desire to assume responsibility of operating the station.

Jack Mace, HRMA executive secretary, said "We feel the weather reports from the station and it's on the spot observations are vital for ships". Mace cited the annual passage of some 20,000 military, commercial, and private vessels through the Thimble Shoals Channel which benefit from the services of the Cape Henry station.

About the possibility of HRMA assuming operation of the Cape Henry facility, Mace said "Our efforts are very much directed towards continued joint operation of the station under the previous set up".

The Navy's position on the matter was outlined by a spokesman from the Headquarters, Commander in Chief, U.S. Atlantic Fleet, who said, "The Navy is willing to continue to provide the support it has been giving in the past. However, with the commitments for qualified Navy weather personnel, and in view of limited manpower resources, the Navy is in no position to provide additional manpower."

ARE Schedules March 9 Talk

"A Message of Hope to Oppressed Humanity" will be the subject of the lecture at the Sunday Forum of the Association for Research and Enlightenment, on March 9 at 3:30 p.m. The lecturer will be Dr. I. C. Sharma of Udaipur, India.

The lecture will be followed by a question period. For further information call the Association.

Budget

to say whether he can be successful. Several Councilmen say they believe it will be a "tough job" to cut the school budget and still continue the same quality education, but that they do not favor a real estate tax increase either, especially since the hike last year topped 60 per cent.

It is generally conceded by sources at city hall that at least two other tax increases will be asked by Scott in balancing the budget. Reportedly he will seek a hike in the utility tax for homeowners from 15 to 20 per cent of the first $12 of each bill and from 9 to 15 per cent for commercial users on the first $400 of each bill. In addition the tax on each pack of cigarettes would go up from three to five cents.

Scott also said that three groups of personnel appointments were discussed in private session Monday.

Following the closed meeting Councilmen went into the new Council chamber to learn the operation of microphones and switches they will have to handle next Monday afternoon as they meet for the first time in the new Administration Building. Council has been meeting in the old Princess Anne Court house Circuit Court courtroom and has not had a home of its own.

The new chamber was nearly complete Monday. The curved desk on a platform for Councilmen, a speakers rostrum, a table for clerks and the carpeting were already installed. Seats for spectators had not been put in, but were expected to be installed by the end of the week.

In this new atmosphere, the new budget will be considered.

Noah

Built An Ark...

The city's new $1.3 million Administration Building leaks. At least it did in the severe rain and windstorm last week-end. But the leaks were being looked into promptly on Monday, probably because of the location of the leaks.

The two worst spots were in the City Manager's office and in the Mayor's office. City Manager Roger Scott returned from a meeting last Sunday night and stopped by his office. He found his desk quite wet, as well as the carpet. The same was true in Mayor Frank Dusch's office. The only other leak was in the building's lone public elevator.

Scott conjectured that the leaks were most likely around three of the building's four chimneys. The areas in question lie directly below. Leaks had been discovered some time ago before the building was completed, but it was thought all of them had been corrected.

When asked if the contractor had been called, one city official said, "Nothing you could print." It was generally agreed, however, that the weekend storm was quite unusual and that if any problems were going to show up in the new building, this was the time. Repairs were begun Monday at the same time cleanup operations were underway. The damage was considered slight.

Court

to that time, and said they were not informed of this. The attorney for the developers says the league did know about the filing.

Thus the present court action was brought in the hope of stopping the issuance of permits, at least until after a hearing by the planners and again by City Council. Lindell said, "They have us at a great disadvantage now." He pointed out that the planning commission would have a difficult time overturning the present zoning if a building were already being put up on it. "We feel we have a case," he said, "and we feel this is the only fair way."

Now it's up to the judge.

Wales Given Appointment

Lawrence B. Wales Jr., a member of Galilee Episcopal Church, has been appointed co-chairman of the Mission and Ministry fund raising campaign by the Rt. Rev. George P. Gunn, Episcopal Bishop of Southern Virginia.

Also appointed co-chairman was Rev. James H. Newsom, rector of St. Paul's Church in Suffolk. The Mission and Ministry Program will provide a minimum of $914,000 to meet Diocesan capital needs.

HEW Approves Mix Plan

Virginia Beach's long-delayed school desegregation plan has been approved by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The plan, first due in September, then postponed to November and later until January, calls for the desegregation and renaming of Virginia Beach's last two all-Negro elementary schools. They are Seatack, which will become Birdneck R. ad Elementary, and Seaboard, which will be renamed Princess Anne Elementary. Union Kempsville High School, the only non-desegregated high school, will become the Virginia Beach Center for Effective Learning which will be a testing and prescription teaching center for children with learning problems.

The plan also calls for total integration of all school facilities. Future hiring of teachers will be without regard to race, color or ethnic background.

Students will attend schools according to zones which have been established on a non-racial geographic basis. The plan has also met with the approval of the local NAACP.

Argument Leads to Stabbing

A 17-year-old white juvenile is scheduled to enter court on March 19 charged with the murder of a Negro youth in the Creeds home shared by them.

Police officials said the juvenile is accused of the fatal stabbing of Aaron D. Bell, 17, during an argument last Saturday night.

The accused, his teenaged sister, and mother reportedly came to Virginia Beach from Boston about three weeks ago, and have been living in the home with Bell and his grandfather since then.

Police said Bell and another Negro, Marshall Munden, were sitting in the living room of the home with the accused and his sister and mother. The two 17-year-olds were arguing when the accused suddenly lunged at young Bell with a bread knife and continued running out of the home.

The mother and sister of the accused then joined Munden in placing Bell into an auto, and Munden began driving the group to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

While Munden was driving Bell to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach, the car became involved in a chain reaction collision with three other vehicles near the intersection of Bell's Road and Oceana Blvd.

Four persons, who received minor injuries in the accident, were taken along with Bell to the hospital. Bell was pronounced dead on arrival. Examination of Bell revealed the stab wound and police were notified.

Negro resident of Public Landing Road telephoned police and said the accused youth had come to his house following the stabbing and was still there in an auto parked in front of the house.

The juvenile had a preliminary hearing Monday morning for the appointment of counsel and his case was continued.

Motel Owner Gets New Job

Nicholas Kostopoulos, owner of the Saxony Motel, joins the Democratic National Committee staff in Washington on March 17.

Kostopoulos worked four years for Hubert H. Humphrey during the 1968 campaign he served as coordinator and advisor for the state of Michigan. Kostopoulos has stated that he does not know yet what his new duties will be.

Storm Damage Is Minor

Virginia Beach was spared the brunt of the storm which moved up the Atlantic coastline this past weekend. However high winds and tides did result in minor damage, as well as some inconvenience to residents.

Trees were toppled over onto a 34,000 volt VEPCO line early Sunday morning resulting in a temporary loss of power in the northern portion of the city. An estimated 7,000 VEPCO subscribers were temporarily without service in the Atlantic, Fort Story and Long Creek sections of the city.

Wind driven rain, and falling tree limbs, covering through-fares of Virginia Beach made driving hazardous in many parts of the city. Although a total of 48 accidents were reported during the storm's passage, there were no reports of serious injuries, and all accidents were of a minor nature.

Flooding up to one foot was reported on several streets in the city, and water was said to be about a foot deep in the flooding of a Tinee Giant supermarket at Baltic Avenue and 23rd Street on Sunday. The most severe flooding was reported on roadways of the Broad Bay and Lynnhaven areas. Numerous cars were flooded out in attempts to drive on thoroughfares on Bay Island. Seas were reported at a height of 22 feet at the Chesapeake light station about 14 miles east of Cape Henry. Winds at the Cape Henry weather station were reported at 48 mph at 8:45 a.m. Sunday morning, with gusts of 56 mph recorded at 8:10 a.m. Tides were reported about four feet above normal along the oceanfront.

Wesleyan Plans Day

Students, faculty and several members of the Board of Trustees of Virginia Wesleyan College will participate in Virginia Wesleyan Day in the churches of the Norfolk District of the Virginia Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church on March 9.

In some churches, a representative from the college will give the message of the morning on the topic of "Christian Higher Education". In other cases, a student will participate in some way in the regular service.

Syd Duval and Daphne Wall of Virginia Beach will be participating in Virginia Wesleyan College Day, Duval will be participating in the 11:00 a. m. morning worship service at Virginia Beach United Methodist Church; Miss Wall will be helping in the service at Lakeside United Methodist Church.

Hospitals To Sponsor Career Fair

The Norfolk-Virginia Beach Health Careers Committee announced this week that they will sponsor a Health Careers Fair March 27-29 at Pembroke Mall.

De Paul, the General Hospital of Virginia Beach, Kings Daughters Hospital, Lake Taylor, Leigh Memorial, Norfolk Community, and Norfolk General, are the participating hospitals in the Fair, which is designed to attract career minded individuals to health areas.

There is no admission charge to the Fair, and persons attending will be able to obtain information from a variety of booths sponsored by numerous organizations and agencies.

There will be no commercial advertising as such, or organized recruitment for any specific agency, as the purpose of the Fair is to provide educational and informative material on health careers in general. The booths will be staffed with professionals and informed volunteers in each phase of the health field, insuring that first hand information will be disseminated at each location. These individuals will be identified by an official health fair badge.

The hours will be from 10 a.m.-9 p.m. on March 27th & 28th, and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on March 29th.

Richard W. Wolfe, Norfolk

Members of the cast of "The Livin' Is Easy Hotel" practice for performances to be presented March 13-15. The production, sponsored by Creeds Ruritan Club, is the annual fund-raising project for the club.

General Hospital is Chairman of the Norfolk-Virginia Beach Health Careers Committee. Donald S. Buckley, Norfolk General Hospital, and Joseph Clark, Leigh Memorial Hospital are Co-Chairmen for the Health Careers Fair. A. B. Reynolds, Jr., De Paul Hospital, is Publicity Chairman.

Commission Expects Variety

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission will have a varied agenda presented to them when they meet March 11. Among the items to be presented is a use permit to operate an automobile graveyard and a use permit for 308 campsites.

A change in zoning from General Industrial District 1 to General Industrial District 3 is being applied for by the city's Industrial Development Authority for property on which the new industrial park will be located in Bayside Borough. This change of zoning is being requested in order to give more latitude to industries that may wish to locate there.

The Planning Commission is applying for a future land use plan of property located in Lynnhaven Borough. This plan will take in First Colonial Road, Great Neck Road, parts of Shore Drive and Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway to Shore Drive and from Broad Bay and Lynnhaven Bay west to the eastern branch of the Lynnhaven River.

An application is being made by the city for a change of zoning from Agricultural to General Industrial District 3 and a use permit to operate an automobile graveyard for the storing and dismantling of automobiles. This application is for property located at the western end of Leroy Drive in the Seaboard Elementary School area. Herdon Corporation is applying for a use permit for 308 camping sites and related facilities on property located on the south side of Old Sandbridge Road, west of Hall Point Creek in the Lotus Gardens area. This will be a private campground.

Change of zoning is being applied for by B.B. Willis for property in the Newsome Farm-Bettie F. Williams School area. The change requested is from Residence Suburban District 4 to Multiple Family Residence District.

C. Roger Malbon will apply for a change of zoning from General Commercial District 2

$200,000 Auction

The U. S. Department of Defense surplus auction held Feb. 27 at the Civic Center brought in $200,000 for the 279 items sold. The equipment sold originally cost the government $1.5 million.

Items sold were pumps, trucks, trailers, buses, cranes, road graders and a locomotive. Bidders had viewed the equipment before the auction, since the items were not shown. Instead a picture was shown.

and General Industrial District 1 to Multiple Family Residence District for property located west of Diamond Springs Road and north of Northampton Blvd. The application includes a use permit to construct 46 apartment units on the property, which is located in the Burton Station area.

Linkhorn Land Corporation is making application for a change of zoning and use permit to construct 65 apartment units on property located on the north side of Oriole Drive and north of Laskin Road in the Birdneck area. The change of zoning is from Rural Residence District 1 with a Motel and Tourist and Restaurant District Supplement to Multiple Family Residence District with a Motel and Tourist and Restaurant District Supplement.

Terry Corporation of Virginia will make application for a use permit to construct 450 garden apartments on property located on the northeast corner of Ferry Plantation Road and North Witthuck Road in the Aragona Village area.

Application for a use permit will also be made by A.D. Miller to construct 32 apartment units on property located on the north side of 18th Street, east of Mediterranean Avenue.

Budget Roulette

This week, to the surprise and horror of a large number of Virginia Beach taxpayers, notices appeared in the mail, telling of the reassessment of their land and a subsequent real estate tax increase amounting to as much as 2,000 per cent in extreme cases.

Immediately, and rightfully so, these taxpayers rose up in arms against such sharp increases at one time. Naturally the man who signed the notice, City Real Estate Assessor W.W. Connell, and his staff caught the brunt of the criticism. This, however, is not fair. All city officials, and especially City Councilman, share in the responsibility in this matter.

But many began running for cover as soon as the notices went out, including City Treas. V.A. Etheridge, who immediately disavowed any connection with the reassessment. Etheridge then went on to predict a "tax rebellion" and said it was "ridiculous" to have this large an increase at one time.

We submit that neither he nor any other city officials or Councilman or the City Manager can duck this one. The reassessment process was ordered by Council at the suggestion of the City Manager over a year ago and now it is complete. No city official doing his job correctly could have missed hearing about what was going on. It was not done secretly.

Hopefully the matter can be settled by public and private hearings with the City Manager and City Council, especially where the increases appear so great and possibly unfair, so that expensive litigation can be avoided. We believe the taxpayers have not been fairly treated in this matter. They were not properly informed of the possibility of such great hikes and on what basis the new assessment was being made.

The next operating budget is based on the revenue to be gained from this reassessment. And with the talk of another real estate hike on top of that being considered seriously, this could serve to be the worst tax increase year in the history of Virginia Beach.

Cost to the taxpayer, and also the ever increasing cheating in these poverty programs.

As stated in the "New York Times" in January, the thievery and administrative confusion in New York City's $122 million a year anti-poverty program has cheated the city's poor out of millions of dollars. In another case the "Times" points out the theft of $1.75 million by a group of young men with the Human Resources Administration in Durham, N.C. Another plan was to transfer four checks, totaling more than a million from H. R. A. accounts to a secret bank in Switzerland. These are just a few accounts of theft you read about. Most of them go unnoticed or are never published. It is about time that liberty loving Americans be aroused from their lethargy, and write their Senators and Congressmen about some of the deplorable conditions in our government, while they still have that privilege.

Thomas Jefferson said long ago, "When all government, domestic and foreign, in little or great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another; and will become as vernal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."

Harmony vs.

Accommodation

So Linwood Holton will run for Governor of Virginia again. Surprise! Surprise! Well, not really. This foregone conclusion was merely firmed up by the State Republican convention last weekend.

The selection of a political ally from Waynesboro, an up-and-coming legislator, is also considered to be a good move. Mr. Dawgins is highly respected within his party and without. And Dick Obenshain, the nominee for Attorney General gave a very good race to Rep. David Satterfield III in the Richmond-Henrico-Chesterfield Congressional Race in 1964. Mr. Obenshain came in second in a hotly-contested three-way race, and won much acclaim for himself and his party, in spite of his youth and inexperience in politics. Both have been overcome since that time.

It is a strong GOP team, destined to give fits to the Democrats in November no matter what the eventual outcome is in the July primary. And that primary is still the big question mark.

No one is ready to discount completely the chances of State Sen. Henry Howell of Norfolk, because of his faithful support in certain areas among certain factions, but every time the good Senator has opened his mouth lately, he has hurt his chances by allowing his foot to get into his mouth.

Howell has been the champion of the little man fighting the big monopolistic utility company. But when he finally got his chance to appear before a Senate Subcommittee investigating shenanigans by some of these companies, he was asked for specifics. He hedged and said he was just a little old State Senator trying to make good in the big city, and on the subject of rates, said he was "an ocean of ignorance."

He had his chance but could prove nothing concrete. Even the little man who revered his champion is considering some of that well-known detergent to make their knight white again. His image came off a bit tarnished.

It has long been known that William Battle and Fred Pollard would have to crash head on before the primary was over. Democrats from the statehouse to the precinct level are still trying to head this off, but the course still looks clear, even with the entrance now of so many "independent" candidates for Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General.

Mr. Holton still stands to be the winner in a Democratic squabble. He knows it and so do the Democrats. Meetings going on in Richmond at this time are still trying to work out some basis of agreement between Battle and Pollard or work out a ticket with both on it. While this hardly seems likely at present, anything is possible in politics, especially where the candidates can be shown that the party itself and its very foundation is in danger.

And in this case that is likely to be true. No matter how firmly entrenched the Democrats are in Virginia politics, it is hard to live down a snarling major fraternal fight before a summer primary, then present a solid, unified front of smiling white teeth behind the primary winner in the fall general election.

Add all this to the apparent ease with which the GOP in Virginia chose its nominees and the apparent harmony in that party, and the Democrats have a big problem.

Clear heads and the prospect of political futures are expected to reign, however, and there is still a little ray of hope that the Democrats can pull together somehow.

It could mean a low-key primary race with the big guns aimed at the GOP in the fall. It could mean an "accommodation" within the ranks. It could mean, "Fight now... Take chances later."

But whatever it means, the Democrats have the political knowhow in Virginia. They have faced challenges before. Perhaps this one has a few more facets. But they cannot be counted out yet.

It's going to be a long hot summer indeed.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"Daddy, why do you sound like that? It's the first time I ever heard you squeak," said the five-year old.

"I have laryngitis," he squeaked.

"I have a Larry Justiss in my class at school," said the three-year old. "He doesn't sound like that."

"I like it when you can't talk too well, Daddy," piped up the five-year old again. "This way when you want the garage cleaned up you can't yell as loud about the stuff on the floor."

"I can still spank," he managed to get out.

"I can't hear you," said the three-year old, getting into the spirit of things. "Say it louder."

"Get them out of here," he yelled to his wife, but his voice cracked and it sounded more like a croak.

"I can't hear you," said his wife. "Say it louder."

"Maybe I'll try sign language," he whispered. "Please get them out of here before I pop a vocal cord trying to yell at them."

"All right, girls, Play in the garage for awhile," she said. They went. "Now, then is there anything I can do for you. You sound like a sexy bullfrog."

"Yes, get the sexy bullfrog two aspirin. I have a terrible headache," he mumbled.

"What's the headache from?" she wanted to know.

"I think it's a hangover from that awful concoction I drank a little while ago," he said.

"What did you put in that anyway," she asked. "It smelled terrible."

"That doesn't begin to describe the way it tasted," he pointed out. "I put in about an ounce or two of bourbon, thick syrup, sugar, lemon juice and hot water."

"And you really drank it?" she asked. He nodded. "Sure you don't want a stomach pump instead of two aspirin."

"Look, your jokes are about as bad as the ones the kids come up with," he said. "I've not had enough the girls have to imitate my lack of voice, but every time I say something to the baby, he laughs at me."

"Well, actually it has been quieter around here for the past couple of days than I remember it," she said. "Do you think your laryngitis could have anything to do with that?"

"Humph," he tried to mutter, but it came out a broken squeak. She laughed. "It's not funny, it hurts too."

"I know it does," she said. "Tell you what. Here's a pad and pencil. Don't talk anymore until the laryngitis goes away. Write everything down."

"If I don't talk until then, how will I know when it goes away?" he asked. She stared at him. "All right. Give me the pad and pencil. I shall henceforth not speak." The phone rang. She started into the other room to answer but he signalled her frantically to return. It continued to ring while he wrote her a message and handed it to her.

She read it and threw it at him as she ran out of the room. It said, "Answer the phone."

"That was your Mother," she said when she came back a little later. "She wanted to know how you were so I told her about the laryngitis."

"What did she say. I'm sure she was sympathetic," he scrawled on the pad.

She read it and said, "She certainly was sympathetic. She said how wonderful it must be for the girls, the baby and me. Then she mumbled something about why you couldn't have gotten laryngitis when you were a kid."

He wrote something on the pad, but thought better of it and tore it up.

THE GREAT AMERICAN

by L. Charles Burlage

It is painfully difficult to understand how some well financed college students of today profess to have such an undying love of peace and non-violence; who want to make love and not war; who block troop trains; who destroy their draft cards; who quote from the thoughts of Mao; who ridicule American efforts to preserve our way of life, and yet seem to find nothing shocking about deliberate communist murders of innocent women and children in South Vietnam; or the systematic murder of South Vietnamese leaders.

Modern Communism was born through murder. It began in Russia on July 8, 1918, with the murder of Czar Nicholas II, together with his wife and children. It has survived from that day to the present time on murder and mass killings. Stalin of Russia and Hitler of Germany were no ordinary murderers for they belonged to that unique class known to history as mass-murderers. Stalin literally was responsible for the death of 30 million people of Russia.

There is considerable evidence that he poisoned Lenin and caused Lenin's death on Jan. 21, 1924. Evidence accumulates that Stalin murdered his second wife Nadya on Nov. 9, 1932, with a revolver in their bathroom. The torture and human suffering experienced in the Moscow purge trials of the 30's is beyond human imagination. In 1937-1938 alone, it is variously estimated that between seven to eight million people were murdered, some estimates run as high as 23 million people.

Totalitarian terror achieved its highest form when one man by a telegram could order the extermination of 10,000 humans, not even bothering to provide names. Never before had so much punishment been inflicted upon a people. Everyone in Russia lived in mortal fear.

In December of 1940, the last surviving architect of the Russian Revolution besides Stalin, was murdered at Stalin's direction, Lev Trotsky.

Stalin feared assassination throughout his life; possibly with reasonable cause. History records his death as occurring on March 5, 1953; though there seems to be serious question about this date. There are four different accounts of Stalin's death. In all the accounts we hear of a bloodstained shirt; of no doctors in attendance; in one of the accounts, we read of Beria joyfully crying out over Stalin's body: "The tyrant is dead, dead, dead."

The head of the secret police under Stalin was Beria. According to an account of Khrushchev as related to Sen. Pierre Commin, a French Socialist in the summer of 1956, Beria was strangled by Mikoyan, Malenkov, Koniev and Mosolkov. After Stalin's death, Beria, as head of the secret police, had the other Russian leaders so frightened they "bolted up" in their private offices surrounded by their personal guards. Finally, as a way out of the impasse, Voroshilov was sent to Beria to suggest that he, Beria, take the dead Stalin's place as leader. A meeting was arranged in the Kremlin for this purpose. At the time and place scheduled, Beria appeared; when he did, the assembled leaders turned on him and killed him. This was how the power was transferred at Stalin's death, a la communism.

And yet to the wonder of America, these so-called idealistic, intelligent, non-violent, freedom loving, young college students, continue to give aid and comfort to the Communist enemy while criticizing everything and everybody representing the continuing fight against communist tyranny and for freedom. Surely as college students, they are chargeable with a knowledge of history. Surely they must know that we are engaged in a noblesse barred fight to the finish—winner take all. We can only hope their influence and numbers remain small while they grow up and learn the facts of life.

Keeping Up with Conditions

City Council has wisely moved to raise the speed limit of that portion of Virginia Beach Blvd. from London Bridge to the end of the divided highway near Oceana from 35 m.p.h. to 45 m.p.h.

The road conditions and the excellent highway there dictate the higher limit, as does the sparse commercial and residential population. This has been a bad situation since all of the toll road approaches were completed nearly a year ago. The stretch unwittingly became a speed trap, and police, doing their job enforced the limit. Finally enough people complained to win a City Councilman over to their side. He called for an investigation and the result is a good one.

It was found over a lengthy period of time that motorists know what the limits should be. The area was checked by radar and it was discovered that of 650 vehicles only 22 would have received speeding tickets had the limit been 45. At the limit of 35, about half would have been ticketed.

Council has also been asked to look into the 25 m.p.h. limit which meets a motorist quickly at the end of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway on 21st Street heading east. The limit drops abruptly from 65 to 35 to 25, but because it is the law, police have been there waiting on occasion. Part of this street should carry the higher 35 m.p.h. limit. It is a wide major artery, and the lower limit is not realistic, not only to tourists but also for the year-around resident. Hopefully Council will act as wisely in this matter as it did in raising the limit on Virginia Beach Blvd. We do not need a speed trap.

The area was checked by radar

The Voting Age

The only argument that we can think of that really makes any sense is...if they're old enough to fight and die for their country, they should be able to vote. Other than that, the subject of the right to vote at age 18 is a moot point.

Obviously there have to be deadlines for everything in an orderly society...16 for a driver's license; 18 to be tried as an adult; 21 for ownership of an automobile; 25 for a lower insurance rate for an unmarried male driver, and even 35 to run for President of the United States. Any one of those arbitrary limits can be questioned.

Too many 18-year-olds are just not ready to take on the grave responsibility of voting. Many are still in high school and don't have the slightest interest in a school bond issue or a street improvement project or a liquor-by-the-drink referendum (when one has to be 21 to buy a legal drink).

The impact that a large number of 18-year old voters in a college town could have on local politics could also be somewhat disconcerting.

The vote is a privilege reserved for adults. While some are mature enough at 18, most are not ready to take on the responsibility of a vote. Hopefully by the age of 21 they will realize the importance of a single vote. Best leave it like it is. Let voting begin at age 21 when majority is reached.

Think about that, Virginia Constitutional revisers in Richmond. Don't do anything rash. Those 18-year-olds might vote you out of office.

All Navy Squad Begins Practice

Some of the best basketball players in the Navy began practicing here Monday for the Interservice Basketball Tournament at Ft. Hood, Texas, beginning March 10-14.

The All Navy squad consists of six members of the Amphibious Force Gators, winners of the All Navy Basketball Championship, and six players from other Navy teams.

The squad, sporting a height average of 6-4, is a blending of outstanding shooting ability and effective defensive strength unmatched by any one team in the Navy. The team will be working out in McCormick Center gym at the Destroyer - Submarine Annex on Hampton Blvd. Workouts are 9-11 a.m. and 2-4 p.m.

A 43-10 season record stands tall behind the six Gators on the All Navy squad.

Rick Owens, a 5-10 Gator quarterback, was chosen for the All Navy. All Tourney team. Floyd Beason, a 6-5 defensive ace who "came on like gang busters" late this year, also made All Navy All Tourney. Randy Coulling stands 6-7 and plays forward. He also "shot their eyes out" in the Tournament Set March 8

The Commanding Officers of the Fleet and Air Warfare Training Center at Dam Neck and NAS Oceana has invited the public to attend the first Dam Neck Invitational Volley ball Tournament of March 8.

There are ten teams divided into two groups participating in the tournament. They will begin playing at 9:30 a.m. at the Dam Neck and NAS Oceana gymnasiums.

Group A, at Dam Neck, is comprised of teams representing Langley Air Force Base, Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station, Norfolk and Virginia Beach YMCA's, Serv-Lant and Dam Neck.

Group B, at NAS Oceana, is Seymour-Johnson Air Force Base, NAS Norfolk, PhibLant, Fort Story and NAS Oceana. The top two teams from each group will meet at Dam Neck at 4 p.m. to play a single elimination playoff for the championship. This event is expected to become an annual affair.

South Atlantic Regional and All Navy tournaments at Jacksonville, averaging 20 points a game and making All Tourney teams.

Bill Rowser is a tower of rebounding and defensive strength at center. The 6-5 veteran starred in All Navy play in other years for SubLant. Dick McGee is an explosive 6-7 rebounder and scorer.

Clark, McGee and Rowser are veterans of previous Interservice Tournaments.

The Gators' depth is indicated by the fact that coach John Meyerhoff augmented only two players en route to the All Navy title. Both came from SubLant, whose five straight All Navy championship string was broken this year by PhibLant. Every player on the PhibLant bench played in the All Navy championship and all scored.

"You just can't beat a team that can send three men off the bench who are as good as the starters, especially when the starters are as good as the Gators' first five," said Les Kuhn, coach of SubPac's All Navy runners-up.

Augmenting the Gators' nucleus to this All Navy squad are three members of SubPac's All Navy finalists, two players from the San Diego entry in the All Navy tourney, and one man

Lemberger To Speak

Dr. Ernst Lemberger, Ambassador of Austria, will be the speaker in the third of the series of World Affairs Programs sponsored by the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce.

He will speak at a dinner meeting in the ballroom of the Golden Triangle Hotel today. A reception will be held at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 7. His subject will be, "Austria, A Pillar of Peace in Europe."

Dr. Lemberger, served at the Austrian Embassy in Washington, D. C., from 1948 to 1955, and later served as ambassador to Belgium. He is one of two Austrian citizens who have been awarded the U. S. Medal of Freedom.

Reservations for the dinner may be made at the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce.

Maury Is Tidewater's Team

Maury won the Eastern District basketball tournament last Saturday night at the Norfolk Arena. Booker T. Washington came in second. But it was two Virginia Beach teams, both very much upset-minded, that gave the two leaders some anxious moments throughout the tourney.

Both Cox and First Colonial turned in outstanding performances in all three games they played, but Cox had the edge all the way in its drive for third place.

It all began more than a week ago when Cox downed Lake Taylor easily in the opening round of the district tournament. Last Wednesday night brought the first major surprise, when the Patriots of

First Colonial upset the favored Cavaliers of Princess Anne 68-66 in the closing moments of the game. The game was a close one all the way, with PA leading by two points at halftime. Ricky Michaelson of Princess Anne scored 39 points in the losing effort but the final difference was First Colonial's John Grimstead and the seven points he scored in the last two minutes. Princess Anne ended the regular season in fourth place in the district standings. First Colonial was fifth, and the game was expected to be a close one. The spectators were not disappointed.

That same evening Maury easily passed Norview 90-68, although one of the Pilots, Elvin Wilson scored 31 points. Three of the Commodores accounted by 78 of the 90 points, however.

Booker T., which had already handled Granby with relative ease, then went against Cox in a semifinal game Friday. The game Falcons pulled to within two points of the Bookers late in the third quarter, 35-33, but the pressure was really on in the fourth quarter. The Bookers scored 20 points to Cox's 13. In the first quarter Cox could not get started. The Falcons scored only 8 points to the Bookers' 17.

But in the second quarter Cox outscored them, 14-13, and in the third quarter, 14-11. Roy Ebron of Booker T. scored 31 points while Cox junior star Keith Sudduth was held to 17.

In the other semi-final game Maury had to do some fancy footwork to stave off an upset attempt by First Colonial; but the Commodores won it 67-52. Maury took the lead in the second quarter after a poor first quarter. The Commodores led by 6 at the half. In the fourth quarter both teams scored 13 points, but Maury outscored the Pats 19-10 in the all important third quarter.

Thus the stage was set for Saturday's finals. Cox showed its winning form which was highly successful all season against all teams by winning the consolation opener against First Colonial decisively, 73-59. Keith Sudduth scored 22 points for Cox to high scorer. Cox outplayed the Patriots in all quarters.

Cox, by downing First Colonial, became Virginia Beach's winningest basketball team for the 1968-69 season, with 17 wins in 21 outings. The Falcons lost only to Maury, Booker T. and Princess Anne in district play and to the Bookers again in the tournament.

In the championship game Maury played precision basketball and surprised the Bookers with their 58-54 win and the second consecutive district crown. The same two teams played in the championship game last year with the same result. The fourth quarter saw Maury put the victory on ice with a ten point lead at one point, after an extremely tight game to that point.

Maury now has won 43 of its last 45 games, with one loss this season in non-district competition to Booker T. That record (20-1 this season) goes on the line at the Norfolk Arena tomorrow night in the Eastern Regional playoff against Pembroke, with its 14-7 record. At the same time Wilson plays Hampton at Hampton Institute. The championship and consolation games will be played Saturday night at the Norfolk Arena.

Maury is expected to have better than an even chance to take its state championship bid into the state finals in Charlottesville on March 14-15.

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

Capt. W. J. Moore, Jr., 2nd Police Precinct C.O., enters the FBI National Academy next Monday for 12 weeks of specialized training. Capt. Moore has the distinction of being the only police officer from the state of Virginia to be included in the class of 100 men.

A total of 106 men from the various fire departments in Virginia Beach are undergoing special training in a fire school being conducted at the Virginia Beach Borough fire station. The course includes 80 hours of training in basic, standard, and advanced fire fighting techniques, with certified state instructors. The class also includes men from as far away as Chincoteague and Smithfield.

Two more women dispatchers have joined the staff of the communications room in police headquarters at Princess Anne Courthouse. All reports indicate Mrs. Joyce Holt and Miss Sue Ellen Sewell are rapidly mastering the many responsibilities of their assignments.

William A. Kiger is the newest civilian addition to the radio room and is fast becoming an old hand at handling dispatcher duties. Men of the Blackwater Volunteer Fire Department are putting the finishing touches on a new addition to their station house. The structure provides the department with additional space needed for quite awhile to house equipment.

The latest city office to be relocated in the expanding Courthouse Complex is that of the Fire Prevention Bureau. The office is occupying the Courthouse Drive building formerly occupied by the city attorney. The Bureau's new phone number is 427-4438.

P.O. L.C. Jessie Self, formerly serving with the Virginia Beach Shore Patrol Detachment, has just retired after 20 years service with the U. S. Navy. He has joined the Virginia Beach police department, and is assigned to the 2nd Police Precinct. A special ceremony was staged by Self's friends on his retirement to "wash the salt water out of his veins."

Displays Planned

The Virginia Department of Agriculture and Commerce began a display yesterday in Pembroke Mall in recognition of National Weights and Measures Week.

The display, which will run through March 8, has been set-up in order to better acquaint the public with the services performed by this agency to protect, not only the consumer, but the retailers, processors and producers who sell by weight.

Also at the Mall on March 8 will be exhibitions by the Boys' and Girls' Gymnastics Teams of Bayside, First Colonial, Kellam and Kempsville High Schools. There will be exhibitions at noon, 1 p.m. and 2 p.m.

During the week of March 9-13 the Girl Scouts will have a display, also at the Mall, in recognition of National Girl Scout Week. Literature will be passed out to the public, and a recruiting table manned in an endeavor to attract additional Girl Scouts and Girl Scout Leaders.

Marine Pfc. Robert Brunskill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Brunskill of S. West Grove Road is serving with the First Marine Division in South Vietnam.

E.C.U. Pres. Is Speaker

Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina University, will be next Tuesday's speaker at the weekly meeting of the Virginia Beach Sports Club. The educator will discuss "A realistic approach to athletic academics" during the luncheon meeting which begins at 1:00 p.m. at the Black Angus Restaurant.

Last Tuesday Mike Barrett, recent Olympic gold medal winner as a member of the USA basketball team, spoke to the club about his memories of the Olympics. Barrett is presently the player-coach of the champion SubLant basketball Sea Raiders from Little Creek Amphibious Base. Barrett was also honored by the Virginia Beach Sports Club earlier this year at the annual Jamboree. At that time the young, unassuming athlete brought his gold medal with him which was passed among members of the audience.

He said it was really the property of all Americans, since he had won it for America.

Artist To Speak

Norman Goodwin, Norfolk artist, will be the guest speaker for the monthly meeting of the Virginia Beach Art Association on March 12, 8:30 p.m., at the Studio Gallery, Norfolk and Cypress Avenues. His topic will be "Truth in art through purity of Design and media."

"My electric heat cleaner, has a more even temperature, and doesn't make a bit of noise."

Mrs. E. A. Zeppieri, Virginia Beach, Va.

This year in our ads, we're quoting some of the world's foremost experts on electric heat. Vepco customers who have electric heat in their homes. Customers like Mrs. E. A. Zeppieri, of Va. Beach. Mrs. Zeppieri lives in Windsor Woods, a total electric community of over 1,000 homes. We visited her recently and asked her a few questions. Mrs. Zeppieri, how do you like your electric heating system?

"Oh, we're just crazy about it—we really are. It took us a little time to make up our minds, but now that we have electric heat, we're really pleased. Why did you have to make up your mind?"

"Oh, we were wondering about how high the bills were going to be... But we're very pleased with them. I can't complain."

"How clean is your electric heat?"

"It's the cleanest type of heat I've ever had."

"What about noise?"

"There's no noise at all. Maybe late at night, when everything is quiet, you might hear the thermostat click on."

"Mrs. Zeppieri, what would you say you liked most about your electric heat?"

"Well, I like it all. But frankly speaking, I think it's the electric ceiling cable. I can just move my furniture anywhere and I don't have to worry about a vent or radiator or anything."

Mrs. Zeppieri is just one of the thousands of satisfied electric heat customers in the Vepco service area. If you'd like to find out how easy and economical it is to convert to an electric heating system, just call your Vepco Authorized Comfort Conditioning Contractor. His number is in the Yellow Pages.

He'll come out and give you an estimate—in dollars and cents. And at no obligation to you, of course.

Once you find out how little it really costs to have clean, quiet, trouble-free electric heat in your home, you'll probably want to convert right away.

And by this time next year, you'll be able to consider yourself an expert on electric heat.

In order to take the examination the applicant must satisfy certain requirements. The minimum requirements are:

(3) The applicant shall have resided in Virginia one year prior to applying for the battery of tests and must reside in the school division through which he makes application.

(4) The applicant must attain a passing score on the complete battery of tests provided by the State Department of Education.

An orientation course to prepare applicants for the GED Test will be held on March 18, 20, 25, and 27, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., at Princess Anne High School. There is no charge for this class or for taking the test itself.

Persons who desire to take this test should secure application forms from F. E. Taylor, Director of Vocational and Adult Education, Virginia Beach City School, Princess Anne Station, Virginia Beach, Va. (Telephone 427-4574). Mrs. John Pollard, III, Mrs. Fred Pollard, Mrs. Thomas S. Ellis and Mrs. Davis Reed at a party given by the Pollards for the Pollards.

Pollards Honor Pollards

Saturday night in the middle of the rain and wind was a great time to lose the muffler off a car—which is just what Lt. Gov. and Mrs. Fred Pollard did in Williamsburg while trying to reach Virginia Beach for a party in their honor.

The party was given by John and Katy Pollard III of Great Neck Point. About 100 persons attended despite the weather. Among them were a variety of Pollards, all related to some degree.

The Lt. Governor's wife wore a two-piece black velvet suit with white collar and cuffs which emphasized her blond hair. Katy Pollard was wearing an avocado green velvet cocktail dress.

The party was described by the Pollards as a "get together to meet the Lt. Governor."

Among those attending were Mr. and Mrs. John Pollard Jr. from Lancaster, Mr. and Mrs. James Sadler, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sadler, Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Pender, Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Edward Dillon, Cmdr. and Mrs. Joseph Ferraz with NATO from Portugal, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Costenader, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs.

Davis Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Adkinson, Mr. and Mrs. George Hall, George Ames from the Eastern Shore, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Michelson, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gill, Bernard McCrary, Phillip Purington and Adm. (ret.) and Mrs. Leon J. R. Manes.

Club May Visit Capital

The Mid-City Women's Democratic Club of Virginia Beach held a special board meeting to acquaint the new officers and board members and set up club plans for the next three months.

It was accepted that memo's be sent out to the membership between meetings to keep them informed of club activities.

An invitation was read to the board from Kenneth N. Whitehurst Jr., member House of Delegates, to visit Richmond during the special session.

Program Chairman Mrs. C. Bonnie Mills is making arrangements for the club membership to visit during the upcoming session and possibly tour the capital building.

Evening Celebrates Three Things

The Tidewater Chapter No. 166 of Parents Without Partners will celebrate their anniversary and install officers at a cocktail party, dinner and dance at the Lake Wright Motor Lodge on March 8.

The cocktail hour will begin at 6:30 p.m., followed by a buffet dinner. Dancing will be from 9:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. after the installation of officers.

Auction to Aid V.B. Hospital

The Colonial Circle of the Kings Daughters will have an auction, their first, of handmade items at 11:30 a.m. Monday at The Cavalier.

About 150 items made by members and their husbands will be auctioned by Maury Riganto. Proceeds will go to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

Brian Scott models one of the Winnie the Pooh fashions from Sears that was featured at the "Fashions for Hearts' Sake" show Friday night.

At Hope Haven

By Yatta Jones

Being the mother of six children is quite a job within itself, but never knowing from week to week the ages of the children, or whether they will be girls or boys, makes the task even harder. In a sense this describes the position Mrs. Warren H. Barnes has at Hope Haven Children's Home as superintendent and "mother."

Mrs. Barnes has held this position since Hope Haven became a licensed children's home three and a half years ago. She and her husband, a civil service worker, live at the home as resident "mother and father." Approximately 20 children, boys and girls, have lived there during this time.

Hope Haven, which is run by Union Mission in Norfolk, grew almost entirely from a single incident. A serviceman left his three children, all girls, with Union Mission to care for. His wife had deserted them, he had to go to sea and had no family to look after the children. A girl was hired to keep the children and the idea of a children's home began to germinate.

At that time Union Mission ran a summer camp for children on North Landing Road. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes had helped run the camp and Rev. T. E. Bashford, director of Union Mission, approached them with the idea of the children's home.

The Barnes owned a home in the Thalia area and becoming parents at the home would mean that they would have to move. It did not take them long to decide, for as Mrs. Barnes says, "My husband and I saw the need for a children's home." They are the kind of people who fill any need they are able to, so they sold their house and moved.

Selling the house was not an easy decision for them to make. They debated about it, decided that if the house were not sold by a certain date they would hold on to it and then called a friend on a Monday to tell him the house was for sale. It was sold the next day.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes were well qualified for their jobs—they had, more or less, raised two separate families. Their oldest boy is 24 and has two children of his own. Their other child, Maurice, is 11. According to Mrs. Barnes, Maurice has adjusted extremely well to their new life. He thinks of the other children as part of the family.

Hope Haven is located on the same property as the summer camp. The entire facilities are on a farm, part of which is worked by Mennonites. The Barnes family and the other children live in a white, two-story frame house. At the present there are five boys in addition to Maurice at the home. Their ages range from five to thirteen. There are three families represented among them, but they act just like brothers of one family.

The boys attend public school where they are quite active. On Sundays they all go to church as a family and participate in the full church program.

Although they do not work the farm, there are still plenty of chores for the boys. They help with the housework, especially the heavy work; they keep their own room clean; they look after the horses, which are kept for the summer camp. Right now they take particular care of one of the mares because she is going to foal soon. They feed her apples, give her vitamins and spoil her in general.

During the summer they help with the garden, participate in the camp activities, ride the horses and swim at the camp pool. At Christmas the men of the CPO Club at NAS in Norfolk, took the boys out for a day and gave them presents. The Davis Ellis Wives' Clubs of Little Creek gave the boys a Valentine's party...the women brought their own children along and they all had a wonderful time.

Mrs. Barnes is very happy with the response the churches in the area have given in supporting the children's home. Particularly right now, for they are trying to enlarge the facilities. They turned down 60 children last year. Only last week they had to turn down three girls. Luckily, another family offered to take the three girls until the new facilities were built. There is one little girl out already, waiting to come to the home.

Future plans for the home call for small cottages. Each cottage will have a housemother in charge of ten children. The basic premise of the program is to keep a home-like atmosphere for the children and to give each child individual attention. Hope Haven will eventually accommodate 100 children.

Living at Hope Haven has made quite a few changes in Mrs. Barnes' life. She had complete freedom before, but now she has to plan with the children in mind. She was a rather quiet, shy person, but now she has learned to talk to strangers and before groups.

Learning to keep the records necessary for the home has been a big step for her. The first year she had to do it all on her own, but the state license inspector has now taught her how. This in itself is a big chore, for records have to be kept on each child almost daily.

Mrs. Barnes has had to learn the new English and new math in order to keep up with the children, as well as read more so that she could answer the many questions they have. She is making plans right now to learn how to drive, which is almost a necessity since they are located rather far out.

She had always lived in town before, but she says she hasn't been lonely because there are so many visitors. "And now," she says with a definite gleam in her eye, "I'll probably have to be a mid-wife to that horse, although I've never been around horses before!"

With all of the changes Hope Haven has made in their lives you cannot help but wonder how the Barnes feel now. I asked, and Mrs. Barnes replied, "I wouldn't live any other way. I don't think my husband and I would be happy anywhere else..."

McAllen's ALLEY

By Carolyn McAllen

It's Known As Blackmail

The kids and men stole the show from the female models at the "Fashions for Hearts' Sake" fashion show staged Friday night by the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach.

Most amazing was the fact that none of the youngsters cried. Hardly any of them even hesitated before heading down the runway. They were led through their paces, and even some dance steps, by a large white rabbit who was either the Easter Bunny or Harvey's first cousin.

I'd give anything to know what method of coercion or blackmail the women used on the men to get them to model. From the expressions on their faces, some of them were definitely doing it under protest, or maybe they were just in dire physical agony.

Others looked like they were going to go through with it or else. Still others had a grin and bear it attitude. Maybe it was just the colors—mulberry, orange and apricot—that they were wearing.

But then you have Al Mailhes who came out grinning and swinging a golf club—the epitome of casualness. Of course, he had been through the show before as a model.

Or Mike Sechrist of WTAR who stepped out jauntily as if he didn't have a care in the world. Maybe having his wife there, also modeling, as moral support helped.

Mildred Alexander, who put the show together, really topped off the evening when she appeared in a red and gold brocaded jump suit. "They finally put grandmother in britches," she quipped.

HERE COMES OLGA!

The rainy nasty weather did not in any way dampen the spirits of those who attended the Norfolk Symphony Ball at the Norfolk Hotel Saturday night. Then again with a band like Glenn Miller how can you stay away? The band was terrific, and believe me, the people were really dancing. Many of Glenn Miller's old favorites were played as well as some of the latest in music.

As the cars would pull up to the front door of the Mall, a doorman was there to help the women out of the cars and to open the door to the Mall. On entering the first thing that caught the eye was the drop curtain of green with musical notes of gold. Behind each buffet table at each end of the mall was also the curtains of green with the gold musical notes. In the center of the stage was the Glenn Miller band. Tables were placed from one end of the mall to the other leaving a rather large space around the band for dancing.

The tables at one end were covered with hot pink table cloths and at the other end they were covered in green table cloths. In the center of each table was a large champagne glass filled with oil, and floating on the oil were several little corks that had wicks through them. Each cork had metal discs around it. Once the wick was lit it continued to burn, giving the appearance of small candles burning. Around each champagne glass was a wreath of camellia leaves with red and white camellias.

Mrs. Harry Mansbach and Mrs. John Flood were co-chairmen of the decorating committee with the help of Mrs. Samuel Capin. I don't believe that they forgot one thing to make this dance a success. I noticed that the lights in the stores were out and the only lights were the romantic lights from the champagne glasses in the middle of all the tables. Each buffet table did have a candelabra.

The catering was handled by Lindy's of the mall. The buffet consisted of: egg roll, Swedish meat balls, crab meat in small pattie shells, cocktail sausages in blankets, relish dish of pickles, radishes, both green and ripe olives, hot peppers, carrot strips and celery. Dips and krachets.

Some of those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Claude Herbert, Peggy Coleman, Jim Tatum, Plans for the Spring Garden Tour in Thoroughgood in early April were formulated and the President appointed Mrs. R. E. Brickhouse, Mrs. Horace M. Jordan and Mrs. F. A. Manning as co-chairmen for this Garden Tour.

J. R. McCloud of Smith Douglas Co. presented an interesting as well as instructive program stressing "The Ten Points for having a Good Lawn."

Valentine arrangements and horticulture specimen were judged by members from the Lake Shores Garden Club and blue ribbons were awarded to the following: Arrangements, Mrs. R. L. Lindell, Horticulture, Mrs. R. L. Lindell and Mrs. R. E. Brickhouse.

P. A. Gardeners
The young women of this club presented two white dogwood trees to Princess Anne High School on Feb. 21. These trees were donated by Mrs. W. L. Robinson and accepted in behalf of the school by its principal, Warren D. Littleton.

As is evidenced by such a ceremony, these girls are trying hard to uphold the desires of all garden club women--to do what is necessary to enhance our community with beauty.

Thoroughgood
The February meeting of the Thoroughgood Garden Club was held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Harrison on Hermitage Road with Mrs. T. W. Gray as co-hostess.

Blend chopped nuts and coconut flakes with cream sherry. Stuff filled California prunes with mixture. Arrange in center of chilled cinnamon apple rings for a seasonal dessert or salad.

Officers will be elected at this meeting. All Virginia Beach alumnae are invited.

Hospital Project Continues

Suddenly, after driving past the same place day after day, one realizes that something is different, even though the difference cannot be pinpointed.

That's the way the landscaping and beautification of the General Hospital of Virginia Beach has progressed. It's been done a little at a time since 1966, but few residents realize the time and money that has gone into the project.

It was adopted as a continuing project of the Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs, Inc. soon after the hospital opened. In the time approximately $10,000 has been spent on beautification. Of the total, $1,000 has been spent in the past year.

"It's satisfying work," said Mrs. Gilmore-Tilbrook, who has been chairman of the project since its start.

Much of the work has involved planting screens of trees and shrubs to "hide" the parking lots and emergency entrance. In addition 1,500 seedling pine trees were planted behind the hospital to grow to a height where they could be transplanted and used in the project.

Neat Trick Helps Freeze

Marking meats and baked goods for your freezer? To avoid confusion, label each parcel carefully-naming the contents of the package, the weight (if it's meat), the date it was frozen and its approximate storage life.

A porous point pen marks clearly and neatly. You could get completely organized with a color coded-red pen marks meats and poultry items, blue labels pies and cakes.

Black could designate breads and muffins and perhaps green porous point pens could be your home-packaged vegetables. It's a good way to freeze with ease.

Blend together finely chopped California prunes, orange marmalade and cream cheese. Spread on finger slices of warm gingerbread for a tea-time snack.

Land Splits Heirs

The fate of the land at 24th Street which is occupied by the deactivated Coast Guard Lifeboat Station remains undecided. At the moment the only certainty about the property is that the U. S. government is no longer interested in it.

Whether the property will be sold as surplus or will revert to heirs of former owners of the land, will be an unresolved question for the next couple of months. The Coast Guard Board of Survey, which is expected to declare the property in surplus, has about completed its work. Findings and recommendations will go to the Commandant in Washington, D. C. and then to General Services for disposal.

At this point no one has filed a claim for the property, although an interest in the land has been unofficially declared by the heirs of Edward Drinkwater. This interest has been generated by one of the deeds which granted the government of the property for use as a lifeboat station. The land may revert to heirs of the original owners now that it is no longer used as a lifeboat station.

There is controversy over some points of the Drinkwater interest. The deed of lease was made by C. B. Cason and W.

E. Wood. Edward Drinkwater later, acquired interest in their holdings. Drinkwater's acquisition has to be proven legally. Property lines and boundaries have changed since 1878, which is when the original deed was written. The location of the present land will have to be defined. A later deed, has also confused the issue more.

Should these points be cleared up the Drinkwater heirs may have a strong claim to some of the property. But not all of it.

Part of the land was deeded to the government by the Norfolk, Virginia Beach and Southern Railroad Company in 1899. If the heirs, or holders of their interests should come forth and claim their portion of the land, who knows?

Incidentally, the land deeded in 1899 was done so in order to move the lifesaving station off portions of Atlantic Avenue and 24th Street. Maybe a long-forgotten heir of someone, somewhere owns part of Atlantic Avenue.

Marine Pfc. Calvin L. Phillips of Rudder Road is serving with the Second Battalion, Fourth Marines, Third Marine Division in South Vietnam.

'Visit' Is 'Pleasant Fare'

The current Lake Wright playhouse offering, "Visit to a Small Planet", is a pleasant piece of froth, and a whole lot of fun. There are some outstanding individual performances in the production of Gore Vidal's expanded TV comedy also.

The play is an old one, which doesn't really transport too well to 1969, but if one can get in the mood for an unsophisticated story about flying saucers, supernatural spacemen and bumbling career Army officers, then it's all right.

Kreton, obsessed with his interest in the planet earth, comes from his planet, wherever that is, to land at Bull Run in 1861, but miscalculates and lands at Manassas in 1969 in the yard of a pompous TV commentator who doesn't believe in flying saucers.

Because he lands at the wrong time and can't observe the Civil War, he plans to start his own war and is almost successful. Nick De Carlo plays Kreton interestingly enough, but he often puts too much mischief of temper into a character who says he has no emotions at all. Also his poses oftentimes suggest a somewhat odd and effeminate visitor from space.

William Jon Camp does a magnificent job as the befuddled general whose problem the spaceman is. Walter Williamson also turns in another fine performance as the aging vain, opinionated bag of wind of a TV commentator.

Jane Garrison, as his wife presents a pleasant and sweet characterization of a housewife who doesn't hear a word anyone says to her but simply goes about her merry way.

Jan Ewing has a fine scene in which he seriously plays a radar unit and "Beeps" rather realistically. Otherwise he is the general's lecherous aide. One of the high moments of the play is the appearance of Terri Jones as Delton 4, Kreton's wife or girlfriend or something. She's quite a space gal.

Ken McClon is a rather restrained lover of the commentator's progressive daughter. But he is convincing in his farmer role.

Crickett Coan, overplays her effervescent sophomore in college role of the young girl caught between girlhood and womanhood, but it comes off all right except in the clinches. The love scenes look like they were directed that way and just didn't happen to happen. Director Timothy Jones has put together a fast-paced show that is pleasant fare. Unfortunately Jan Ewing's part realistic, part cartoon set is confusing and distracting. But the special spaceman effects are nice and the entire production is enjoyable. HJL Children at Windsor Woods Library view the African frogs.

Hungry Frogs Arrive First

You've all heard of the "Book of the Month Club" and the "Record of the Month Club", etc., but how about the "Animal of the Month Club"? Just ask Windsor Woods Library--they have a membership donated by the Plaza Golden Lions Club. The first arrivals are now on display--a pair of African frogs with very healthy appetites. They arrived by mail packed in a plastic bag encased in styrofoam.

Mrs. Doris Finnegan, Children's librarian for the city, said that they had expected a Siamese fighting fish first, and she had displayed posters and books accordingly. She had to make some last minute changes when she received a letter announcing that the frogs were on their way.

The frogs are small--about an inch long--and have webbed toes. They can only live out of water about five minutes.

Mrs. Finnegan lets them hop for her Story Hour group. The children are very enthusiastic about them she said. The children named the frogs Big Freddy and Little Freddy. "They get a big kick out of telling the others the frogs' names."

The frogs, as tiny as they are, are meat eaters. "I've been bringing chicken hearts from home for them," said Mrs. Finnegan.

The frogs are now housed in an aquarium supplied by another librarian. Their permanent home, along with the other animals, was to be a four-tiered plastic pouch with four separate zippered compartments for displaying all the animals at once. It has a hanger at the top so it can be hung from a wall for display. Unfortunately it had a leak, so until another is sent, the frogs will remain in the aquarium.

For company they have a pair of guppies. The guppies very generously supplied them with dessert. The female had babies. "Seventeen guppies were gone in 17 minutes," laughs Mrs. Finnegan.

Near the tank hangs a chart which shows the day by day feeding and cleaning schedule for each animal. Also provided is a book of information about the animals and their proper care.

New animals will arrive every other month. Next on the schedule is a Siamese fighting fish, then a pair of musk turtles, then a pair of eastern newts. The 22nd Street Library has already asked to borrow the display.

The Club is set up by Creative Playthings in Princeton, N.J. Mrs. Finnegan said that anyone wishing information about it may contact the Windsor Woods Library.

New Airport Venture Falls by Wayside

Another attempt at constructing a general aviation airport for Virginia Beach fell by the wayside Monday at City Council meeting. Council denied the application of C. H. Byler and Virginia Beach Aviation Sales Ltd. for rezoning of land near Larkspur on Holland Road and use permits for the airport and related aviation facilities. Byler's application had been recommended for denial by the City Planning Commission on the basis that it was improperly drawn. Byler does not own all of the land on which he had asked the rezoning, but he told Council he thought he had the permission of the owner, W. W. Reasor, to include that portion of the land. Reasor said he did not. Byler sought zoning changes that would allow not only for the Airport but also for commercial property and apartments and townhouses. The school

William Fruit, also representing the civic league, presented a petition with about 600 signatures of Larkspur residents also in opposition. The application was denied by a unanimous vote of Council. Apartment and townhouse projects ran into trouble with City Council also. Councilmen appeared somewhat skittish about approving the projects, especially in cases where letters from School Supt. E. E.

The new real estate appraisals were not on the agenda of City Council Monday, but the subject of assessments was brought up anyway by a former Commissioner of Revenue of the old city of Virginia Beach, William Phillips. His voice packed with emotion, Phillips told Council that the city is not receiving thousands of dollars in tax revenue because the present Commissioner of Revenue, Ivan Mapp, is not doing his job correctly. Phillips served as Mapp's deputy until 1967 when he was fired by Mapp. At that time Phillips ran against Mapp for the Commissioner's job and was defeated. Phillips informed Council of general instances in which he said Mapp was not doing his job in assessing certain personal property and read a letter he said he had sent to State Tax Commissioner C.H. Morrisette making the same charges. In the letter he said there are about 8,000 mobile homes not being taxed properly, and that large yachts are also not being taxed properly. Phillips said that some Councilmen are aware of the situation but have not done anything about it. No councilman contacted said he knew anything that was being done wrong. The charges were similar to those Phillips used against Mapp in the 1967 campaign. Mapp immediately denied the charges made by Phillips. "Anybody can make a statement like he made," said Mapp. "If he has any knowledge of anything being done wrong, I hope he'll come forward with specific information. I think he ought to tell the people." Mapp said his office had made all possible efforts to canvass marinas and search records of agencies concerning boats to find out about all the large and small boats in the city.

"If he (Phillips) knows of a boat that is not being assessed properly, it is his duty as a citizen to come forward with that information," said Mapp. "We have exhausted all avenues open to us, but certainly a mistake could be made." Mapp said if Phillips knows of anyone who isn't paying the proper tax, he should inform his office concerning that person immediately and steps would be taken. Mapp said he could not even guess where Phillips got a figure of 8,000 mobile homes, when actually there are about 1,800 in the city. He added that a questionnaire of all the mobile home owners is due in his office by May 1. He said all trailer park operators, except one had been most cooperative in notifying the city of their residents. He also said his men had traveled country roads looking for other trailers. Mapp called Phillips' charge that the city is losing $1 million a year because of improper assessments "ridiculous," and said he did not know where he was getting such information. When Phillips finished his presentation he walked up to City Treas. V.A. Etheridge and said, "How did it sound? Did it go over all right?" Attorney Richard Guy, a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the Virginia House of Delegates also appeared before Council Monday. He said a good many people were upset about the recent high reassessments. "Many farmers say it will be impossible to farm their land now," said Guy, "since it is assessed so high." He added that the 67 per cent real estate tax increase last year did not cause as much uproar as the new reappraisals. He then suggested that the matter be turned back to the Commissioner of Revenue's office and that state appraisers be brought in. (See "Taxes," p. 2)

City Council met Monday in its new chambers at City Hall.

Readers Split Vote On Terms

Readers of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN are almost split down the middle on last week's SUN SURVEY question, concerning the state chief executive's being allowed to seek a second consecutive term. But there is a slight edge among those who feel that he should be allowed to run again.

Of those who answered the question, "Should the governor of Virginia be allowed to succeed himself?", 56 per cent said "Yes" and 44 per cent said "No." One who added a comment to his "No," said, "One is enough for the best of them." Under the present Virginia Constitution the governor of Virginia cannot succeed himself, while the governor in a large number of states can do so under their respective state constitutions.

The Harrison Commission on Constitutional revision did not recommend any change in the Virginia policy, but several legislators have said they will try to make succession possible in the new constitution now being drawn by the special session of the Virginia General Assembly. At present, the prospects of passage of this amendment appear dim. While the public opinion survey does not profess to represent the thinking of all residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent the views of a cross section of those who took time to clip it and return it to us.

Your attention is called to this week's SUN SURVEY question also, which appears below in the box at the lower left corner of this page. Each week a new question will appear and the results will be published the following week. The questions will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more responsible the opinion.

QUESTION: Should efforts be made to cut the school budget by $250,000 (at the risk of reducing the quality of education in the city) in order to balance the new city budget and stave off another real estate tax increase?

board objected to more apartments in the area since a new school would be needed for the students that would be generated. The application ran into opposition from a number of other sources too. Adjacent property owners objected strongly to an airport in the residential area. City Manager Roger Scott said the city's new central communications center tower in Princess Anne Plaza would be less than a mile away. But the major opposition came from the Larkspur Civic League.

Lt. Cmdr. C. H. Kenney told Council that no airport experts were consulted on the project and read a long letter to Council that had been sent to the Federal Aviation Agency. The letter criticized the location because of military installations nearby, the proximity to densely populated areas, economic feasibility of a small runway airport and the future use of land around the proposed site.

Kenney suggested that the city already owns Creeds airport, an old military field, and that it should be considered for a general aviation airport.

Bid Includes Improvement

Reconstruction of Kings Grant Elementary School should begin soon with the building ready for occupancy in September after a bid of $700,800 was accepted by the School Board for the work.

The low bid was submitted by Robert R. Marquis, Inc. of Portsmouth. The base bid, which was for rebuilding the school just as it was originally, was $510,300. The higher bid was for the rearrangement of part of the floor plan and for the addition of air conditioning and a gymnasium.

The school was heavily damaged by fire on Dec. 17. Included in the bid was the demolition of the old building to the concrete slab. Only the cafeteria was salvageable because of structural damage to classrooms due to intense heat.

Brickell noted that new schools would be needed if the projects are built. In light of recent developments concerning bond issues, tax hikes and the like, many of the applications received deferrals for more study.

An application by Lincoln Enterprises, already deferred 60 days for 800 apartments at Diamond Springs Road and Shore Drive, was deferred for two weeks more while a discussion is held with school officials.

No representatives of the Diamond Springs-Gardenwood Park Civic League were on hand to oppose the apartments, but a long letter had been sent to some Councilmen and City Manager Scott criticizing Council concerning the project in general and generally berating city officials for the handling of money problems.

Deferred for 30 days was an application of Beach Associates for another 264 apartment units at Kellam Road and the Norfolk and Southern Railroad. Brickell said another school would be needed here too, so the matter, deferred for 60 days before, was again postponed to attempt to work out problems. Once before a use permit was approved for the apartments but it expired.

Five Saved, One Still Missing

A Fort Story soldier was reported missing from a LARC 15 Army amphibian vehicle which capsized in waters off Virginia Beach during a routine training exercise Tuesday night.

The missing man was identified as Spec. 4 Nicholas R. Camarillo, the son of the Raymond Camarillo's of Pacoima, Calif. Camarillo, 20, had returned from Vietnam last December and has been attached to the 438th Transportation Company at Fort Story since January.

Army officials said the accident occurred about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night during a logistic exercise over the shore. Witnesses at the scene said the LARC capsized in the Atlantic Ocean off 27th Street throwing four men overboard. Two men from another LARC taking part in the exercise were also thrown overboard.

Fort Story officials told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN five of the men were rescued from the ocean and taken to the Fort Story dispensary. Three of the soldiers were treated for minor injuries and exposure and released, and the other two were held over night for observation.

An immediate search for the missing man was launched with Army, Navy, and Coast Guard vessels and helicopters taking part. The search continued until mid-morning Wednesday when high waves and heavy seas forced a halt in the search operations. Men of the Virginia Beach police department conducted a search of the beach front south of Fort Story. At the time of halting search operations there was still no sign of the missing man, and although the capsized LARC was clearly visible from the shore, wind and sea conditions prevented attaching lines to the LARC to tow it to shore.

At press time the Army declined to release the identities of the five survivors of the accident indicating these men were still being questioned regarding circumstances which lead to the accident. Except to say all personnel involved in the accident were enlisted men, the only other details made public were that a thorough investigation into the mishap was still continuing and that the search of the ocean for the missing soldier would be resumed as soon as sea conditions permit.

These units were only a small portion of the equipment utilized in searching the Atlantic Wednesday for an Army man missing after an accident during a Fort Story logistic exercise.

Both Sides Continue Thoroughgood Hassle

The commercialization of the entrance to Thoroughgood saga continues without any break in sight.

The latest action last Friday when Thoroughgood residents, determined to have their day in court, won another round, at least temporarily. They had filed a petition for a temporary injunction against the Thoroughgood Corp. that would stop any building of stores at the entrance to the subdivision off Pleasure House Road in Bayside Borough.

But a continuance was granted to the corporation when the principals' attorney, John E. Clarkson, stated that the major stockholders had been called out of town by a death in the family. Circuit Court Judge George Vakos granted the continuance on the condition that construction not begin on a building there in the meantime. A building permit had already been issued on the 1 1/2-story Colonial style building similar to one already there, used as a real estate office.

Actually residents received more than they hoped in the delay. Many had conceded that the new building could not be stopped, but they hoped to stop the building of any additional commercial establishments and professional offices as planned in the complex by the Thoroughgood Corp.

The property has been zoned for commercial use since 1955, but many residents said they were under the impression the land would be left in a natural state or be used for more homes. Their request for help from City Council for rezoning was sent to the City Planning Commission and is scheduled for hearing in April with Council action in May. But in the meantime the corporation had filed for a building permit, which was issued. That in hand, nothing could stop them from beginning construction.

No matter what the outcome of the March 31 court hearing is, it is certain that the matter is not finished, and will not be for several months to come. The irate residents of Thoroughgood have shown City Council and the court they can turn out in large numbers to protest. And the developers have shown their interest in commercialization.

Public School Growth Keeps Pace with City

The key to the future of Virginia Beach schools is growth. "That's the largest determining factor in anything we do," said School Supt. E. E. Brickell. "It doesn't appear that it will be inhibited. We need more of everything—schools, teachers, buses, materials and books." That is shown in the school construction now under way in Virginia Beach and planned in the immediate future. There are three junior high schools (two to open by September and one in January) being built plus additions which are planned for Creeds (five rooms and improvements), Seaboard (10 rooms) and Trantwood (four rooms). Another new school will open in September too—Windsor Oaks, which is now occupied by Kings Grant students until their school is rebuilt.

Plans for the new junior high schools (Plaza, Bayside and Kempville) are quite a change in design and reflect the trend toward departmentalization. Connected units will house different subjects, thus cutting down noise and confusion.

The Plaza school goes one step farther and will have "kivas" or central meeting rooms for discussions surrounded by clusters of classrooms. It will also have the first planetarium in Virginia Beach.

In addition, Brickell added that another elementary school will be needed in 1970. "That's why we need an office of plant planning and development (A post to which J. W. Littleton was appointed last month) to get the jump on these needs. "Site acquisition is becoming a tremendous problem. Construction costs are going up one per cent a month. The labor market is somewhat depleted. All of these compound our building problems."

As the city grows, so do the number of apartment units. Many of these contain three or four bedrooms, obviously with children in mind and not just newlyweds and retirees. "Studies in Virginia Beach indicate that we have to take these apartment dwellings into account," said Brickell. "We're not trying to fight apartments. We just want to know when and where (they will be built) so we can plan properly for schools."

In 1963 a Norfolk newspaper printed an article about the future growth and development of all Tidewater school systems. For Virginia Beach in 1970 it predicted, "Enrollment will grow from 30,000 to 50,000 a 56 per cent increase. The school budget will double, rising from $7.5 million to $15 million."

Although the school population has doubled since 1961 (from 21,000 in 1961 to 42,000 now in 1969) it will be a few more years before it approaches

50,000. However, the school budget reached the $15 million mark in 1967-68 and totals almost $24 million for 1969-70. Not to be forgotten in the immediate future (hopefully) is the proposed vocational-technical high school. The only thing delaying its start is lack of federal funds. They have been appropriated but not released.

Local funds for the $2.6 million vo-tech school were included in the 1968 bond issue, but construction of the school, first scheduled to begin a year ago this month, will have to await the federal money. Even after it is built there is expected to be a delay in much of the machinery because of the Vietnam conflict.

The vo-tech school was originally to be built on a part of Green Run Farm, but test drillings indicated the land there was not stable enough to support the structure without a tremendous number of pilings plus land fill. It was later decided to build it on part of a 40-acre parcel of land on North Landing Road which was donated to the Virginia Beach School Board last month by Beach Interstate Associates.

Another facility which will open in September is the Virginia Beach Center for Effective Learning which will be located in what is now Union Kempville High School. According to Brickell the Center will be about 75 per cent in operation next fall, depending upon how its staffing progresses. A provision for its staffing was made in the new school budget.

The Center is described as "a comprehensive diagnostic facility." It is planned to sup-

Work goes on toward finishing Kempville Junior High by September. It is being built on Lobaugh Drive at Manor Drive in Bellamy Manor.

(See "Schools," p. 2)

Rehearsals are under way at the Courtyard Playhouse for the Virginia Beach Little Theatre's fourth production of the season, the Arthur Miller drama, "All My Sons." Showman Vi Ragan and Bob Furniss. Directed by Sam Hakim, the cast also includes Glenn Graham, Laura Rice, Phil Uhler, Floss Lawson, Jim English, Susanne Hume and Wirt Walker. Herbert Harrell has designed the set for the post World War II drama. The opening date is March 28, and the show will play Friday and Saturday nights for three weeks.

Five Face Charges

Five men are facing statutory burglary charges in connection with 17 commercial burglaries which occurred in Virginia Beach between December 1965 and December 1967.

Police Sgt. E.F. Buzby and Det. Michael Zello identified the men as Leroy Boone, 20, Bay-side Road; William Eugene Har-grow, 19, Pandora Ave.; Vincent Goings, 27, Frost Road; Tom Rickard, 21, Bayside Road; and Joseph Benny Griffin, 23, Asbury Ave., Norfolk.

Zello said Boone is facing 17 charges, Hargrow one charge, Goings, five charges, Rickard one charge, and Griffin four charges.

Sgt. Buzby and Det. Zello said warrants are also out-standing for another subject to be charged in the near future in connection with the case. Zello said his investigation began on Feb. 16 following the return of Boone to Virginia Beach from Brooklyn, N.Y. where he was apprehended by the FBI following his escape last Aug. 21 from the City Jail, while he was in custody awaiting the outcome of an appeal of his conviction of robbery and his sentencing to life imprisonment. Zello added that "through my investigation it was learned the 17 burglaries were perpetrated by these five and the other subject."

According to Zello four of the burglaries were committed on the night of Dec. 15, 1965 at the Robbins Corner Hardware Store, Robbins Corner Beauty Salon, Vick's Restaurant, and the Furniture Manufacturer's Showroom Store. Another break-in was reported on Feb. 15, 1967 at the Bayside Grill.

Buzby and Zello said the charges also involve break-ins at Bayside High School, Kempsville High School, Thalia Elementary School, Bayside Elementary School, Kempsville Meadows Elementary School, Shelton Park Elementary School, Alanton Elementary School, Hermitage Elementary School, First Colonial High School and Kellam High School. These break-ins were committed on various dates between Feb. 1966 and Dec. 1967, with Bayside High School broken into on three different occasions. According to Zello $900 was taken when a safe was broken into during one of the Bayside High break-ins, while the Kellam High burg-lary included an attempt to break into the school safe.

The burglaries resulted in the loss of an estimated $2,000 in cash, in addition to an assortment of television sets, tape recorders, cameras and trading stamps.

Zello said it is believed "a lot of the stolen stuff was sold, our investigation is continuing, and we are making every effort to recover the items."

Each of the suspects is scheduled for a preliminary hearing in Virginia Beach Municipal Court on March 28.

Airman I. C. Lloyd W. Christianson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd R. Christianson of Lavender Lane has been graduated from a U. S. Air Force technical school at Keesler AFB, Miss. He was trained as a radio repairman and has been assigned to a unit of the Air Force Communications Service at Fire Island Air Force Station, Alaska.

Application by F. Wayne McLeskey Jr. for a change of zoning and use permit to construct townhouses at the entrance of Chesapeake Colony was deferred for 30 days again by the Planning Commission Tuesday. This action was taken so that McLeskey and the opposing residents of Chesapeake Colony could work out a plan acceptable to everyone.

The land use plan study which was suggested in the February meeting of the Commission was presented and adopted Tuesday. It covered property located on the north side of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway, north to Shore Drive and from Broad Bay and Linkhorn Bay west to the eastern branch of the Lynnhaven River. Included in the plan were First Colonial Road and Great Neck Road.

Approved as in line with the study was an application of Murray Walitzer and Richard M. Walitzer for a change of zoning and use permit to construct 234 apartments and townhouses on the west side of First Colonial Road near the area of the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

An application that was not in line with the study, but was approved anyway, was an application by Executive West, Inc. for a change of zoning in the Regency Apartments area. The application was opposed by Planning Director Patrick L. Standing, who pointed out that the change was for a gasoline station and the area needed no more stations.

Terry Corporation received approval for an application for a use permit to construct 450 garden apartments in the Aragona Village area.

Also approved was an application by C. Roger Malbon for a change of zoning and use permit to construct 48 apartment units in the Burton Station area. These apartments will be medium income rentals.

The Commission denied an application made by B. B. Willis for a change of zoning on property located on the south side of Newtown Road in the Newsome Farm-Bettie F. Williams School area. The change of zoning was being asked to prepare the way for construction of 400 apartment units.

Approved, subject to Health Department and Highway Department specifications, was an application by Herdon Corporation for a use permit for 308 camping sites and related facilities on property located in the Lotus Gardens area.

The city received approval on their application for a change of zoning on property located in the new Industrial Park.

Land Use Plan Disregarded

This is the property purchased in December from the Pennsylvania Railroad. Also approved was the city's application for a change of zoning and use permit to operate an automobile graveyard for the storing and dismantling of automobiles on property in the Seaboard Elementary School area. The approval was made subject to city fence laws.

Storm Problems Are Few

The loss of electrical power in homes and business firms in widely scattered sections of the City of Virginia Beach apparently was the extent of damage or inconvenience from the storm Sunday afternoon.

Maurice Mintz, VEPCO's Virginia Beach district supervisor said, "Most of the trouble was caused by the icing of conductors". Power losses were reported for periods of about an hour in the Kings Grant area, as well as similar power failures in Kempsville Borough. However, in north Alanton, reports of power failures covered a six hour period. Mintz said crews worked for some ten hours in different sections of the city to restore power.

A total of 14 accidents were reported on thoroughfares of Virginia Beach, but there were no reports of serious injuries. While the accidents did involve several collisions, the majority of the mishaps resulted from vehicles skidding off roadways into ditches.

The storm apparently failed to affect telephone communications. Officials of both First Colony Telephone Co., and The C & P Telephone Co., said there was no significant damage from the storm and troubles were surprisingly light. There were several phones reported out of order, however none of this loss of service was attributed to the storm.

Schools

ort the education of every child in an individual manner who needs specialized assistance. The classes will include both educable and trainable retarded children, as well as children with speech and hearing handicaps and emotional problems. Gifted children (with I.Q.'s over 130) will also receive specialized enrichment classes.

The center will not be a school within itself as much as it will be a diagnostic and prescription center. A long range plan is to test and evaluate all six-year-old children before they begin first grade to uncover possible physical as well as learning disabilities.

Another purpose of the Center will be to test and evaluate education and psychological innovations in cooperation with Old Dominion College's School of Education.

Next week: A long range look at the school system.

Manager Will Name Assistant

A decision is expected by the end of March on the naming of a new assistant to City Manager Roger M. Scott, according to city sources. Since it was announced in January that the position would be filled, Scott has received more than 30 applications from several states.

The job was created last year as a second assistant to the City Manager, but was not filled at that time, although salary money was budgeted. Scott said he did not want to fill the job until it became absolutely necessary. He told Council in January that the time had come and that a search was underway for a suitable man.

Scott said the duties of his office could no longer be handled by just himself and his assistant David Norman. He said the new man will take over many of the routine matters that Norman has been handling, leaving him free for special projects Scott has in the works.

The new man will also handle citizen complaints and public relations for the City Manager's office, according to Scott.

Taxes

He was told that state appraisers made the last assessment and had caused some gross inequities.

Councilman Curtis Payne said that the reassessments had not been made to balance the new budget, as had been implied by critics. He said he agreed that several of the high appraisals may be wrong but that if the people were dissatisfied they should take the proper steps to get relief.

Following the initial appraisal last week when the new appraisals were sent out, several city officials jumped on the criticism bandwagon, including some City Councilmen. But Council met with City-Real Estate Tax Assessor W.H. Connell last Friday. After the private meeting Councilmen agreed that the reassessment had been done properly and in strict accord with the law.

While criticism appeared to be dying down generally and individual cases were being looked into, there was a report that another House of Delegates candidate, Rhae Adams, and Willard Ashburn were attempting to form an organized group to oppose the new appraisals. No mention of the group was made at the meeting, however.

Zoning

pired when the owner could not arrange financing.

Although Council was assured there were no immediate plans for building apartments, a change of zoning application by Holland Swamp Corp. at Shippo Corner Road and Holland Road was also deferred for 30 days because of the same school problems.

An application of Associated Properties, Inc. for rezoning and a use permit for 175 apartments at Birdneck Road near Old Virginia Beach Road was approved when Brickell's letter said it would serve only to bring the present school serving the area to full capacity.

The application of Green Run Corp. for 247 townhouses and apartments in its planned unit development at Birdneck Road was also approved. It was pointed out that school sites are available and that the concept of the entire plan had already been approved.

Two gas stations were finally approved on 21st and 22nd Streets at the end of the Virginia Beach - Norfolk Expressway. The matters had been pending for some months.

A convalescent and nursing home was approved near the General Hospital of Virginia Beach, but another home for the aged, on Diamond Springs Road and Bayside Road in a vacant motel, was deferred for two weeks until it could be determined if all health conditions could be met, and if other problems could be ironed out.

An application by Union Mission Children's Home was also deferred so that it could be determined how large a complex was planned at West Neck Road and North Landing Road. Spokesmen for the home said they now have five children, but would hope someday to house and care for about 100 children. School again entered Council deliberations.

The future land use for the Rudee Inlet - Croatan Beach area, to include duplexes, resort businesses and hotels and motels was passed without dissent.

The application of Burnell Ray Gallop for a zoning change that would allow him to continue to operate his repair garage for his charter bus service at Bonney's Corner was denied after sharp criticism of the Acredale Civic League, Gallop's attorney, L. Charles Burlage, disturbed that the denial would put his client out of business, said the business would have to be moved to another city.

"If we continue to have zoning by civic league instead of by the merits of the applications, we haven't seen anything yet as far as taxes are concerned in this city," said Burlage.

Candidates Ft. Story Gets New C.O. Keep Busy With Views

At least two of the four announced candidates for the Democratic nomination to the Virginia House of Delegates are keeping busy at the present time.

One, B. R. Middleton, is busy engaged in hearings on constitutional revision at the special session of the Virginia General Assembly in Richmond. Middleton, an incumbent, took an active part Monday in the controversial hearing concerning State Corporation Commission control over municipally owned utilities.

The other, Bruce Murphy, has fired off a letter to Middleton and Del. Kenneth Whitehurst, Jr., as well as to State Sen. Edward T. Cason III of Virginia Beach, William H. Hodges of Chesapeake and Willard J. Moody of Portsmouth, expressing his views on educational provisions in the new constitution being drawn.

Middleton said that the SCC now has "permissive legislation" under which it can control the operation of the municipally owned utilities. Several other legislators, including those from Norfolk, favor taking this provision out of the new state constitution. Virginia Beach, incidentally, buys water from Norfolk, which sets the rates considerably higher than for its own residents. Virginia Beach City Councilmen feel the SCC could possibly watch situations like this one more closely.

Murphy's letter recommended that the new Constitution provide for the establishment of free public kindergartens. The new document now calls only for free schooling of children of school age on elementary and secondary levels.

Murphy pointed out that he had talked with a number of persons who favor the free public kindergartens, and that psychologists and educators agree that the "early education of the child is the most important phase of his recommendation, which has also received widespread discussion and support in the legislature, but the cost of setting up the program could well be a deterrent.

Permits Lag Behind Last Year

Building permits issued in Virginia Beach in the first two months of 1969 are lagging about $1.3 behind the pace set a year ago in the same two months.

During 1968 the value of building permits almost set a new record, but fell short during the last 60 days and missed the old mark set in 1966 by less than $200,000.

In January of this year permits valued at $3,560,835 were issued by the Inspections Division. February 1969 was a little better. A total of $3,720,161 in building permits was issued for a two-month total of $7,280,996. Last year the total through February was $8,649,639.

In February, most of the total was for single family residences. There were 115 permits issued for a value of $3,117,237. No permits were issued during the month for apartments or townhouses, the first time in many months. The rest of the February total came from commercial structures, churches and additions to existing residential and commercial structures.

THE BEACH THIS WEEK

3 Charged in Attack

Three Norfolk youths are due in Virginia Beach Municipal Court on March 26 charged with the rape of a 17-year-old Booker T. Washington High School girl. Police identified the suspects as Anthony H. Nolan, 20, Pioneer Ave.; Elliott L. Fields, 19, Bickel St.; and a 17-year-old juvenile. Investigators quote the girl with saying she had just left a party on the night of Feb. 14 when the suspects picked her up in a car, then drove around eventually taking her to a deserted location at the end of Fenton Street in Virginia Beach where she was criminally assaulted by each of the suspects. The girl was then taken home, but waited until the next morning before telling her mother of the incident.

Woman Admits Perjury

A Norfolk woman is facing perjury charges in Virginia Beach as a result of her testimony during the trial last year of her juvenile brother charged with attempted rape. The 15-year-old boy was given sentences of life imprisonment on conviction of attempted rape and 20 years for the malicious wounding of the victim. Mrs. Joanne W. Manning of Marshall Avenue testified during the trial that her brother was with her during the time the attack occurred. She now says she perjured herself during the trial. The victim identified the juvenile as the assailant who on April 11, 1967 dragged her behind the Virginia Beach Gas Corp. on Cypress Avenue then beat and cut her, and attempted to rape and kill her. The woman fought off the attacker who fled when a motorist passed the scene.

Child Is 10th Fatality

A four-year-old boy has become the 10th traffic fatality of the year in the city. Police said Kurt H. McCord was fatally injured when struck by a car near the intersection of Virginia Beach Blvd. and Rosemont Road. Investigators said the boy was playing with a friend when he darted between two parked cars and ran into an auto being driven by Billy J. Keith of Malibu Palms Drive. The boy was rushed to Virginia Beach General Hospital and transferred to Norfolk General Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival from severe head injuries.

Becker to Enter Jail

Herman Frederick Wolfgang Becker is scheduled to enter Virginia Beach City Jail tomorrow morning to begin serving a 30 day jail sentence following his conviction of possessing gambling paraphernalia. Becker, 58, was arrested when police raided his Virginia Beach Blvd. home July 22, 1967. He was convicted in Municipal Court and was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $250. He appealed the conviction to Circuit Court and received a 30 day jail sentence and a $1,000 fine. Becker filed an appeal with the U. S. Supreme Court, which refused to hear the appeal thus resulting in his having to serve the 30 day sentence. Becker has also filed appeals with Virginia Beach Circuit Court of two other Municipal Court convictions of possessing gambling paraphernalia.

Arrested for Checks

Robert V. Hancock, special agent in charge of the Norfolk FBI Office, has announced the arrest Monday of Roland Reader Sellers at Baltimore, Md. Sellers was sought by the FBI for the alleged passing of numerous worthless checks at post and Navy exchanges on several military reservations in the Virginia Beach area.

Al Rothenberg, manager of Anderson and Strudwick, Investment Securities, lectures to a class at Kellam High School on "Securities and the New York Stock Exchange." This is the second year Anderson and Strudwick has sponsored similar lectures in schools throughout the area.

State Tries to Sooth City

State plans for leasing part of the proposed False Cape State Park to private businesses will still not add much money to the tax rolls of Virginia Beach.

Commissioner of Parks Ben Bolen said that present preliminary plans for the park, to be built from the southern end of the Back Bay Wildlife Refuge to the North Carolina Line on False Cape, calls for three or four motel, shop and restaurant complexes that would be leased to private enterprise.

The only revenue the city would gain from such businesses, however, would be from license taxes. The real estate tax could not be collected on state-owned land.

Bolen met with Mayor Frank Dusch and Asst. City Manager David Norman last week and apologized for the lack of communications between the state and city on the subject.

Virginia Beach City Council has gone on record by passage of resolution against the development of the 4,000 acre park, about one-quarter of which the state has already acquired land for.

The commissioner said he would like to discuss the entire matter with the full Council in a month or so when a preliminary master plan for the park is expected to be ready. Council objected to the use of the valuable ocean front land for this use partly because of the removal of such expensive tax land from city rolls, and also because it thought the park would only be for use of campers, as is Seashore State Park on the other end of Virginia Beach.

Bolen said, however, this would not be the case at False Cape, and that it would be open to all residents of the area included. He added that he is now working with the federal government negotiating for the right to build a road through the federal wildlife refuge from Sandbridge south to the state line.

All indications are that the road would be a limited access one, leading only into and through the state park, and would never be or become part of the long talked about Outer Banks Highway from Virginia Beach southward to Cape Hatteras. The creation of the park appears to have ended most prospects of that road ever being built, according to a number of official sources. Bolen added that he hoped the state and city could reach a peaceable agreement on the park, since it was the state's hope to help the city out with its recreational needs by the creation of the park within its borders, not to fight the City Council.

Whitehurst Dist. Chairman

Harold S. Whitehurst, Director of Virginia Beach Recreation, assumed the office of Chairman of the City, County and State Directors Conference of the Southern District of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, at the annual convention held in Memphis, Feb. 20-23.

Whitehurst will serve in this capacity though the next convention, scheduled for Columbia, S.C., in February of 1970.

E. L. Whitehurst, Sealer in the Dept. of Weights and Measures, explains some of the equipment used by the department to (left to right) Jan Berry, Jodie Tate and Nadine Shelley. The equipment was used in a display set up in Pembroke as part of National Weights and Measures Week.

Teachers to Hear Strom

Dr. Robert Strom, Professor of Education and Psychology at Ohio State University will speak to the Virginia Beach elementary teachers and staff on March 14 at Princess Anne High School.

Dr. Strom will speak from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. on "Parent-Teacher Conferences" and from 10:10 a.m. to 10:50 a.m. will preside at a School Faculty Group Discussion. From 11:00 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. there will be a question and answer period.

Boulevard Traffic Jam

Without benefit of fancy electronic equipment or human counters sitting by the side of the road, it is becoming evident that traffic on Virginia Beach Blvd., especially from London Bridge into Norfolk, is building up at an alarming rate.

At peak times of the day, traffic in both directions is often brought to a snail's pace on a road which used to be a killer. There were no deaths on it last year and even fewer major accidents. It has become a slow-moving city street, barely capable of meeting present needs.

The last time traffic on Virginia Beach Blvd. reached near this level, plans were begun for the expressway, which is now open and enjoying a growth of traffic in each ensuing month. Certainly this high-speed limited access road has made all the difference to the commuter and has relieved the boulevard situation temporarily.

Traffic safety officials in Virginia Beach have indicated they are about to ask for a comprehensive survey of the old bugaboo boulevard. City Council will probably have to be the first logical step in the seeking of a solution, but it would seem that the state and federal governments, supposedly so interested in pollution, traffic and urban problems, should be willing to help us out before all the cars are stopped one evening in a massive traffic jam.

By cutting the islands and feeder roads out, it is possible to have an 8 to 10 lane road there. Even keeping one-way feeder roads on each side, each with one lane, much space for new lanes can be picked up. There must also be other answers that the engineers can see better than we laymen. But it must be done now before we face a critical mess.

Tax Time Tension

The operating budget under which Virginia Beach will be governed beginning in July is in the hands of the printer. There are cigarette and utility tax increases included. And still possibly a relatively small real estate tax increase to balance the budget may be included.

The estimated $2 million from the reappraisal of property citywide is also figured in that budget, and all of that may not come in after city officials get through looking at all the individual cases that are fighting the new assessments.

Regardless of the lack of communication between departments while the new assessments were being made, and regardless of some of those seemingly extreme hikes in assessment, the reappraisals were lawful, and were in fact required by state law, if the city is to continue to receive certain funds. The city is already late in complying.

Furthermore there have been some who have slipped by for many years on a low assessment that is now catching up to them. In the last assessment, made by state officials, not city officials, a number of these inequities were created or perpetuated because the out-towners were not really familiar enough with the city.

We are satisfied that the Real Estate Assessor and his men have done a conscientious job, not meant to hurt any one or any group of people regardless of where they live or own property. The fact that some appraisals may be too high cannot be disputed. That is entirely possible. Some may also be too low for that matter.

Too often some glory-minded elected officials are too quick to jump into a fray. They did so in this matter, before discussing all the facts. Now if they'll just keep quiet, individual cases can be settled on their own merit. Others will just have to pay the price of growth and progress.

No Airport This Time

For some time we have advocated a general aviation airport for the city of Virginia Beach. We would support one as close as possible to the Beach Borough itself to help promote tourism as well as industry. The obvious problem is location.

Proximity to military air installations and a generally densely populated area serve only to complicate the matter. A number of city officials and civic-minded city officials have wrestled with this problem at length over the years and have come up with a big zero.

Even help of our elected officials on a state and national level has produced little more than sympathy for our problem. This is not to say we should give up. We should definitely continue and we should do it now while there is still some open land left.

The most recent effort to locate an airport near Larkspur was doomed almost from the start. The plan ran into trouble with the city, with adjacent landowners, with a large civic league and with countless others.

Another effort near the city hall complex at Princess Anne ran into trouble with the military after receiving widespread publicity. Still other efforts to use part of NAS Oceana as a general aviation private field has been met with horrified looks from the Navy in spite of this being done in other places.

What must be done now is proper planning by all responsible adults so that all these problems will not be met on the next proposed site.

A FIRM FOUNDATION

Parking Problem

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN:

The tourist season is almost upon us again, and we are going to be faced with that same old problem—parking. The situation has gotten so bad that the only way anyone can go to the beach and park his car (outside of renting a motel room so you can park in the motel lot) is to make the trip at 3 a.m.

Is there any solution? Can the city build some type of municipal lots? High-rise, underground, anything? One season would probably pay for its construction.

About the only other solution is to ban motor vehicles. This has advantages, of course, but it wouldn't be very well received.

The problem may cure itself—someday everyone is going to park, wedging in so closely that the cars can't be moved, and voila! No more problem. Nobody goes, nobody comes.

Special Report

It's Ticket Talking Time

The first ticket in the Democratic primary race is most likely formed, although the formal announcement was delayed for several days.

Del. Guy Farley of Fairfax, a youthful image member of the moderate-to-conservative Organization in the past, announced he would run for Attorney General, becoming the third announced candidate for that office.

Del. Bernard Levin of Norfolk and Andrew Miller of Abington say they are running as independents.

As soon as the Farley announcement was made, ticket talk began coming up. Farley wouldn't say anything except that Lt. Gov. Fred Pollard was a fine fellow and Pollard would only say Farley was a fine fellow and that he would make a good running mate.

Political buffs, however, felt certain that when tickets are formed, Pollard and Farley would be on the same one.

But who would fill the No. 2 spot on the ticket? There is only one announced candidate so far, State Sen. Sargent Reynolds of Richmond says he is definitely an independent. The name mentioned most prominently was that of Sen. Edward Breeden of Norfolk, who shyly admitted he had been thinking about running and would say something in a few days.

Breeden, long associated with the dominant Organization but with a moderate leaning, is considered a strong candidate for Pollard and Farley to have around, and one who would help balance the ticket geographically.

But Del. French Slaughter of Culpeper and others have also been mentioned rather prominently for the same spot, so the entire matter is still up in the air. But the formation of a solid ticket at this point looks like a good idea to most observers.

Smokescreens have been appearing from the State Capitol Building where the legislators are meeting to adopt a new revised constitution. Fearful of a party split that could elect a Republican to the statehouse, renewed efforts have been made to find a "consensus" candidate of the Democrats.

Without even considering the chances of State Sen. Henry Howell of Norfolk, secret meetings have been held among members of both Houses of the Assembly to determine if Pollard or William Battle is "the man" for 1969.

Although the Battle people are understandably not putting a great deal of faith in the results, word has been leaked out that Pollard has a nod as the man who can beat Linwood Holton easier.

Of course this all means very little, since the voters have the final say in the July primary anyway. All chance of having either Battle or Pollard drop out of the race in favor of the other appears impossible, although there is still the rumor it is still being tried.

It is doubtful this will happen, and the resulting campaign in the next 90 days could prove to be a low-key one aimed at keeping as much harmony as possible in the party so that the chances in the general election in November will not be shattered.

The heated discussions in the hearing rooms of the Capitol regarding state constitutional revisions have dulled the campaign somewhat so far, and with the prospect that the session will last 30 days or more and be full of peppy fight, it would appear that the campaign for the gubernatorial nomination will have to wait its turn.

Possibly by that time tickets, or at least one, will be firmly formed, and the general public can begin listening to some talk about the men and issues themselves, instead of all the political shenanigans that have been going on in the background so far.

Messrs. Holton, Dawbarn and Obenshain have a ticket already formed on the GOP side, and they're just waiting for the Democrats to drop the ball.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"You throw that plant in the garbage, and I'll never speak to you again."

"But don't you think it looks pretty silly sitting there in that great big pot?" he asked. "One long green stalk in the middle of a lot of rich dirt that I paid a fortune for."

"That long green stalk is a rubber tree plant that I have loved and nursed for a long time, and I will not see it tossed away like so much garbage," she said.

"Please don't tell anyone else it's a rubber tree plant, I know it and you know it, but no one else will ever believe it," he said, "If you insist on keeping it, call it a rare Tahitian dwarf coconut tree or something...but not a rubber tree plant. They have leaves."

"Can I help it if all the leaves turned brown, shriveled up and fell off one by one?" she asked. "Everytime a new one would come in I'd be so excited. Then it curled up and died too."

"Well the last one is gone now," he said. "And as much sympathy as I have for your rubber tree plant, it still looks stupid. Tell you what! Buy a plastic rubber tree plant and put it in there."

"With my luck the plastic leaves will curl up and fall off too," she said with a sniff.

"Now while we're on the subject...about those four small potted plants that are taking over the kitchen," he said. "When do they get removed from above the cafe curtains?"

"As soon as it's warm outside, I'll transplant them and watch them die like everything else I've ever planted," she said.

"Well, that's a relief. Then I won't have to worry about their winding their vines in the curtain loops and attacking the children," he said. "But don't berate your planting abilities so. You've gotten things to grow."

"Name one," she said.

"Let's see, now," he said. "Yeah, I remember. You made that moss grow on the lump of coal you rescued from the furnace when we lived in Richmond."

"Oh, fine," she said. "Name another."

"How about the carrots and sweet potatoes you put in water in those glasses?" he asked. "They sprouted something green."

"But how about the dogwood trees, the roses and the flowers I've planted in the yard?" she asked simply.

"They either died or never came up," he admitted. "Are you sure you're doing everything right?"

"Perfectly," she said. "I just have a black thumb. Other people break off a piece of bush, put it in the ground and it grows. I tried it and the bush I broke it off died."

"I think you're exaggerating," he said. "Don't worry about it. The only one I know with a green thumb is the jolly green giant. But I have to admit you haven't been too successful in your horticultural attempts. Have you considered taking up knitting?"

"You haven't been overly successful either with this yard," she pointed out. "I know how much grass you've planted and how much money you've spent trying to get grass to grow. And look at it. Even the bare spots have bare spots."

"Let's move into an apartment," he said. "And forget the whole thing."

"Then can I have a new rubber tree plant?" she wanted to know.

"No," he said. "We'll both take up knitting."

THE GREAT AMERICAN DREAM
by L. Charles Burlage

America is a republic; in which power resides in the hands of elected representatives, who, if they abuse this power, or displease the citizens, can be recalled by the same people who gave them the power originally.

The preamble to the constitution reads as follows: "We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

One of the objectives stated in the preamble was to "establish justice" for all citizens. Justice, of course, is a difficult word to define, so difficult, that Funk and Wagnall's dictionary uses a half page to define it and still leaves the reader quite confused.

Our government was divided into the legislative, judicial and executive branches. The aim of our founding fathers was to set limits on the power which the government could exercise over its citizens. The judiciary was foreseen as being necessary by our founding fathers because, in their wisdom, they realized that the elected representatives, reflecting the prevailing public opinion as they would, could impose a "tyranny of the majority" on minority groups.

After all, a majority could decide that all people with blue eyes; or all people with no hair; or all people with dark skin could not sit in the front of a bus; or hold only menial jobs; or couldn't eat in a restaurant; or couldn't go to those schools where children with dark skin attended; and, if the elected representatives disagreed, then the majority of the voters would only elect those representatives who agreed with this viewpoint.

Our constitution, however, sought to "establish justice" for all citizens. Hence, in Brown vs. The Board of Education, for example, the Supreme Court held that the "separate but equal" doctrine was in fact unequal and did not secure "justice" for a substantial minority of the citizens of this nation.

By this historic decision, the Supreme Court, in effect, "legislated" a new rule of law, that probably would have been at least another generation in arriving via the legislative process. In this manner, the judicial branch of government thus becomes the only protection unpopular positions of minority groups have against the "tyranny of the majority."

The executive branch of the government has also seen fit to write into government contracts certain guarantees of fair employment practices as a condition to obtaining government contracts. Thus, the executive branch of government tends to establish justice for all as promised in the preamble to the constitution. Pure representative democracy without the checks and balances of the judicial system and the executive branch would be unwieldy, since the majority has shown historically that they will not always treat the minorities in a just manner.

American society today is in a state of change and readjustment unparalleled in our history, with the possible exception of that period immediately following the Civil War. Continuous change is foreseeable for the future, caused largely by the many cultures represented in our nation. It is a tribute to our system that the vast changes of the past 25 years occurred, for the most part, in a peaceful and orderly manner; in any event, they occurred without a revolution.

Numbers Game Is Confusing

If you reside in the Beach Borough there is a very good possibility you're living at the wrong address.

Then again, if your home is located in that portion of the city which used to be Princess Anne County, there is also a very good possibility someone else is also living at your address in that section referred to as the old city of Virginia Beach. A spokesman for the Virginia Beach Planning Commission, who requested his name be withheld, said, "Houses in the entire Beach Borough are numbered wrong."

The problem centers around the issuing of house numbers in a manner exactly opposite to the accepted and approved system. This is particularly true of addresses on streets running north and south, such as on Pacific Avenue.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN was told numbers are assigned, on streets running north and south, on a numerical plan of even on the east side of the street and odd on the west side of the street. With the exception of the 2300 block of Pacific Avenue numbers on that street have been assigned opposite to the plan. This fact is supported by the house now located at 2305 Pacific Ave., which is situated on the west side of the street. However, during the Feb. 10 City Council meeting a request was made to have the building moved from its present location to a site on Dam Neck Road. The date of this move has not as yet been determined, but that will end this problem.

The accepted addressing plan also calls for the numbering of residences on east-west streets on a plan of odd numbers on the north side of the street and even on the south side. However, there are two exceptions to this rule. Because of their location within the grid system used in mapping the city, addresses on Virginia Beach Blvd. and Laskin Road are assigned opposite to the accepted plan.

How did this inaccurate numbering of houses begin? It appears that a civic league, during the early 1940's, took on a project of assigning house numbers in the Beach Borough, and was unaware of the system usually accepted for designating addresses.

The Planning Commission spokesman still had praise for the civic league for doing it at all, even wrong. While the responsibility of assigning addresses lies with the Planning Commission, any changes of existing addresses must first be authorized by City Council. The SUN's source said "I'd like to see it changed, but we haven't had authorization from the City Council as yet."

Now then, about the question of two identical addresses in different sections of the city. The Planning Commission shortly after the 1963 merger of the old City of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County, began renaming of streets bearing duplicate names. This is a continuing process and indications are the program should be completed in the near future.

Before you become overly concerned about incidental matters, such as receiving your mail, because of the house addresses and street names rest assured you have no reason for concern. Claude "Shorty" Edwards, superintendent of the Seapines P.O. Substation, which services the Beach Borough, told the SUN that as long as a building is situated on a named street, and the building bears a number and contains a receptacle for mail postal deliveries will be made - even if the house is on the wrong side of the street.

This house, at 2305 Pacific Ave., may be the only one on the street which is numbered correctly.

Response Termed 'Marvelous'

Seventeen applications were made to the City Welfare Department for the Federal Food Stamp Program last week. In addition more than 50 phone calls have been made to the department inquiring about the program.

According to Mrs. Jack Dowdy, social worker who is in charge of the program, there has been "a marvelous response". She gave a talk to Seaboard community March 13 to more than 50 people about the program.

At the present Mrs. Dowdy is interviewing all of the applicants, but the department will get someone to help her as soon as the work load reaches the point that one person cannot handle it.

There have been no big hitches in processing the applications so far. However, Mrs. Dowdy says that it would facilitate processing if applicants would call her first at 427-4451.

That would enable Mrs. Dowdy to brief the applicants on what they need to complete their applications.

Those who are approved for participation in the program may begin purchasing stamps by April 1. The stamps may be purchased at the following banks: United Virginia Bank formerly (Seaboard Citizens), Indian River Road and Military Highway; First and Merchants, Princess Anne Courthouse and 31st Street at Pacific Avenue; Southern Bank of Norfolk, Kempsville; Virginia National Bank, Princess Anne Plaza and Bay-side on Pleasure House Road; First Colonial, Independence Blvd.; Peoples Bank, Laskin Road at Hilltop; and First National, Virginia Beach Blvd. at Pembroke.

Stamps may be purchased at the banks during regular working hours. They may not be purchased on Friday afternoons or Saturdays. Nor can they be purchased at drive-in windows.

The aim of the program, which is federally financed, is to raise the nutritional intake of a family rather than to supplement the family's financial income. Families participating in the program purchase the stamps with the amount of money they usually spend for food and then they use the stamps to purchase their food. The value of the stamps is greater than the amount of money paid for them. The exchange rate of the family depends upon the family's individual need.

The difference between the value of the stamps and what the family pays for them is financed by federal funds.

Restrictions placed upon participants in the program are that the stamps have to be used for food and that food has to be grown in the U. S., with the exception of coffee, cocoa and bananas.

A large red, white and blue sign will be displayed by grocery stores participating in the program.

Battle Names Va. Team

William C. Battle, a Democratic candidate for governor, has named five men to key statewide leadership positions on his campaign team, including one from Virginia Beach.

Jack P. Barnes, mayor of Portsmouth, was named coordinator for urban areas. J. Stanley Livesay, Jr., a lawyer, also from Portsmouth, was named coordinator for professional groups.

Howard E. Gray of Virginia Beach was named chairman of the contributions committee with Alton H. Smith, Jr. of Winchester and Frank F. Everest, Jr. of Alexandria as vice chairmen. The contributions committee will coordinate the fund-raising activities of the state finance committee, which is expected to be announced in the near future.

Gray is vice president of an insurance adjusting firm and vice president of the Virginia Tech Student Aid Association. He has been active in Virginia Beach Democratic politics.

Narcotics Raids Net 8

Eight men were arrested for violation of narcotics laws and a quantity of various drugs recovered by police in two raids on residences in the Virginia Beach Borough last weekend. Officials said the first raid about 10 p.m. Friday night at a 25th Street apartment resulted in the charging of four men with illegal possession of marijuana.

The accused were identified as Howard Lynn Everman, 22, West Covina, Calif.; Roman Alexander Karagula, 23, Philadelphia, Pa.; Richard A. Miles, 23, Spokane, Wash.; and R.B. Teague, Jr., 20, Princeton, Ky. Investigators said each of the men had marijuana in his possession when police entered the apartment. Four nickel bags of marijuana (worth $20) and a quantity of hashish, a concentrated form of marijuana, were reportedly found in the apartment.

A 16-year-old girl, also reportedly in the apartment at the time of the raid, was not charged in connection with the raid and was released to the custody of her parents.

Interviewer

To Question Households

During the week of March 17-22, Mrs. Audrey L. Hayden, U.S. Census Bureau interviewer, will visit households in this area.

The March survey contains inquiries on the number of persons in families and in households, employment and unemployment and annual income from various sources. Information will also be obtained on the number of persons who moved during the last year. Answers to survey questions update information obtained by the Bureau at the time of the decennial census.

The monthly surveys are taken in scientifically selected samples of the U. S. population, and the same questions will be asked of all sample households.

The identity of households to be questioned is kept confidential.

The second raid, about 2 a.m. Saturday morning at a South Atlantic Avenue house, resulted in discovery of a quantity of hashish and capsules containing a drug identified as davoron.

Four Navy men attached to Fighter Squadron 103 at Oceana NAS were charged with illegal possession of hashish. The suspects were identified as Norman Wayne Courtney, 21, Shreveport, La.; William Bayard Dupont, Jr., 23, Johnston, Pa.; Richard Hadley Fails, 23, and South Hadley Fails, 23, Mass.; and Richard Nathan Wahrenbrock, 21, Glendale, Calif. Investigators said they also charged Holgate with possession of the dangerous drug, "davoron".

According to investigators several pipes believed used in the smoking of narcotics, along with a quantity of marijuana seeds and stems, were also found in the house. A Feb. 14 raid on the same house resulted in charging 14 persons with disorderly charges.

All eight of the men had a preliminary hearing Monday in Virginia Beach Municipal Court and were granted continuations in their court proceedings.

Pollution Symposium Scheduled

The Hampton Roads Section of the American Chemical Society, in cooperation with Old Dominion College, will sponsor a symposium on pollution March 22. The symposium will be held at Kaufman Auditorium at ODC.

A registration fee of $4 is required for the symposium; this will include luncheon and abstracts of the meeting. Student fee is $5.50.

Topics to be discussed are: Air Pollution, Water Pollution, Water Disposal, The Role of the Chemical Industry and The Air Quality Act of 1967 and Criteria.

Further information may be obtained by contacting A. G. Petropoulos or Dr. T. A. Gosink at 627-2931, Ext. 421.

File Early Director Suggests

In a special plea to Virginia taxpayers, today, IRS District Director James P. Boyle asked taxpayers expecting refund on their 1968 tax returns to file them before April 4.

Boyle explained that processing work in the Service Center is now at the lowest ebb in the filing period.

Refunds on correctly prepared returns filed now will be issued within five weeks. Refund returns filed later may become intermingled with the traditional last minute avalanche of returns and processing might be unavoidably delayed.

He emphasized that experience has shown that taxpayers who prepare their returns under pressure of the April 15 deadline are most prone to make omissions or errors on their returns. Errors further delay receipt of refunds.

Director Boyle closed by asking that all refund tax returns be mailed as soon as possible to the IRS Service Center, Philadelphia, Pa. 19155. As he explained, "It's not too late to file early!"

Wesleyan Receives Grant

Virginia Wesleyan College has received a $1,000 grant from the Association of College and Research Libraries.

The funds will be used to purchase back issues of periodicals on microfilm, according to E. Samuel Clay III, librarian at Virginia Wesleyan.

The Association of College and Research Libraries is a division of the American Library Association.

Virginia Wesleyan's new $1,700,000 library is now under construction and is scheduled for completion in September 1969. The building will have a long-range capacity for 210,000 volumes.

Contributions to the ACLRL grants program come from major businesses and foundations. A total of 76 grants were made this year.

6,000 to Train in Area

Almost 6,000 Army Reservists and National Guardsmen will train on two weeks active duty in Tidewater-Virginia this year at Ft. Eustis and Ft. Story.

They will come from such distant points as Florida, Maine and California. All of the units have special missions concerned with a phase of military transportation. Many return to the two installations each year for active duty to use the Army's transportation training facilities, such as the railroad or port area at Ft. Eustis or the amphibious center at Ft. Story.

According to Maj. Martin A. Principe, chief of the Reserve Components Division of the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Operations and Training, this year's training period has been extended.

"Every unit is required to be on active duty for 15 days, one more day than the 14 days required in previous years," the major said.

There will be 51 Army Reserve units and only one National Guard company in training at Ft. Eustis and Ft. Story this summer.

Most of the units--41--will train at Ft. Eustis with 11 units, all with special missions associated with Army amphibious vehicles, at Ft. Story.

S. Sgt. Edmund C. Weeks, brother of Celus F. Weeks of S. Lowther Drive is a member of a unit that has earned the U. S. Air Force Outstanding Unit Award. Sgt. Weeks is an air passenger specialist in the 437th Military Airlift Wing at Charleston AFB, S. C.

Salads Are No Mystery

The secret's out—there's no mystery to serving salads that are fresh and crisp. A few simple rules followed by a wise cook results in a delectable salad.

According to Betty Brownell, home economist for the National Association of Food Chains, salad expertise begins with buyanship. She advises home cooks to select a variety of greens if a tossed salad is in the offing. The produce department boasts leaf lettuce as well as Bibb, the aristocrat of the lettuce clan. Head lettuce, torn or broken rather than cut, Romaine and spinach (yes, raw spinach) add flavor as well as eye appeal to the otherwise humdrum salad.

Those who like carrots, radishes and celery in their salads might remember that tomatoes are better sliced atop the salad or served alongside. If they're tossed in, their moisture tends to make for a watery salad.

Betty Brownell suggests washing the greenery, wrapping it loosely in a linen towel or plastic bag and storing it in the refrigerator. The French toss their greens in a basket to be sure all moisture is off. If you don't have a metal salad basket (it makes a lovely gift for a salad lover), pat the greens dry.

The rules for salad dressing are to toss the dressing with the greens at the very last moment and to use it sparingly. Nothing's worse than a watery salad.

Showing Linda Dell how to bowl is Carl Merritt, assistant manager of Plaza Bowl.

Meals Are Topic For H.D. Club

"Is Your Grocery Bill Too High?" was the topic of the February meeting of the London Bridge Home Demonstration Club.

Club members were urged to attend the meeting of District 1, Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs on April 29. A donation was sent to the Hallie Hughes Scholarship Fund.

HERE COMES OLGA!

Friday night was fun time for the club, Chess "21", at the Plaza Bowling alley.

For those who have never heard about this club, it is a club for single people who have to be 21 years of age to join. The club was started here in Tidewater by three young men a year ago this month. You have to submit an application to become a member and this is passed on by their board of directors and officers of the club. During their first year they have been on two trips to the Homestead for skiing. They are now looking forward to a week-end trip to Nags Head.

Friday was a real night of fun for them all. They seem really to enjoy being with one another just having real clean fun. Most of these young people appear to be from 22 to 28 years old. I might also say they are every one ladies and gentlemen. Never did I once see any of them out of place in their behavior.

The crowd had several alleys and they were divided so many to each alley of both boys and

Those who attended Friday night were: Gordon Sciline, Linda Bowden, Chuck Hall, Jim Riley, Happy Chalmers, Pat Mahoney, Vicky Leonard, Dennis Sawyer, Bob Newton, Pat Daugherty, Daniel McCoughlin, Jeff Olson, Buddy Warner, Herb Burton, Ralph Tinkham, Andy Madzcek, Mareleen Nuberg, Sandy Twines, Karen Wheeler, Jim Ford, Brenda Riley, Richard Johnson, Levin Whitehurst, Joanne Willis, Al Stockdale, George Wright, Reba Kern, Anne Ashburne, Warren Conklin, Doug Braun, Jim Hill, Doug Barrett, Jim Marasco, Maria Nhehles, Dana Blythe, Bob Walker, Nick Storabomell, Dave Chapman, Carol Hicks, Doris Mulkeren, Connie Worrell, Patty Cohan, Linda Dowdy, Richard Lousel and Brenda Perry.

Most of the girls were dressed in walking shorts, slacks, blouses or sweaters. The men, as a whole, were dressed in slacks pants and sport t-shirts.

At the time I left the crowd I noticed the score boards and Jim Hill was leading.

While sitting at the bowling alley the thought crossed my mind that it would be so nice to have clubs for teenagers so that they could have fun. Maybe if this could ever be it might stop a lot of these kids from getting into trouble. Which brings us back to the saying of "An idle mind is the Devil's workshop."

This weekend I will no doubt be where the wearing of the green will be seen.

Stop Stalling on Gardening

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Judkins, Extension horticulturist at Virginia Tech.)

It's March already. Summer will soon be here. Let's quit stalling and really get started with our gardening activities. A good place to begin is to prune your shrubs. Get them in shape for vigorous, attractive growth.

Evergreen or deciduous shrubs, which are grown primarily for their foliage, should be pruned now. The operation is quite simple. First remove any dead, broken, diseased or insect damaged branches. Then thin out the branches and head back the bushes to maintain a suitable size and form for its location.

Shrubs which develop numerous stems are pruned by a continuous renewal process. Several of the older stems should be removed each year. The top part of the remaining branches should be thinned out and headed back. This process will allow light to reach the young shoots which develop from the crown of the plant. As these stems mature, they will form the attractive part of the shrub and will in turn grow old and be removed.

Shrubs which have a somewhat dense type of growth with only one, or a limited number of main stems, are pruned by thinning out and heading back the side branches. Remove a few branches each year to thin out the top of the plant and allow light to penetrate. Cut back long branches to maintain an informal natural shape and a size which is suitable for the location.

Box shrubs should be pruned by thinning out the top half of the plant and cutting back the branches to retain the desired height. The thinning operation will allow light to penetrate into the bush and promote leaf development. This results in a natural, informal type growth with good green color extending to the center of the shrub.

In certain locations, and in hedges, you may prefer to shear your box into a smooth, rounded form. This is appropriate in a formal landscape setting but will result in a rather thin layer of leaves on the outside of the plant.

The low and horizontal type junipers should be pruned primarily from the top. Branches which extend upward should be cut back. Allow the lateral branches to develop into points around the plant to give a graceful spreading form. Very little lateral pruning should be done unless the long branches cause the shrub to become too large for its location.

Narrowleaf evergreen shrubs such as arbutus, camellia, parrot, erect junipers and yew typically develop numerous branches. They can withstand relatively heavy pruning. Thin out the shrub by removing some of the older branches and head back as needed to retain the desired size and form.

Azalea, camellia, laurel and rhododendron grow quite slowly and need very little pruning. The flower clusters should be removed at the end of the blooming season. Long stems which extend beyond the desired size and shape of the plant may be cut back to a strong lateral branch.

Shrubs that bloom in the spring or early summer, from buds that developed on shoots last fall, should be pruned at the end of their blooming season. These early flowering shrubs include Red Bud, Japanese Quince, Forsythia, early white Spirea and Lilac. Don't prune them now. You may cut a few stems off to use as arrangements in the home. Wait until you have enjoyed them during their flowering period and then prune them by thinning out and heading back.

In this area of the state, we see gardenias growing in many landscapes. Some are old plants with sparse foliage, while others are newly planted young materials.

The usual cultural practices following transplanting will favor the development of the plant. Pruning the branches following the transplanting process will encourage the formation of flowering shoots, and watering the plants thoroughly to keep the soil moist will help to insure the survival of the plant.

Under favorable conditions, a few flower buds can be expected the second season. The plants are in their prime during their third, fourth and fifth seasons.

When they become older, gardenias tend to produce small buds with little foliage. Careful pruning to shorten the older wood, and fertilizing to induce moderately robust growth make it possible to lengthen their productive life for several years.

One of the most curious customs associated with bread was that of "sin-eating," common in the counties adjoining Wales. At a funeral the village "sin-eater" would charge a small fee to eat a loaf of bread, in doing this he was supposed to take the sins of the dead person upon himself.

Easy Snacks Make Fun Of Nibbling

American hostesses have learned their three "party-P's" well—they can always be counted upon to serve up bowls of peanuts, pretzels and potato chips, with a good assortment of dips.

The reason so many people serve them is that so many nibblers love them. The potato chip, for instance, isn't called the Great American Snack for nothing!

However pleasant it is to merely offer "as is" yummys, it's even more fun to add a dash of creativity in the nibbles department. The rule of thumb for making hors d'oeuvres is: Make as many as you think are necessary—and then double the amount! If they're especially appetizing, guests always eat more than anticipated, and they'll disappear from the plate before you can say "Seconds, anyone?"

An easy and interesting appetizer is French Fried Shrimp. The shrimps come all clean and packaged from the frozen food case; all you do is coat them with egg-and-flour batter, roll them in finely crushed potato chips and fry in deep hot fat until golden brown.

An even simpler nibble is Snappy Ham and Egg Balls where a tasty mixture of ground cheddar cheese, ham, hard-boiled eggs and mustard is made into little balls and rolled in potato chips, and then served up as is—although, of course, they can also be fried if desired.

Chip and Cheese Wafers are an unusual baked nibble. A blend of sharp cheese, butter, mustard, flour and crushed potato chips, this mixture has a dough-like consistency that bakes up into delicious little wafers when placed on a cookie sheet for about 10 minutes in a 375 degree oven.

All these recipe ideas use potato chips in one way or another—proving again how versatile this crispy delight can be. Everyone can still serve up chips as usual, but the lady who wants to make nibble time even more enjoyable can gather added credit by turning her chips in to something else.

Alumnae Club Meets Tonight

The Alumnae Club of Kappa Alpha Theta will meet at 8 p.m., March 13 at the home of Mrs. M. G. Marlay Jr. at 4312 country Club Circle.

Sage, in Past, Was Home Remedy

Sage has always been highly esteemed in American cooking, not only when stuffing that all-American bird, the turkey, but early cookbooks show that it was used in sausages, stews, sauces and cheese dishes.

Says plant historian Hedrick in discussing Colonial gardens, "Of all kitchen herbs, sage was most commonly grown . . . Sage not only was supposed to flavor foods that might quickly go beyond their prime, and to whet the appetite, but was also considered a sovereign remedy, used as a tea, for a number of maladies . . ." There is a tradition that dried sage was taken to health-conscious China in American ships and exchanged pound for pound for tea.

Sage is the every-day word for the botanical name, "Salvia officinalis," which may be freely translated as health medicine. At the earliest of all medical schools, in Salerno, Italy, the question was "How can a man die who grows sage in his garden?" An old English jingle has it, "He that would live for aye Must eat sage in May."

If sage growing is conducive to good health, the people of Yugoslavia and Albania have the rosier cheeks, for they sent us most of the 2,190,861 pounds of sage imported last year.

In this convenience-minded age, we buy our sage either whole, or ground (often called "rubbed"). Ground sage blends easily with foods. For instance, sage is added to the yeast mixture along with the egg and cheese when making this excellent Sage Cheese Bread recommended by home economists of the American Spice Trade Association. In the Turkey Noodle Casserole, the sage is heated briefly with the sauce.

Whether you use a convenient hot roll mix or "start from scratch" with your favorite bread recipe, add grated cheese and ground sage for distinctive flavor.

Watch Cox, P.A. Next Year

Next year's Eastern District basketball race looks like a carbon copy of this one. Most of the starters on the four top finishing teams this year will be back next year, another year older, more experienced and maybe even taller.

Maury, which won the District crown and got knocked off in the Eastern Regional championship game last week-end by Hampton, will have four of its five fast starters back next year. There were only three seniors on this year's squad.

Among those who will be back to frighten cagers throughout the area is Craig Lelder, district top scorer, who has already scored 1,121 points in two seasons and could be on the verge of breaking the school scoring record set by Gary Laws at 1,295.

Booker T., eliminated this year by Maury in the district championship game, also will be back with the big guns, including 6-8 Roy Ebron and 6-4 Curtis Cole, who frustrated a number of people under the baskets this season.

The season looks bright for Virginia Beach schools too, but only for the same schools that looked bright this year. Next to Maury, Cox probably has the best chance of whipping everybody in sight. The Falcons will have four of their five starters back, including Keith Sudduth, who consistently scored high in every game of the 1968-69 season. Sudduth averaged over 20 points per game. The Cox team is a precision team and should give a fine show next year with this winning year of experience under its belt.

The Princess Anne Cavaliers will have high scorer Ricky Michaelson back next year. He, Rudy Tucker and Don Maske—all all top the 6-3 mark. The height and experience will both be there.

Winless Bayside and almost winless Kellam have little experience to call on for next year and may prove to be the basement dwellers of the district again next season.

First Colonial loses several starters but has a little experience and height that could make for a winning season again next year.

The Virginia Beach team to watch next year will be Kempville, which will have a senior class for the first time. All the starters will be back, and they'll be in there fighting for recognition. The young team proved all they need is a little time and experience. They have it now and could prove to be a real threat next season.

Maury's hopes for making it to the state finals in Charlottesville this weekend were dashed by Hampton, 58-46 Saturday night. The Hampton Crabbers moved methodically in the first half and caused the Commodores to play some bold basketball. They were successful, and the game was tied at 29-29 at halftime.

But the aggressive play caused two Maury stars, Charlie Carr and Larry Trotter, to pick up too many fouls. Both were out of the game five minutes before the game was over. Hampton had begun to pull ahead in the third quarter and the gap then continued to widen. Maury had made it to the regional final by smothering Pembroke 89-64 the night before. At the same time Hampton soundly trounced Wilson 74-41.

And so for Virginia Beach the basketball season is ended for another year. And the old familiar cry has gone up from all the high schools teams, but especially from Cox and Princess Anne . . . "Wait until next year."

Students Win Prizes For Designs

Two Union Kempsville High School students have recently been informed that they are winners in the first annual Christmas Card Design Contest sponsored by the National Association for Retarded Children for students in special classes.

Herman Williams is a second place winner and received a check for $15. Maurice Boyd is a third place winner and received a check for $10.

Mailhes Invited to Tourney

Albin Mailhes, executive vice president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and serious golfer, will travel to Florida the end of this month to take part in a major golf tournament.

Mailhes received an invitation to play in the Pro-Am division of the famous $200,000 National Airlines Open at the Country Club of Miami on Wednesday, March 26.

The tournament is the richest winter tournament on the golf tour. About $5,000 in prize money will go to the amateurs, and Mailhes says he'll be there trying to get part of it.

About two days of practice rounds are scheduled ahead of the tournament, and Mailhes says he has plans to answer his invitation in the affirmative.

All of the major golf pros have noted their acceptance of invitations also.

Mailhes, known in Virginia Beach as one of the city's top golfers, is the only man ever to win the Princess Anne Country Club championship five times. Although he was a member of the Notre Dame golf team in college and has won a number of local and regional tournaments in recent years, he says the highlight of his career came a few years ago when he won a match from pro Tommy Bolt.

Children Enjoy 'Oliver!'

James R. Wannall Jr., manager of the Princess Theatre, reports a tremendous response to "Oliver!" which has been playing at the Princess since February.

Several Virginia Beach schools have scheduled outings during school hours so that the students can view this movie, which is based on Dickens' "Oliver Twist." These viewings are made available at a special price for the school groups.

"Oliver" has been received favorably by those who have seen it. According to Wannall, "I have yet to have an adverse comment on the movie...it has been better received than any picture I've played...teachers appreciate how well the script sticks to the story."

One school has included the film in a package deal of outside projects which would

The plaques were presented to Lynn Spence and Carol Ziegler, in recognition of bowling a single high game of 220 or higher.

Lynn Spence, in her first year in the league, bowled a 222 game on Sept. 9, 1968. Lynn is the daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. B. E. Spence of Virginia Beach. Spence is with the Fleet Tactical Support Squadron One at the Naval Air Station, Norfolk.

Carol Ziegler, rolled her 222 game on Jan. 4, 1969. Carol, in her third year of bowling, is the daughter of Col. and Mrs.

Paul E. Ziegler of Virginia Beach. Col. Ziegler is on the Staff of Commander Amphibious Force Atlantic Fleet at Little Creek.

The awards were presented by Cmdr. Ralph Ellenbrand, coach of Philant's junior kettlers, and Mrs. P. M. Badger, assistant coach. Mrs. Badger is the wife of Lt. P. M. Badger, Executive Officer of Underwater Demolition Team Twenty-One, at the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base.

K-9 Corps Is Valuable Asset to Police

Residents of Virginia Beach are now receiving more protection through the recent expansion of the police K-9 Corps. The recent expansion of the Corps, which has been in operation since the merger of the City of Virginia Beach with the former Princess Anne County, of training together. The initial training program is from 8 to 12 weeks on a full time basis and is followed by regular retraining sessions.

Sgt. Kenneth LaGrotta is the K-9 Training Officer, and is presently working with officers G.E. Ball, Stanley F. Bennett, Jr., D.L. Embry, W.L. Goodson, S.D. Stone, W.H. Smith, Jr. and J.H. Custer. Each of the men and the dog assigned him are trained as a team to develop keen coordination between them.

Because of the specialized nature of duty performed by the K-9 Corps, officers are chosen on a voluntary basis. They are required to be married, have proper facilities for caring for the dog in their home, and the dog must be acceptable to his wife and children as well as himself. The officer's family must love animals, since the dog will live with them when not on duty.

German shepherds are chosen for training because of their high intelligence, their breeding, their keen sense of hearing, smell and sight and their constant desire to please and obey their handlers.

It should be pointed out that a shepherd trained for K-9 duty is not trained as a vicious dog, but rather to act on command from his handler. The dog can become vicious, however, when necessary on command from his handler. Shepherd dogs are also chosen for their ability to run at 35 to 40 m.p.h., strike with a force of some 300 pounds, and to close their jaws on an object with more than 500 pounds of pressure per square inch without ripping or slashing.

Other values of the K-9 Corps are the great psychological deterrent to would-be law breakers, the low cost of maintaining the dogs, as well as the dog's endurance.

While it has been said that the presence of a K-9 dog is sometimes equal to the presence of perhaps two police officers in protection of residents of the city, perhaps the most valuable asset of the Corps is the use of the dogs in a situation which might otherwise endanger the life of a police officer in protecting you.

created special K-9 units assigned to each of the city's three police precincts.

Within a short time special vehicles, described as "broncos", fully equipped to meet the needs of such specialized duty will be placed in service. In the meantime the Corps is operating from standard police patrol cars taking part in routine patrol of the city.

The value of the "K-9 Corps" is immeasurable. The very presence of the German shepherd dogs, accompanied by his handler, in residential and business regions of the city acts as a deterrent to any would-be law breaker.

A few of the many uses of a K-9 shepherd include searching buildings which might contain burglars; tracking suspects who flee a crime scene through fields or wooded areas; controlling and dispersing, unruly crowds; and in capturing a man with a gun who may be endangering the lives of others. Before any police officer and his dog are placed on duty they undergo a concentrated course

Play Is 'Modern Experience'

The Wedgewood Theatre company has done a fine job with its latest offering, "The Kingdom of Earth", formerly known as "The Seven Descents of Myrtle" by Tennessee Williams. It is a brave effort that no doubt will shock the blues noses, even those used to the degradation so prevalent in the works of Mr. Williams.

Wedgewood is to be commended for taking on such a controversial play and then presenting it in unexpurgated form, but in the final analysis, we can only hope that the ages to come will not judge us by this work.

There is more filth than usual in this Williams work, much of it for filth's sake. It is obvious that Williams is fond neither of man nor woman. In this play he draws three disgusting, clear, pathetic characters and winds a thin plot of possession around them.

There is the young tubercular transvestite who marries a prostitute and perversely brings her home to his humble Mississippi Delta farm when he knows he is about to die. He does it to keep his half-bred, half-brother from owning the home of his beloved mama after his death. In his mama's boy weakness, after his mama's death he has signed a paper giving his cruel, crude brother possession at his death.

But his plan is spoiled because the prostitute will settle for anything or anybody to get a chance at possession of material goods. The flesh is weak and her eventual relationship with the animalistic, half-mad half-brother is obvious from the start.

It seems that Williams took collected perverts and collected bits of native philosophy and put them all together to make up this play of life in the raw. Often the action gets bogged down in these philosophical discussions as Williams apparently is trying to make some point. Dana Henry's portrayal of the transvestite is somewhat weird. He seems to be more obsessed with something or other than sensitive and scheming. His breakdown upon hearing that he is going to die lacks the quality of irony. But for a young actor, Mr. Henry shows a lot of promise in a difficult role.

His totally nude scene, even with back to the audience in dim light and on a platform is a first, and now that we've seen it, it could just as easily

Medical Lectures Scheduled

As part of the Medical College of Virginia's continuing education program for Virginia practicing physicians, lectures and conferences will be presented in March at 13 affiliated hospitals in Tidewater and southern Virginia.

Lecturers are members of the faculty at MCV, the health sciences division of Virginia Commonwealth University. As part of the program Dr. Alson W. Blount, assistant professor of medicine in the division of cardiovascular disease, will lecture and confer with the staff of the General Hospital of Virginia Beach on March 18.

On March 21 at DePaul Hospital in Norfolk, Dr. James W. Brooks, associate professor of thoracic and cardiac surgery will speak on "Perils of Chest Trauma" and Dr. Edward Ray, professor of medicine and chairman of the division of pulmonary disease, will speak on "Sarcoidosis." Dr. James C. Pierce, assistant professor of surgery, will lecture at Maryview Hospital in Portsmouth.

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

Miss Marlene Pierce, girl Friday of the police Juvenile Division, has expressed confused thoughts over her being given a particular telephone number. It appears the number connects the caller with service designed to "meet your mate through a computer system".

Officer R. F. Lippert, attached to the police Traffic Division, has just returned home after hospital confinement following surgery. All reports indicate Lippert is doing fine during his period of convalescence.

Men of the Davis Corner and Kempsville Volunteer Rescue Squads were called upon last Saturday to rescue two men who were stranded for some five hours on a mud flat in the Elizabeth River back of Arrowhead. At least 15 men were involved in towing the boat which became stranded during a shift of tide. The men, identified as Bob and Tom Jenette of Hampton, except for being chilled from exposure reportedly escaped injury.

A recent discussion of legal terms and their meaning brought a reply which, to say the least, is doubtful in its accuracy. The question of "what is the difference between unlawful and illegal" brought an immediate response of, "why that's easy, unlawful is something in violation of the laws of the State of Virginia, while illegal is a sick bird".

Board OK's Refurbishing

The board of General Hospital of Virginia Beach met March 7 and approved plans for refurbishing the annex at 25th Street and Artie Avenue. The work will cost approximately $20,000.

The remodeling will include carpeting, painting and installation of a new ceiling. Improvements are being made in the annex for its re-opening. This action is being taken to relieve the pressure at General Hospital caused by the heavy patient load.

April first has been set as a tentative re-opening date for the annex. The annex will be used to care for the less acutely ill patients who would ordinarily be cared for at the hospital on First Colonial Road.

The annex had been in use until Jan. 6, 1969, when all of the patients were moved to First Colonial Road. At that time a new $680,401 extended care unit was added to the hospital and the annex was closed.

The court had hearings on 52 juvenile petitions which concerned persons 17 years of age or under accused of violating state laws or city ordinances. Included in these hearings were 14 cases involving felonies, two of which were forwarded to a grand jury, one continued generally and the remaining 11 continued to future dates.
Other cases which the court settled involved 18 on alleged traffic law violations and eight on family domestic problems. There were six cases of parental non-support during the above calendar dates.

Star to Present Award

Lake Wright Playhouse will have a distinguished visitor today, but this weekend will lose one of its cast members of the current play, "Visit to a Small Planet."

The visitor is stage and screen star Robert Ryan, who will present the theatre with a plaque bearing the seal of recognition of Actors Equity Association, with which the theatre has a working contract. All performers in the Lake Wright company are members of the association and are professionals.

Managing Director Timothy L. Jones and Business Manager Ernest Price will accept the award from Ryan.

Ken McGlon, who has been playing the romantic lead in the current production is going back to New York, but with the blessings of Jones and his entire company. He will take over the third lead in the touring company of "Hello, Dolly."

Jones said he is regretfully releasing McGlon from the company, but that the offer is just too good for anyone to stand in the way.

A replacement for McGlon will arrive from New York Saturday and will take over the role next week. The production runs through March 30.

Jones also announced that he has hired as a member of the permanent company a young man, Terry Newlon, who has just completed the assignment of assistant stage manager of the Broadway Musical, "Red, White and Madox," which closed recently.

The next Lake Wright Playhouse offering will be the old classic, "Dracula," billed as "hilariously spooky." Frank Boone will direct. The cast will be announced shortly, according to Jones, but he said several members of the present company, including Nick DiCarlo, who now plays the lead in the present production, will be staying for the next show.

V.B. Radio Club Elects Officers

The Virginia Beach Amateur Radio Club has elected the following officers: President, Wallace F. Burkett WA4NQT; Vice President, Willie Roelant WB4KCI; Secretary-Treasurer, William M. Holland WA4EUL; and Communications Officer, Sherm Hawley K4DCS.

The club plans to conduct a new series of classes on amateur licensing in the near future. All persons interested in amateur radio are invited to attend the regular business meetings held on the first and third Thursdays of each month in the Virginia Beach Emergency Operating Center located at 3610 South Plaza Trail. The meetings begin at 8 p.m.

A familiar sight to Virginia Beach residents, Harrell's is soon to get a face-lifting by the new owners, Standard Drug Company.

Man of Year to Be Named

Virginia Beach's Man of the Year in Agriculture will be named on Tuesday, March 25, by the sponsors of the award, the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce.

The Agriculture Committee of the Chamber has been accepting nominations for the award. The recipient is honored for his contributions to the large agri-business community in Virginia Beach, as well as his civic and charitable work.

The guest speaker for the dinner will be Maurice B. Rowe, III, commissioner of the Virginia Dept. of Agriculture and Commerce. Rowe has spent his entire career serving the state department in various agricultural jobs. He was appointed acting commissioner on Oct. 1, 1965 and commissioner on March 3, 1966 by Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr.

Reservations for the dinner meeting, to be held at the Holiday Inn, 717 S. Military Highway, may be made by calling the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce. About 75 to 100 persons are expected to attend. Chamber Pres. Frank Kellam will make a special award to the winner also. City officials will also take part in the program. The winner's name is kept secret until the banquet, which begins at 7 p.m.

This will be the third annual presentation of the award. W. Clarke Fleming of Bayview Farms was the winner two years ago and E. R. "Dick" Cockrell of the VPI Extension in Virginia Beach was honored last year.

R. P. Midgett, chairman of the agriculture committee, is in charge of the program.

Another Beach Tradition Ends

"Meet you at Harrell's." These familiar words have been spoken by most Virginia Beach residents at one time or another during the last 22 years. But times change and Tuesday evening Harrell's--Harrell's Pharmacy at Laskin Road and Pacific Avenue--was sold to Standard Drug Company of Richmond.

It was with regret that Wiley C. Harrell sold the store, for he has put a lot of time and heart into running it. As he says, "It has been my life and my love...the saddest time there, is the day I sold it."

Harrell, who moved to Virginia Beach in June of 1946, has seen many of his customers grow up. He has seen Virginia Beach grow up. And he feels a responsibility to those customers which have been faithful for so many years. He has been the druggist for many families in the area during his entire time here.

He also feels an appreciation for the patronage and kindness these customers and friends have shown him. Selling the store was not a easy decision for him to make.

In addition to his customers Harrell is concerned about his employees. One employee, Mildred Capps, has worked for him for over 18 years. She worked in the first store he opened at 19th Street and Atlantic Avenue; she worked in the store he operated from 1950 until 1960, which was located at 34th Street and Atlantic; and she has worked in this store since it opened in 1965.

When Mildred, or Millie, as everyone calls her, talks about the sale she does so with tears in her eyes, because a large part of her life is tied up in Harrell's too. When asked what she and the other employees will do now, she said, "If the new owners want us we'll stay...but it'll be a complete change. You've got all your customers you've worked with and done for so long...you feel like you can't leave...I'd miss my people so bad if I left...they're just like part of my family..."

The employees hate to see Harrell leave, too. Mrs. Kathryn Ulrey, who has been with Harrell for about 19 years says, "I hate to see him go it...but he's probably doing the right thing."

Marie Glisson, who has worked for Harrell off and on for about 12 years finds working for someone else hard to imagine. "Mr. Harrell's not a bossman...he's more like a second father...you could always go to him with any problem..."

Mrs. Helen Newman, who has worked there for six years, echoes these words when she says, "He's more like a dad than a boss...there'll never be another one like him...he's just wonderful."

Harrell is not leaving immediately. He will be at the store for approximately eight more weeks. After that he can be found relaxing at his beautiful home on the bay...in Virginia Beach, because this is his home now.

G. M. Rosenthal, general manager of Standard Drug Company has this to say about future plans for Harrell's: "We purchased the store in a hurry and we haven't made any definitive plans. We plan to modernize the store, and we hope to continue the good relationship Mr. Harrell has had with the Virginia Beach residents."

Hopefully, this is exactly what will happen, because Harrell's has been Virginia Beach's "general store" for a long time and it would be missed. But somehow, "Meet you at Standard Drug Company" doesn't have the same ring as "Meet you at Harrell's!"

Other newly appointed Directors, are Vincent Moretti and William Mazel.

Red Cross Names Six

Paul G. Caplan, chairman of the Tidewater Chapter, American Red Cross, following a meeting of the Board of Directors, announced the appointment of six members to fill unexpired terms ending June 30th.

Serving as first, second and third vice chairmen, respectively, are: John L. Roper, III, Frank N. Wood and E. C. Baker, Jr. Judge Jeffrey C. Bray will serve on the Executive Committee.

Cavalier Has Pleasant Comedy

"Bachelor's Wife" by Don Appell, Cavalier Dinner Playhouse's current bill of fare, is a pleasant little comedy about a long-time bachelor who marries a surprisingly demure and innocent dance hall girl. The problem arises when he has to tell his mother, who has long dominated him. Thus begins the struggle between mother and wife over him and his own personal struggle to break away from his mother's apron strings.

The subject is certainly serious enough, but it is treated just lightly enough by director Mart Aldre and his fine cast. It has some very funny lines tossed into all this seriousness, and with the treatment given them by the cast the production becomes a heartwarming comedy.

The action begins in a hotel room on the wedding night of the 34-year-old bachelor and his 27-year-old ex-dance hall girl. It is obvious he is scared and inexperienced. Although we get the message that his wife whom he has only known a few days is less frightened and more experienced, somehow or other the audience is assured this marriage is going to work.

When he calls his mother she rushes to the hotel. Then in typical dominating style, feigning pains, aches and no place to go manages to move in with them and attempts to take over. The inevitable confrontation finally comes between the two women.

Kathleen Coyne, making her second appearance at Cavalier, is a charming and clever actress. Her portrayal of the young girl is convincing. She gives the character all the warmth, innocence and worldliness it needs.

Tom Jennings is not as relaxed in the role of the husband as he should be. He often appears more confused by the entire situation than bashful. His firm scenes with his mother are not firm enough to be entirely believable.

Hollice Stander could easily walk away with the entire play in the "meaty role" of the "chicken soup cures all ills" mother. She moves well through the role bossing and fussing quite hilariously.

Aldre makes a couple of brief appearances as a frank and lecherous bellboy.

The pacing of the show could be picked up a shade and it would all move much better. The two sets are intricately woven together and its worthwhile at intermission just to watch the crew make the big change.

The story of the play is somewhat hackneyed, and we have the feeling we've heard it all before, but it's well done and a pleasant evening. HJL

Scott Favors Steps To Improve Police

City Manager Roger Scott has indicated he plans to take additional steps in the continuing improvement of the Virginia Beach Police Department.

Scott, during Monday's informal City Council meeting said that when the City's fiscal 1969-1970 operating budget is presented at Monday's regular Council meeting, it will include recommendations to raise the starting salary of a rookie policeman from the present $480 to $512 per month; to increase the police department's personnel strength by the hiring of an additional 25 men in the next year; to outfit and place in service a mobile crime lab; to obtain remote data processing equipment for the police department; and to seek use of federal and state funds to complete additional improvements to the police department's special weapons range.

Answers All Favor Budget Cut

Admittedly the SUN SURVEY question of last week was a loaded one, but the results were still not expected to be entirely one-sided. Every single answer to the question favored a cut in the school budget over a real estate tax hike.

There were no negative answers to the question, "Should efforts be made to cut the school budget by $250,000 (at the risk of reducing the quality of education in the city) in order to balance the new city budget and save off another real estate tax increase?" Every answer was "Yes."

There is little doubt that the results were colored by recent publicity concerning taxes, budgets, real estate appraisals and the like. The public, warned of many more increases in the future, is apparently a little gun shy.

One who replied underlined his answer several times and another noted that he has been a taxpayer of 54 years. Still another suggested the use of the schools on a 12-month basis and two shifts. One wrote a note, saying that he was a businessman who would not deprive a child of anything within reason, but said he still had other bills to pay than taxes.

He added, "Everyone living at the Beach are not millionaires and should not have to be to live there."

For more discussion on the same subject of taxes and budgets, see story this page.

While the public opinion survey does not profess to represent the thinking of all residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent the views of a cross section of those who took time to clip it and return it to us. Your attention is called to this week's SUN SURVEY question also, which appears below in the box at the lower left corner of this page.

Each week a new question will appear and the results will be published the following week. The questions will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more responsible the opinion.

Dredge To Open Inlet

The Virginia Beach Erosion Commission has voted to use its 10-inch dredge to open Rudee Inlet again. The inlet has been partially blocked by a sandbar built up by winter storms.

Chairman E. H. Church recommended to the commission that the large dredge be used for this purpose. Herbert Holt, long a critic of the involvement of the commission in the opening of Rudee Inlet, again voiced his dissent to the present work.

Church pointed out that it is his understanding the next City budget recommends a sizeable increase to the commission, part of which will probably be used to keep the inlet open.

While the federal government shares part of the cost of dredging and sand pumping operations in Owl's Creek and in other reclaiming projects, it is not a part of keeping Rudee Inlet open for boat traffic.

One of the major reasons that the inlet continues to fill, according to engineers, is that a recommended 18-foot deep sand trap has never been completed at the site to catch sand driven in by tides and winds. When it is finished it will have to be pumped out occasionally.

The commission's eight-inch dredge has been working on the inlet for about three weeks, and has now begun a two-shift operation. The larger dredge will begin its two-shift operation in about ten days, and it is expected that the work can be completed in 30 days in time for the charter boat fishing season that is rapidly approaching.

Joseph McDonald, the commission's consulting engineer, said the commission should consider expanding its facilities. It was pointed out also that consideration of purchasing a new dredge is underway so that greater depths can be attained.

Riganto pointed out the value of increasing retirement benefits by citing the case of former Police Chief James E. Moore. Riganto said that Moore, who retired recently after 27 years service, receives an annual pension of only $3,700 from

Murphy Backs Racing

Bruce Murphy, a candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates subject to the July Democratic primary, in an address Monday before the Virginia Beach Democratic Club, promised that if he is elected he will work toward a local option pari-mutuel law for Virginia, with an eye toward horse racing in Virginia Beach and other areas.

Murphy told the luncheon meeting, "With taxes increasing every day, Virginia Beach needs something new to raise revenue. Virginia Beach is a bedroom community with little industry and a short tourist season. The residents of this city can no longer be burdened with higher and higher taxes. They must be granted some relief."

He said he would pattern his bill after the racing laws of Maryland, New York and Florida, but that like liquor-by-the-drink, the law would become effective only in those areas which hold favorable referendums.

Murphy said that he could envision as many as four tracks in Virginia; in northern Virginia near Washington, in Virginia Beach, outside Richmond and near Roanoke.

The highlights of his proposed bill would call for a five-member racing commission to be appointed by the

'Space Age' Schools Expected to Evolve

By Carolyn McAllen

What's in store for education in 10 years? There's a strong possibility that so-called "space-age" education will arrive complete with computers and plastic schools.

According to School Supt. E. E. Brickell, "I firmly believe we're going to see a continuation and intensifying of individual instruction with a continuation of accelerated and remedial teaching. There will be more specialists, and we will make more and more use of electronic aids. We're living in the age of computers, and it has tremendous importance for education. We've barely scratched the surface of its importance in education."

Brickell said that the body of content of subject matter won't change greatly but that the method of presenting it will. Teachers are the key to the success of any school program. Brickell said, "Teachers today are better prepared, more poised, composed, articulate and proficient. I think teacher training will continue to improve, and I think we can look forward to better and better teachers. This is an attractive place to work and word goes back to campuses."

But as land costs rise, so do construction costs and also the cost per pupil of educating students. Brickell foresees the need of three or four "fairly large" high schools in the next 10 years. There is certain to be a number of elementary schools too.

One solution to the mounting building costs has been offered by a Virginia Beach architect, Evan McCorkle, and that is to construct schools of fiber glass at about a fifth of the cost of conventional schools. "There's nothing but the mechanical eq-

Money problems continue to plague City Council, and with the presentation of the 1969-70 operating budget at next Monday's meeting, there appears to be little chance of abatement of controversy.

City Manager Roger Scott said he would present his $44.7 million budget to Council Monday for consideration. A public hearing will then be set, and the budget will be adopted, in some form, during April.

Although the contents of the budget have not been made public to Councilmen or the press, it is known that a five per cent utility tax increase and a two-cent-a-pack cigarette tax increase are recommended. Earlier Scott had said he hoped to pare the school budget down somewhat over and above the piling he had already accomplished in all departments. The school budget, at $23.7 million has already been passed by the school board.

After discussions with Council and with school officials, it appears that the school budget will not be cut measurably. Thus Scott has also included an across the board ten-cent per hundred dollars valuation real estate tax increase which amounts to approximately a five per cent hike.

This increase is bound to come in for much criticism in light of recent controversy surrounding the new real estate assessments citywide which have already raised taxes considerably for a large segment of property owners.

Even before seeing the budget, Councilman George Ferrell Monday said he will introduce a resolution Monday calling for a 5 per cent trimming of the budget regardless of the opposition which came from many other members of Council.

The Ferrell proposal also calls for the effect of recent reappraisals to be delayed so that the State Department of Taxation appraisers may review. The appraisals were made by the city assessors under the direction of Bill Connell, chief assessor.

Councilmen objected to the proposal of cutting the budget because they hadn't seen it yet. Several also said they thought the city and the City Council would be placed in an embarrassing position by asking state appraisers to check on the city appraisers.

Ferrell said his five per cent cut would offset the need for the $2 million brought in by the reappraisals.

Councilmen G. Dewey Simmons, Jr., Lawrence Marshall and J. Curtis Payne spoke out in opposition to Ferrell's proposal. Marshall said he felt the City Manager had made as many cuts as possible already. Councilman Murray Malbon also voiced opposition to Ferrell's proposal, but said he was in favor of a cut or anything that would help hold taxes down.

Councilman Albert Bonney said he agreed that state tax men ought to be brought in to reassess the public. Councilman John McCombs said he would like to have the Asst. City Manager for Finance Giles Dodd come up with an alternative tax, but Scott said it was up to him and he would do whatever Council wanted.

The entire matter has arisen from the storm of protest that has reached City Council from property owners who have seen their assessments rise as much as 2,000 per cent recently following a year-long reappraisal process. Council has held several meetings on the subject and had generally agreed that the revaluation was required by law and had been conducted correctly. It was also agreed that regular procedures could be followed by taxpayers to determine any discrepancies. The feeling was until Monday that the matter was dying down and that individual cases were being considered on merit.

Representatives of the Council of Civic Organizations also appeared before Council Monday day asking for a March 26 meeting with Council at a public hearing at Princess Anne High School to discuss the reappraisals and all other monetary considerations and problems of the city, through pre-approved questions.

The CCO passed a resolution at its meeting last week calling for the meeting on the basis that the public had not been informed enough on the matter. The unanimous vote on the resolution came after it

Marathon Meeting Hears Many Groups

City Council held a long informal meeting Monday at the Second Police Precinct in Virginia Beach Borough and, among other things, heard a recommendation that the meetings should be held in the conference room of the new administration building at Princess Anne instead.

A number of groups, including representatives of the Fraternal Order of Police Associates and the Council of Civic Organizations, (See separate stories on each, this page), were part of a continuing parade that contributed discussion to the three-hour meeting.

Informal meetings, until recently, had been held in the three police precincts in different sections of the city. With the completion of the new administration building, the first precinct meeting was transferred to the conference room. The floating meetings were originally set up because of the lack of permanent meeting space and because Councilmen wished to visit all parts of the city.

Councilmen Murray Malbon and Curtis Payne suggested Monday that all future informal meetings be held in the new conference room, mostly because of the availability of all department heads, if Council wished to discuss any matter with them.

Malbon suggested that all department heads should make brief reports to Council once a month so that members of Council can be better informed about the inner workings of the departments. This apparently was an outgrowth of some surprise on the part of some Councilmen concerning the size of the new real estate assessments. Several Councilmen said was introduced by Milton Culpeper of the Princess Anne Hills Civic League and seconded by Garnett Lee of the same league. Lee also noted that schools should be operated on shifts to hold down school construction costs.

Culpeper questioned the "quiet" reappraisal, whether officials knew the reappraisal was coming, how it would affect taxpayers and whether City Manager Scott had "gone too far and too fast."

The feeling in Council Monday, where Lee, Culpeper and Sam Houston appeared, was that the matter had received considerable publicity and that the CCO questions had already been answered and that the meeting would serve no real purpose. Most Councilmen agreed, however, to a later meeting, if it was still wanted, to clear the air but pointed out that nothing had been done in secret.

Scott said he felt the question concerning him was an indictment and said he was only trying to run an efficient and economic government, employing they were not aware of all the workings of the reappraisal process, although they were aware of its being conducted. Councilmen two weeks ago also expressed a desire to receive more information from the school board on zoning applications concerning building capabilities, timetables and money to build.

Councilman Larry Marshall pointed out to Council that there are 38 department heads, and that even once-a-month personal reports to Council would be cumbersome and lengthy. The matter was not resolved, but there is some speculation that written reports will be submitted by department heads, those that Council feels they need to see will be invited to the meetings and that the meetings will be moved to the conference room. Council has also asked for a monthly report from the Industrial Commission.

The Mayor's Airport Study Committee, represented by Bradshaw Pulley and Al Malhes appeared Monday to request a $5,000 appropriation from Council for the city's part in a joint federal-state-city $20,000 planning study by an engineering firm of a general aviation airport in Virginia Beach.

They told Council that the study must be made and three sites recommended by it before any real consideration of future grants or participation by federal agencies will be considered. They also recommended that the firm of Dewberry, Nealon and Davis of Fairfax be employed to do the job. The matter was taken under advisement.

miscellaneous metal, glass, roofing materials, plus light fixtures and wiring.

"All would be replaced by one material," said McCorkle.

"It does away with carpenters, masons, plumbers, etc.," He said that a school could be built in a month. "Time is pure dollars and cents." He added that people on the city staff could do the construction. Units would be joined by lap joints, metal clips or tongue in groove joints.

Besides the short construction time and cost of material, McCorkle said that upkeep would be cut roughly 95 per cent and utility costs would drop 75 to 80 per cent. Besides, fiber glass is fireproof.

The units would form a total school; they would not be temporary buildings. Schools would include auditoriums, gymnasiums and cafeterias of fiber glass.

McCorkle foresees the day when the school board would order the number of units for a year then store them until they are needed.

Fiber glass would also solve the problem of unstable land in this area where often many pilings are required for construction. "It can float on water," said McCorkle. "Instead of sinking into the mud, the problem is to keep it from blowing away." He quickly added that units would be anchored with wire.

In summing up the future of Virginia Beach schools, Brickell said, "I am so convinced of the success of education here, I don't know another place in education I'd rather be. These people have met every educational challenge we've thrown at them, and I think they'll continue to. I can't help but be optimistic."

Man Awaits Appearance

A Norfolk taxi driver is awaiting appearance before a Virginia Beach grand jury on a charge of pandering. Officials said Aubrey A. Davenport, 38, Vincent Avenue was arrested after he allegedly brought a woman to a motel room during a vice investigation. Det. J. W. Brazier and Patrolman J. G. Malesky contend Davenport accepted $20 from each of them then brought a woman to their room at the Holiday Inn on Northampton Blvd. The woman, identified as Rene LaSalle, 26, E. Ocean View Avenue, was fined $450 and costs in Municipal Court after being charged with prostitution.

Juvenile Appeals Fine

A 16 year old juvenile is awaiting appearance in Virginia Beach Circuit Court on an appeal of his conviction of failure to yield right of way. The juvenile has been fined $2 and costs in Juvenile Court after an accident last October. The youthful pedestrian received a fractured skull and arm injuries when he was struck by an auto near the intersection of Birdneck Road and Virginia Beach Blvd.

Escapee Recaptured

An escapee from the Virginia Beach city jail was captured by a private citizen within ten minutes of his escape last Friday. Officials said Johnny L. Johnson, 21, of Leffler Lane, had just been returned to the City Jail after questioning at police headquarters. Johnson reportedly ran out the jail office front moments after being placed in the custody of Deputy Jailer Guy Bromley. Bromley was chasing Johnson across the courthouse lawn when Vernon Etheridge, 22, of Salem Road, witnessed the chase and joined the pursuit. Etheridge overtook Johnson in a wooded area behind the Kellam and Eaton Store, and detained him. Johnson was in custody awaiting court appearance on burglary charges at the time of his escape.

Byrd Changes Plea

Tommy L. Byrd has changed his plea to guilty to six statutory burglary charges, and is awaiting sentencing. Byrd, 23, of Pacific Avenue, was charged in connection with a burglary ring believed to be in the resort city last October and November. When police broke the case, they confiscated a large assortment of equipment including power tools, walk-talkies, binoculars, gas masks, and police radio—monitoring equipment from several homes and cars. Byrd is only one of eight persons charged in connection with the rash of burglaries.

Jail Doors Swing Shut For Becker

Herman F. W. Becker is in Virginia Beach City Jail serving a 30-day sentence on conviction of gambling paraphernalia. This is apparently the first sentence Becker has ever served despite the fact he has made numerous appearances in courts over a period of years on various gambling charges. City Sgt. John E. Marr told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "This is the first time he's pulled any time since I've been sheriff." Sheriff Marr first went into office in 1956.

Becker attempted to avoid going to jail on grounds that his health requires a large amount of medication daily. Marr said Becker is doing well in jail, and that "he is getting the medicine his doctor prescribed, and is getting it every day."

The serving of the jail sentence resulted from Becker's losing efforts to have the U. S. Supreme Court hear an appeal of his Virginia Beach conviction of the charge of possessing gambling paraphernalia. The conviction in Circuit Court, was an appeal of an earlier Municipal Court conviction of the charge where the 30 days in jail and fine of $1,000 were imposed.

Tag Sales Termed Big

Mrs. B. L. Schmidt, title clerk for the sales of state licenses in the city of Virginia Beach, reports that sales on the first day and a half were "big."

One location where the plates can be purchased, Kellam and Eaton Insurance Company on Pacific Avenue, sold approximately 1,150 plates during this time.

So far there have been no real problems. But Mrs. Schmidt warns the purchasers to be sure and have the correct insurance information.

ment by City Council, which expressed some reluctance partly because of the need for other city services and the current discussion of economic problems in the city.

Worth Petty, director of Public Utilities informed Council of a survey now underway of the Chinese Corner area to determine a need for sewers in that area. Councilmen requested also a cost survey of pumping stations needed, especially since it was discussed that a membership discount store is considering building in the area. Councilman G. Dewey Simmons, Jr. said he felt the sooner the city gets sewers along Shore Drive and Virginia Beach Blvd., and makes the Boulevard an 8-lane highway the better.

A group from Fair Meadows also requested Council help with sewers for their area. City Manager Roger Scott said he would have city departments look into the problem there and urged the residents to continue to attempt to get names on a requesting petition.

In other action Scott told Council that a radar traffic survey indicated that the 25-mile-an-hour speed limit on 21st St. from the end of the expressway to Baltic Ave. on the one-way portion of the street was not being observed and that motorists are traveling at about 35-miles an-hour. The recommendation to raise the limit to 35 is expected.

ing the programs which were started before he became City Manager for the most part. Most Councilmen felt they wanted a complete look at the budget before any meeting, and it is somewhat doubtful that the meeting will ever be held at all.

Murphy

Governor, with no more than three from the same political party. All members would be subject to the approval of the General Assembly.

They would supervise race meetings, inspect books and records of licensees, issue pari-mutuel racing licenses, prevent use of improper devices and stimulants and set racing dates in the various areas.

He called for strict license provisions to be enforced by the bill.

Murphy assumed that Virginia Beach could have a 100-day racing season, possibly in two parts, from 50 days prior to Memorial Day and 50 days subsequent to Labor Day.

During this time, Murphy said that realistic figures could bring tax with half being returned to the localities. He said a $3 million bet each day would not be unrealistic, based on figures from other major tracks.

He then pointed out that the $15 million figure is slightly more than one-third of the proposed budget for the city of Virginia Beach which will be presented to City Council Monday.

Murphy said he recognized that the road to pari-mutuel racing in Virginia Beach would not be an easy one, and said it would take much work on the part of a many people. But he added that he thought it could be accomplished, particularly since the liquor-by-the-drink barrier has already been broken and the people have seen that it did not bring about any devastating effects.

"Of course, the first step is for me to get elected," he quipped.

The Police department, and with Social Security this increases to $4,800 annually. Riganto pointed this equals a payment of 37 cents per day for the time Moore devoted to the police department.

Under the present program police officers contribute to their retirement fund amount equal to 5.5 percent of their monthly gross pay over $100. The city makes an additional contribution equal to 2.14 percent of the officer's contribution. The FOPA concedes that under a city operated retirement program, these contributions, especially on the part of police officers, would have to be increased.

The FOPA recommended plan would require an initial contribution by the City in the amount of $50,000. Riganto and Cohen stated their study indicates only a total of 22 men who could retire in the next ten years. Cohen said this slow drain on the retirement fund, combined with the withdrawing of $117,000 contributed into the State system since the 1963 merger of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County and re-depositing the funds under the city's own program at an interest rate higher than the 2.25 per cent paid by the State, would provide for a good period of capital accumulation.

While the FOPA has requested City Council consideration of their proposal at the present time, it was recommended the revised retirement program not be initiated until fiscal year 1970-1971.

City fathers during Monday's presentation, while showing interest in the FOPA recommendations, deferred any concrete commitment on the proposal saying they would need more time to review the recommendations and evaluate the need of all city employees in light of the FOPA plan.

Riganto said the FOPA is planning to appear before City Council in its regular meeting on April 14 for a formal presentation and hearing on the FOPA recommendations.

Kiwanians Honor Policeman

In discussing his appearance at the dinner, Riley told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN he was "especially appreciative to the Club for making the award and recognizing the work of policemen. Especially at this time when everyone is quick to criticize policemen, and become prone to holler 'police brutality' when officers are called upon to perform their duties instead of recognizing them for their service to their fellow citizens."

While Stone was named to receive the award, Special Credit was also given to Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Rescue Squadman James E. Hundley who played a large part in the saving of the life of Tidewater's institutional chaplain. After Hundley arrived on the scene he continued administering cardiopulmonary resuscitation to Rev. Muhlly as the ambulance was enroute to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

Brickell Ends Year; Approved for 4 More

In its meeting Tuesday the Virginia Beach School Board reappointed E. E. Brickell as Superintendent of Schools. The appointment is for a four year term.

Brickell had been appointed March 1, 1968 to serve the remaining year of Frank W. Cox's term. A celebration was held at the end of the meeting to honor Brickell's year's service and reappointment.

Other business conducted by the Board included the acceptance of a $479,702 insurance settlement for King's Grant elementary school. The settlement was called a good one by Brickell. Negotiations are still in process for a settlement on equipment. King's Grant, which was gutted by a fire in December, originally cost $465,000 to build.

The Board approved a $700,800 bid by Robert R. Marquis, Inc. for rebuilding the school. This was an alternate bid that includes air conditioning and other improvements for the school. It was chosen over a $510,300 bid which did not include the improvements.

Also approved by the Board was a $851,000 federal grant for construction. The greater part of the grant, $700,000, will be used to partially finance a new elementary school in the Bayside area. The school, which will cost approximately $900,000 is scheduled to open September, 1970.

Princess Anne Elementary School will receive the remaining $151,000 for its 10-room air conditioned addition.

The entire addition is expected to cost $250,000.

The Board voted to accept the Roberts Series English textbook for the ninth grade. This will standardize the English textbooks throughout the school system.

The 1969-70 school calendar was voted on and accepted by the Board. The calendar schedules schools to re-open right after Labor Day and to close on June 13, 1970.

During the meeting the Board heard a report by Mrs. Frances Hudgins, supervisor of guidance and counseling in Virginia Beach schools. In her report Mrs. Hudgins told the board that the city had 35 full-time counselors, giving a 400 to 1 ratio. This is slightly more than the 375 to 1 ratio that is recommended.

This Is Wildlife Week

The week of March 16-22 has been proclaimed National Wildlife Week by Frank A. Dusch. In his proclamation Mayor Dusch urges all citizens to support this vital conservation observance.

Pollution, land-fill projects, and fast-growing suburbs are destroying irreplaceable natural areas for wildlife. During Wildlife Week, the National Wildlife Federation is stressing that to have wildlife we must "Provide Habitat -- Places Where Wildlife Live."

C.P.O. Dudley Hartman of Virginia Beach is presented with the highly coveted Navy and Marine Corps Medal by his Commanding Officer, Capt. H. S. Matthews, Jr., aboard the aircraft carrier USS Independence (CVA-62). The medal, the highest non-combat award given, was presented for Chief Hartman's rescue of a drowning sailor who was forced into the water by anti-American mobs in Istanbul, Turkey, last summer.

C & P Plans Added Cable

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia has authorized the expenditure of $55,600 for an outside plant project in the Virginia Beach area.

New cable will be placed from the Indian River Road communications center to College Park subdivision and to the area southwest of the center. This cable project is required by C & P to meet the demands for telephone service for residence and business establishments in the area.

Col. W. W. Davis, Chief, Virginia Beach Police Department is touring colleges of Virginia and North Carolina interviewing law students who may be suitable for employment as summer police officers in the resort city. Col. Davis will be visiting the University of Virginia, University of Washington and Lee, University of Richmond, Wake Forest University, and the University of North Carolina in explaining the advantages of working with the police department.

E. B. Bayne, Virginia Beach Borough Fire Dept. Chief, and Kelly Davis, Little Creek Fire Dept. Chief, will be returning this weekend from a fire department instructors conference in Memphis, Tenn. Bayne and Davis have been attending a similar program annually for the past 16 years. Members of the Princess Anne Fraternal Order of Police are completing arrangements for a special dance to be held in the new FOP Lodge on the night of Friday, April 4. The dance, which is for members and their invited guests only, will be the first event to be held in the new Lodge since its recent completion.

Firemen from the various fire departments in the City next Monday night will begin the second phase of training in a city wide fire fighting school being conducted at the Virginia Beach Borough Fire headquarters. Thus far attendance in the program has been well above 90 men from the paid and volunteer fire departments of the resort city.

State Seeks Employees

Recruiters for Virginia's Department of Highways are going to college campuses throughout the Southeast this winter and spring, telling seniors that after graduation there's a place for many of them in the State's busy highway development program.

Before they complete their assignment, the recruiters will have visited some 30 campuses, including six in Virginia.

They are seeking approximately 40 civil engineering graduates for the Department's graduate engineer training program, and 20 young people with degrees in such fields as economics, business administration and real estate for training as right-of-way agents.

In addition to the four-year schools, the recruiters will pay visits to each of Virginia's community colleges now turning out graduates. There they will be looking for students with backgrounds in drafting, design, civil engineering and architectural technology.

Handling most of the recruiting efforts are Charles W. Tatum, graduate engineer training coordinator, and Alvin Janutolo, employment supervisor.

Within the State, they have already visited or are planning visits to Hampton Institute, Old Dominion College, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Virginia Union University, and the University of Virginia.

In addition, the Department will be represented by the State Division of Personnel on the campus of virtually every other college and university in Virginia.

This year, as in the past several years, there's an extra measure of long-range emphasis on the recruitment of college graduates.

"We know that most of these young men will soon face military service," Tatum says.

"We tell them we want them now, and we'll wait for them to return if they have to leave to serve in the armed forces."

This underscores the dual objective of the recruitment program—to maintain an adequate staff to handle the present highway development program and, with an eye to the future, to build the organization for meeting the State's highway needs in the years ahead.

Project Stays on Schedule

Work is progressing according to schedule on Independence Blvd.

Charles Kiley, the city's Director of Public Works says work on phase two of the project is "on schedule despite the weather." Kiley added that the portion of Independence Blvd. between Haywood Road and Shore Drive (near gate three of the Naval Amphibious Base)

Soldier's Body Found

The body of a Fort Story soldier missing since March 11 was found Sunday in waters off Nags Head, N. C.

Army officials said Spec. 4 Nicholas R. Camarillo, 20, disappeared after the capsizing of a LARC XV amphibian during a routine training exercise off Virginia Beach. Five other soldiers, three from the capsized LARC and two from another LARC were rescued after the accident some 2000 yards off shore.

Fort Story officials are continuing their investigation into the cause of the accident.

Board Meets

Members of the regional community college board met yesterday at Frederick Community College in Portsmouth to elect officers. Representatives on the board from Virginia Beach are Richard D. Guy, Dr. Clarence A. Holland and Frank W. Cox.

There are 12 members on the board, which is composed of representatives from Portsmouth, Chesapeake, Norfolk and Virginia Beach. The region will eventually have three, possibly four, community colleges located within its boundaries. These are to be located in Portsmouth, Virginia Beach and Chesapeake, fourth college may be added later in Norfolk.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army Chief of Staff, toured Fort Story on Tuesday. Moments after his arrival by helicopter Gen. Westmoreland inspected the honor guard, pausing to speak to SP4 Lawrence Riddick of Norfolk. Gen. Westmoreland is accompanied by (left to right) Maj. Gen. William N. Redling, Commander Ft. Story-Ft. Eustis; Maj. Michael D. Mierau, Gen. Westmoreland's Aide; and Col. Thomas D. Emery, Ft. Story Commander. (U. S. Army Photo)

Language Workshop Planned

A "Summer Workshop in Foreign Languages" for junior and senior high school teachers of French, German or Spanish will be offered at Old Dominion College from June 16 to July 11.

The workshop, using the new audio-lingual method of teaching foreign languages, will include a course, "Materials and Methods of Teaching Foreign Languages in Secondary School," for teachers in all three languages and "Applied Linguistics," designed for high school teachers of Spanish. Each course carries three credits.

The audio-lingual method follows the natural process of learning a language: first, listening; second, speaking; third, reading; and fourth, writing. Translation is deemphasized and the literature of the language is taught in upper-level classes.

Scholarship grants for workshop participants are available through the State Department of Education. Tuition is $42 per course. Information concerning scholarships may be obtained by consulting the language supervisors in the various junior and senior high schools.

Room and board will be available at $4.50 per day for persons desiring to live in a dormitory on campus. Housing information is available from: Manager, University Housing, Inc., 1055 W. 50th St., Norfolk, Va. 23508

Applications for the workshop should be made through Dr. Angel A. Castro, Department of Foreign Languages, Old Dominion College.

Work continues on the Independence Boulevard overpass where it crosses Northampton Blvd.

Marchione Dies in Home

Virginia Beach police say the death of prominent businessman John Marchione has been classified as a suicide.

Authorities said Marchione, 43, died as the result of a self-inflicted gunshot wound of the head from a 22-caliber pistol.

Investigators said Marchione's three year old son discovered the body of his father

Wednesday afternoon in the family's Chesapeake Colony home at 2601 Sandy Valley Road.

According to police Marchione's wife, Virginia, and the family's physician, Marchione had been despondent for some time prior to his death.

Marchione was part owner of the Norfolk firm of Colonial Block Corp. at 3230 Chesapeake Blvd.

Here Comes The Budget

The City Manager has not yet presented his new operating budget for the city to City Council, and already it is the subject of much discussion, criticism and controversy. Monday it goes to Council, and the real fireworks should begin.

Information has been leaked out through various sources that the recommended budget will be more than $8 million higher than last year, that cigarette and utility taxes will rise moderately, that a ten cent or about a 5 per cent across-the-board real estate tax increase is included and that much of all the increases are there because of the rise in the school budget.

Our SUN SURVEY of last week showed that many citizens are tired of sharp increases in taxes and that they are in favor of cutting the school budget. It is not difficult to see how they arrive at this conclusion. They have seen real estate and other taxes rise considerably in the last two years; they have seen new real estate assessments recently which have frightened them; and city fathers have pointed out rather bleakly that the prospects for the future offer more of the same only more so.

But calling for cutting the school budget or recommending a five per cent overall cut before even seeing the budget, as has been done by Councilman George Ferrell, may be just a shade premature.

We too are tired of continued tax hikes in a place we chose to live partly because of low taxes. We too recommend economy. We too recommend an ardent search for a new tax base. But the new budget must be studied and each item approved or cut on merit. Early controversy can do no more than further the cause of stirring up an already stirred up populace and make election-shy Councilmen perhaps too aware that 1970's Councilmatic race is only a year away.

Finally--A Concrete Suggestion

After two years of flailing around by too many people, there would appear to be a concrete step in the making toward a general aviation airport in Virginia Beach.

Just last week on this page we stated that such a step must be possible with so many dedicated and intelligent people working on the problem. Now it's up to City Council, which we hope will take prompt affirmative action.

The Mayor's Airport Study committee, which has been working with and exclusive of other official and non-official groups on the airport problem, has asked for the small appropriation of $5,000 from the city, as its part of the cost of an engineering study that will be necessary before the Federal Aviation Agency can ever approve an airport here.

The study would recommend three suitable sites, not those in the way of any military or civilian problems, as has happened in the recent and not so recent past. Worried about money and the relative need for an airport, Council took no action at the informal meeting. The study must be made now and land must be acquired if we are ever to have an airport.

For too long the wheels of progress in this matter have been bogged down in a muddy mess that should be a runway. This is a good recommendation and it must be followed through.

The Right to Know

Certainly the people of Virginia Beach have a right to know what is going on in the governing of their city. But this time the Council of Civic Organizations may have gone too far.

There is little doubt that civic leagues and the CCO representing many of them carry a lot of weight with City Council. Often pressure by the Civic groups of voters and non-voters have brought about some questionable decisions on zoning and other matters.

Councilmen also must obviously represent all segments of the population. But for the CCO to adopt a resolution questioning the workings of the city and its officials when it is not in possession of all the facts or when it has not absorbed all the facts it just is not fair.

The CCO wants a public meeting to discuss the reappraisals, which have been thoroughly discussed in many meetings and the subject has been covered exhaustively in newspapers and through other communications media. The meeting would only give voice to critics who would criticize anyway. We do not feel the meeting could serve any useful purpose, and hope that Council will turn it down.

The citizens of this city can be as well informed as any anywhere. All city operations are carried on openly with full coverage. The CCO not withstanding, all the citizens have to do is look.

Letters to the Editor

Praises Coverage

Editor, THE VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

I wish to commend you and your staff for the excellent coverage you give the activities at Pembroke Mall. The Mall is an extraordinary achievement in many ways. I don't think people realize its real worth. Besides being an architectural marvel and a convenience center, it is a community gathering place. If you want to say in touch with what is going on at Virginia Beach you can find it out at the Mall.

In many ways it reminds me of the small country town I grew up in.

It's nice to sit and watch the people go by after you've finished your shopping. Sometimes I even go there just for the purpose of watching people go by.

So many of the residents are missing out on the benefits that the Mall offers, however. I have heard some of my friends say that they don't go there but about once every three months. And that is why I am writing this letter to thank you for the time and space you devote to Mall activities. It is a worthwhile cause.

"Fireman's Prayer"

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN:

Here is an interesting prayer that I have found and which I feel is so moving. It is called the "Fireman's Prayer". I pass it along to you in the hope that your readers will also find it worthwhile.

"When I am called to duty, God... Wherever flames may rage... Give me the strength to save some life... Whatever be its age... Help me embrace a little child... before it is too late, or save an older person from the horror of that fate... Enable me to be alert... and hear the weakest shout... and quickly and efficiently... to put the fire out... I want to fill my calling and... to give the best in me... to guard my every neighbor and... protect his property... And if according to your will... I have to lose my life... please bless with your protecting hand... my children and my wife."

Special Report

Primary Fight Still On

The latest entry in the Lt. governor sweepstakes in the July Democratic Primary is that old philosopher himself, Hardtimes Hunt. Hunt, admittedly a loser in his other ventures into politics, is nevertheless a serious candidate, and there should be a little doubt that the Oyster gentleman means it all quite sincerely.

In the past he has spent most of his time writing letters about state, local and national scope problems. Now he's in the race, along with State Sen. Sargent Reynolds of Richmond, who has the backing now of Norfolk State Sen. Peter Babalas.

It is doubtful that the field for the second spot on the ticket will stop at these two, especially since Norfolk State Sen. Edward Breeden has done everything but announce that he will run, most likely on a ticket with Lt. Gov. Fred Pollard in the top spot and with Guy Farley of Fairfax in the No. 3 attorney general spot.

Otherwise there are still no tickets, and everybody else so far is an avowed independent. That, of course, is subject to change.

It would appear that the Democratic "dream ticket" that would have either Pollard or William Battle step aside and run for the No. 2 spot can be forgotten. The age of miracles is not dead, however, especially where politics are concerned.

The desperate trial balloon went up in the halls of the State Capitol last week that would endorse a ticket headed by long-time Organization leader and now House of Delegates Speaker John Warren Cooke, with Pollard seeking a second term as Lt. governor and Battle running for attorney general.

While Cooke said he was flattered and the comment from Pollard and Battle was not forthcoming, all indications were that the whole idea was met with an overwhelming surge of apathy usually reserved for a bottle of champagne that's lost its bubbles.

A Democratic ticket with those three gentlemen would be a formidable one. All three are recognized leaders and vote getters. And Cooke's name has been bandied about several times for the top spot.

The major reason this is being tried, obviously, is to stave off a party split, which could give the Republican party in Virginia just the impetus it needs in campaigning for their standard-bearer, the ever popular Linwood Holton. Holton is well-liked and has proved to be a good campaigner and a substantial vote getter. He gave a good accounting of himself in his unsuccessful bid in 1965 against Mills E. Godwin, Jr. that saw the Governor elected without a majority for the first time since 1880.

Conspicuous by the absence of talk about him has been Norfolk State Sen. Henry Howell, also running for the democratic nomination for Governor. Howell is still running hard, not at all worried or interested in all the talk about "dream tickets" "accommodation" or anything else.

His chances of winning the primary are not thought to be exceptional, except by Howell, but he does have the party leadership worried enough to try to stave off a bitter fight and possibly a runoff primary.

The major fight is bound to be between Battle and Pollard, both of whom are drawing support from all factions of the party. While both have said they will support the other in November no matter who wins, a primary split is becoming more and more inevitable as the deadline for filing candidacies nears.

Gov. Godwin has been a strong Virginia Governor and has generally been well-liked and respected for his accomplishments and policies. Traditionally outgoing governors, now still prohibited from running for a second term, stay out of the race of those who seek to succeed him. Neither endorsement nor rejection is ever heard. In the last primary there was no contest, so outgoing Gov. Albertus Harrison had a little easier job.

But not so this time. It is beginning to appear that the only way to send any one of the candidates to the head of the class would be with an endorsement by Gov. Godwin. While it is still doubtful this will happen, he has been extremely interested in some type of harmony and let it be known many times in many ways.

That endorsement could be the only answer. Otherwise it looks like a long hard spring and the fall looks less better.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"Maybe it would be better to adopt her," he mumbled. "Adopt whom?" she asked, almost in a panic. "Those three we already have are enough."

"Our baby sitter," he said. "I'm providing just about as much support as her father. Maybe I could take her off my income tax as a dependent."

"I doubt it," she said, "but we really ought to try to stay home sometime. The kids like her better than they do us."

Home Is Where the Babysitter Is

"I don't think her family would approve, or maybe they would," he said. "I'd better not suggest it. Maybe I could just pay her by the week."

"She told me that she used to have a part-time job, but quit it recently," she said. "Said something about making too much money from us."

"I realize we go out quite a bit," he said. "But when I married you I promised you'd never be bored."

"I thought you meant with your conversation, and I was doubtful about that," she said. "I'd just like to stay home once in awhile and get to know the kids better and where things are in the house. I had to ask the baby sitter where the cat opener was the other day."

"This is really almost unbelievable," he said. "Most wives would envy you... getting to go to all the new plays and movies and the social events of the season."

"Let them try it for awhile," she said. "I'd just like to watch TV one night or maybe go to bed early."

"I wonder if it could be that we're getting old," he mused. "Don't you think that's possible?"

"Don't you dare say that," she said. "You've convinced me. I'm ready to go out any night. But if I collapse, I'll try to do so with my eyes open so I won't embarrass you."

"Thanks," he said. "Tell you what, we'll make a date to stay home. say even two nights of the week. How's that sound?"

"Actually it sounds like you've just asked me for a date," she said. "And it sounds like fun. But will you please tell the baby sitter. She may want to arrange to get her job back on those two nights."

"Sure, I'll tell her," he said. "She was mumbling about not having any time off when I took her home last night. This might make her happy."

"Oh! I forgot to tell you though," she exclaimed. "You'd better get her for the next three nights. We have to go out."

"Why?" he asked quietly, steeling himself for the answer.

"Mother's coming and we'll have to take her out to entertain her," she said.

"You take her out," he said when the shock wore off enough for him to speak again. "I'm moving in with the baby sitter's family."

The second objective of our founding fathers in establishing a constitution was to "secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." The misunderstanding of the word liberty lies at the root of many of our so-called demonstrations and the hostilities engendered therefrom.

Liberty is that point beyond which the government cannot go in enforcing its power and control over an individual. Liberty however, has definite limits from an individual's point of view.

Individual liberty can be expressed in words and actions. In America one can get on a street corner soap-box and express any opinion he wants to, as long as he doesn't interfere with the rights of others to enjoy and use the sidewalk and the street, or purposely instigate harm to others.

America long ago resolved that there is a continuous beneficial cleansing process involved in the free and independent expression of ideas and opinions. The expression of a worthless idea strengthens the convictions of those who have good ideas and the expression of a good idea enables our society to adopt new worthwhile techniques. Either way, our republic is stronger because of the liberty of free expression. A dictatorship lacks this asset and suffers from its absence. Any country is stronger because of the free expression of ideas and opinions which inevitably fosters creativity.

The difficulty in America today is that the limits of liberty are misunderstood. The trouble usually starts when an attempt is made to convert ideas and opinions into actions. If one disagrees with certain aspects of the Democratic National Convention, for example, or certain planks in the platform of the democratic party, he can hold a meeting and express his ideas and opinions to as many people who voluntarily desire to listen to his thoughts.

If he attempts to convert his ideas into action by asking a group to go to Chicago by the hundreds or thousands, this is still all right, he attempts to influence the minds of the delegates to the democratic national convention in an orderly manner to his point of view.

If, however, when such a group arrives in Chicago they block off one of the busiest streets in the city for two or three hours during the rush hours and interfere with the orderly flow of traffic, or if they assemble a threatening crowd and attempt to instigate this crowd against the police by shouting "all police are criminals and should be killed," or some similar positive instigation to harm someone or act mischievously, they have overstepped the bounds of liberty as guaranteed by the Constitution.

By their actions they have affected prejudicially the rights and interests of other persons and society in general. Any government on earth at this point will exercise its authority and enforce the constitutional guarantee of domestic tranquility and eliminate the threat to domestic welfare.

We must never forget that the same constitution which guarantees "the blessings of liberty" also guarantees "domestic tranquility" and an improvement in the "general welfare."

While America cannot tolerate violence, it is not afraid of the free interchange of new ideas and opinions. For it is through this process at work for the past 193 years that this nation has acquired its present strength.

A Moving Story...

It Couldn't Happen...

What would be your reaction if you received a phone call from the startled tenants of a house you owned, and were leasing to them, asking why you didn't notify them you planned to move the house in which they were living?

Then ponder for a moment the difficulty you would have convincing them you had no intentions of moving the house, even though their copy of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN clearly stated the house was indeed going to be moved?

Did you say it can't happen? Well, it can, and did.

Next give thought to the possibility of a legitimate application being made with the Virginia Beach Public Works Department to move the wrong house and this application receiving full approval from members of the Virginia Beach City Council.

Did you say that can't happen either. Wrong again. It can, and did.

Shortly after last week's edition of the SUN hit the streets stating the house at 2305 Pacific Ave. would soon be moved to a location on Old Dam Neck Road, W. V. Morgan, who says he is owner of the house, received that startling phone call from his tenant. Needless to say Mr. Morgan was slightly upset, and rightly so, since he had no intention of moving the house.

It appeared the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN was attempting to move the wrong house. But as we took steps to substantiate our position and clarify the matter, the entire matter became more deeply involved and more confused.

Records on file with the City Public Works Dept., which issues permits for moving houses, show that on Feb. 4 an application was filed to move a house from 2305 Pacific Ave. to Old Dam Neck Road.

This same application from the firm of Heath, DeForas and Heath, on behalf of Vernon J. James was duly read and approved during the Feb. 10 City Council meeting.

However, the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN's investigation shows the application should actually have been filed to move a house from 2205 Pacific Ave. to Old Dam Neck Road.

This was verified by R. S. Marshall, who told the SUN he sold the house to Mr. James for moving as part of plans to expand his place of business, Seaside Market, Mr. Marshall also said he sold the house adjacent to 2205 Pacific Ave., which fronts on 212-A 23rd St., in the same expansion plan. Incidentally, that house at 212-A 23rd St. will be moved to a new location in Seatack. At least the second floor of the two-story house is going to Seatack. What about the first floor? That's going to be torn down after the second floor is jacked up and carted away.

Council approved moving the wrong house on the recommendation of Councilman J. Curtis Payne, who represents the Princess Anne Borough where the house is to be relocated. Payne said he recommended the relocation after the usual inspection of the application and after inspection of the site the house will be placed on. But he apparently also saw a picture of the wrong house, taken after application was made.

Payne said, "I would suggest the building inspector get in touch with the applicant and get it straightened out, or have Council take appropriate action to move the right house".

Payne added that he hoped to clear the matter up in Monday's Council meeting. Jack DeForas, a member of the firm of Heath, DeForas and Heath, who filed the house moving application, said "We will be moving this house at the end of this month. But don't worry, I'm going to move the right house".

Now what about the house at 2305 Pacific Ave.? The property, which is located on a valuable commercial site, now has a "for sale" sign on it. But, it's not going anywhere.

While the house at 2305 Pacific Ave. in the last week may have become the center of confusion, it can still stand with pride in light of one fact. According to a spokesman for the City Planning Commission, the house at 2305 Pacific Ave. is still the only one on the entire street which is numbered correctly.

Through massive errors in years past, all other houses were numbered wrong. All the other odd numbered houses, including 2205 are on the opposite side of the street, contrary to all accepted numbering procedures.

Cmdr. Sledge Gets Medal

Lt. Cmdr. Villard C. Sledge, USN, has received the Navy Commendation Medal with Combat "V" at ceremonies in Atlantic Fleet Naval Air Force headquarters aboard the Norfolk Naval Air Station.

The medal and accompanying citation were presented to Lt. Cmdr. Sledge by Vice Admiral C. T. Booth, Commander Naval Air Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet.

The citation reads in part: "For meritorious service while serving with Commander Fleet Air, Western Pacific Detachment, Republic of Vietnam from Sept. 7, 1967 to Sept. 2, 1968 . . . his outstanding professional, devotion to duty and sense of responsibility were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Lt. Cmdr. Sledge is presently assigned as Assistant Power Plants Officer in the Commander Naval Air Force, U. S.

Atlantic Fleet headquarters aboard the Norfolk Naval Air Station.

He lives with his wife, Dorothy, and their two children at Piney Branch Drive.

Police Seek Gun Owner

Virginia Beach police are seeking help in locating the owner of a revolver which was found last Wednesday on the Princess Anne Country Club Golf Course.

Officials said the weapon is a Smith & Wesson, chrome plated, revolver with a five inch barrel. The serial number is 118350 or 118750. It is estimated the revolver has been exposed to weather and the elements for six to eight months, thus making it difficult to read the serial number. The initials "G.D." are engraved on the crane hinge of the revolver. The rear, or thumb end, of the hammer is broken off. This apparently occurred before the revolver became exposed to weather.

Police officials point out they are only interested in trying to establish the rightful owner of the revolver and if the revolver was possibly lost or stolen.

Anyone believing they may have information concerning the ownership of the revolver should contact the Virginia Beach Police Detective Division, telephone 427-4101.

Companies Sue City For Fees

The City of Virginia Beach is being sued by five development companies for $17,885, which the companies contend is owed to them for refunds on subdivision plat fees.

The firms, Terry Corp. of Va., Fairfield Development Corp., Avalon Hills, Inc., Lu-Mar Development Corp. and Point O'View, Inc., contend the City illegally collected the fees under an ordinance which was declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court of Appeals in September 1958.

The ordinance was enacted by City Council in 1964 establishing a fee of $25 per lot in the recording of subdivision plats.

The suit filed in Circuit Court contends the fees were collected during a period of time from 1955 to 1968. City Council during the Feb. 10 meeting unanimously rejected demands from the companies for refunds.

Students Aid STOP

Seven Virginia Wesleyan College students are going back to elementary school two afternoons each week.

The seven are tutoring sixth graders at the Thrasher House in the East Ghent section of Norfolk. This is one of the STOP (Southeastern Tidewater Opportunity Project) centers in Norfolk. The tutoring is in various areas where the children have weaknesses. The purpose of the program is to better prepare them for entering the junior high school level.

Parents as well as children get into the act at Jett's Petting Zoo. The zoo will be at Pembroke Mall until March 22.

Aviation Support Equipment Technician 3. C. Stanley I. Long, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Long of Larry Avenue is serving aboard the attack aircraft carrier USS Hancock in Alameda, Calif.

Marine Sgt. John G. Osterhouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Osterhouse of Pleasant House Road is serving with Headquarters Battalion, First Marine Division in Vietnam.

This Grandmother Puts Talents to Use

By Yatta Jones

Because of its location, potential for growth and dynamic vitality, Virginia Beach attracts thousands of new residents each year. One of these newcomers is Mrs. Thelma A. Barrett.

Mrs. Barrett moved here in November 1968. Although she is a native of New Orleans, Mrs. Barrett moved to Virginia Beach from Baltimore, Md., where she had lived. Her decision to move was based upon visits to the area.

She was interested in the Edgar Cayce Readings and took part in a summer session here. At that time she started thinking about moving closer. Now that she is here she says, "I love it...it's the last move I intend to make."

Mrs. Barrett lives in Bay Colony with her youngest daughter, who is 25. Her oldest daughter, who lives in Baltimore, has three children. This makes Mrs. Barrett a grandmother—and a more lovely, vivacious grandmother is hard to imagine.

She is a fortunate woman, for during the short time she has been here, she has been able to find work for which she has been trained. She works for John Robert Powers Finishing and Modeling School as a teacher and lecturer. She also gives lectures to various clubs and organizations. In addition to this, Mrs. Barrett is a professional model.

Although she has held many varied jobs, such as being a home economist for Maytag, writing greeting card verses and editing a business newsletter, Mrs. Barrett has been most involved in related areas of fashion work. In this field she has worked as fashion coordinator, public relations director, charm school director and model.

A big interest in the field of fashion for her is hats. She was the commentator for the Ad Hatter's Ball in Baltimore. She is very happy to see hats coming back into vogue. "Hat-lessness got started during the war when we had to do without a lot of things," she says, "and hair styles became high, extremely bouffant." She sees the "planter's hat" as the beginning of the hat comeback, with a little help from Jackie Kennedy Onassis.

Mrs. Barrett has some good pointers for anyone considering the purchase of a hat. "In buying a hat you should see your whole self in a full-length mirror. Don't depend on the small millinery mirror...your body and facial construction are both important in making your choice."

Another point is the width of the crown of the hat—it should be as wide as your cheekbones and no narrower. Women should try experimenting with their hats also. She suggests tilting them to the right or left, or wearing them down on the forehead more.

One question Mrs. Barrett is asked frequently by teenagers is, "How do you sit down in a mini-skirt?" Her answer, "Very carefully," is more than a pun, for sitting in a mini-skirt is a careful process. The first consideration is in dressing; panty hose or tights should always be worn with minis. Next, the knees should be kept together when sitting. The final consideration is to tuck the sides of the skirt close to the legs. With these tips in mind, Mrs. Barrett says you can successfully sit down in a mini-skirt.

Today's fashion outlook is an exciting one in Mrs. Barrett's opinion. "The most marvelous thing in the world is to be alive today in fashion," she says, "because you can do what you want...I like being able to dress to your own desires, or creative needs." She feels that this is true in men's fashions as well as women's fashions.

Since she has been here Mrs. Barrett has spent time researching and studying Cayce's Readings. She is very interested in Cayce; she thinks his philosophy is down-to-earth. She urban Juniors. They have been helping the Pre-School of Hearing Impaired Children at Old Dominion College for a number of years. In the beginning they helped pay the salary for the school's teacher and have since done everything from making curtains, putting down flooring and rugs to purchasing equipment for the class.

Juniors Begin Hearing Check

"One of every ten four-year-olds suffers from a hidden hearing impairment. But now a simple screening test can help remedy the damage before it becomes a permanent handicap."

The above statement was taken from a copy of the March, 1968 Readers Digest. The Suburban Junior Woman's Club in cooperation with the Easter Seal Society is in the early stages of setting up a "Verbal Auditory Screen for Children" (VASC) in Tidewater.

In the past few years so much has been learned about helping these children and now help in many forms can be obtained if these children can be found early.

Junior Woman's Club will begin testing children at Everett School (First testing in Virginia Beach). This is the first big step in our area to find the child who needs help because of a hearing problem.

These volunteers have been trained by the Easter Seal Society under the direction of Dr. Ralph Bralley, staff University of Virginia Medical School, the state Director for VASC, with the approval of Dr. J. Parker Cross, Jr., a local ear, nose and throat specialist.

There will be no charge. This is a community service.

The test is very simple and takes about 5 minutes per child. A re-test will be made at a later date of any child in question before he is referred to a physician. The Suburban Junior Woman's Club must have written permission from the school and a statement requesting the hearing screening test.

If a school wishes to have this service or would like further information, contact Mrs. D. M. Dale or Mrs. E. C. Stone, Suburban Junior chairman for Hearing Screening.

The club hopes in time to cover all private schools, nurseries and four and five year olds in the area.

Sub Wives Schedule Art Show

In the spring of the year a young man's fancy may turn to thoughts of love, but members of the Submarine Officers' Wives Club of Norfolk begin to think of art.

This year, as they have for the past five years, members of the Club will sponsor a Spring Art Show to be held March 28 - 30 in McCormick Center at the Destroyer-Submarine Piers on Hampton Blvd.

All Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard personnel, active and retired and their dependents are invited to submit paintings.

Club Schedules Love-In

Love has many faces, but organizations such as the Suburban Junior Woman's Club see only the one that shows unselfish work for others in its eyes and expression.

The Suburban Junior Woman's Club will sponsor a "Love-In" on March 29 (Saturday at 7:30 p.m.) at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lionel James Casey, 5404

Sherlock Road, to celebrate the work the club has done and is doing for the community.

Members and husbands will don costumes of bibles and flower children. This fun affair will point up that love is giving freely to family, God, country and in seeking to do good for them.

Let Them Comb It!

I'm under orders from both my husband and my mother not to cut the six-year-old's hair again. They aren't the ones that have to do something with it, though.

When it was cut the last time it had grown longer than ever before—it almost covered her ear lobes. Then, unfortunately, she split the back of her head open last summer and it was shaved to sew up the cut. It looked better to have it all short than to have the one bald spot among the longer hair so she got a "pixie."

It has now reached the "stick out in all directions" stage. There aren't two strands the same length.

Her hair problems started when she was born absolutely bald. And she stayed that way for almost two years.

What hair she had was very fine and very thin—also very straight. I tried the hair set for babies but to no avail. Curlers were out—there wasn't enough hair to hold them.

Everybody told me to wait until she was older, that her hair would thicken up and become coarser. Little did they know Susie! I'm still waiting.

When she was about four her hair had reached a decent length for the first time, although it didn't do anything except just hang there. Then her sister scalped her. She didn't do a very thorough job of it either, just up one side. So I had to even it up as best I could on the other side. It wasn't touched again, except trimming bangs, until the accident last summer.

Nobody realized the difference particularly until we got her class pictures last week and my husband and mother compared them to last year's when her stringy locks hung limply over her ears. They liked it that way, but they didn't have to comb out the tangles.

And to compound the problem are the brother and sister. The older sister not only has long, thick hair, but it's curly. Her little brother's hair is so thick it's almost unmanageable. He wants his to grow long so he can be a Beatle. He may succeed before Susie.

Drugs Are Topic For Panel

The Virginia Beach Council of Federated Women's Clubs will present a panel-discussion program on "Drugs" at the Shore Drive Inn on Wednesday, March 26, 10:30 a.m.

In convention in June, 1968, the General Federation of Women's Clubs adopted a resolution to support the U. S. Bureau of Narcotics in furthering its program of medical and sociological information regarding marijuana; to urge the eradication and growth of marijuana and support state efforts to carry out such programs; to urge schools and college authorities to disseminate information regarding the dangers in the use of marijuana; and to recommend that adequate funds be provided at all levels of government to ensure enforcement of penalties for illicit traffic in marijuana.

The Council has invited the Rev. John Giminez from Proclaim, the non-sectarian, non-profit organization whose objective is "to reach young people with a reality truer than that provided by drugs." Frank Tarrell, assistant superintendent of Virginia Beach City Schools; and Lt. Henry Capps, Virginia Beach Police Department, to speak and answer questions concerning the prevalent and extremely damaging use of drugs by today's youth and adults. Mrs. George Aldridge, Health Chairman of Tidewater District, Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, will moderate.

Members of all Federated women's clubs, their friends and interested citizens are invited to attend. Coffee will be served beginning at 10 a.m.

'They Consider Themselves Americans'

"When we're speaking of South America, we're speaking of duty—to a people that are related to us under God."

Thus, Susan Marshall concluded her talk on the student exchange program which gave her the opportunity to spend last summer in Brazil. A Princess Anne High School senior she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Marshall of Ewell Road.

Members of the Cape Henry Women's Club last Thursday were pleasantly surprised at the poise and maturity shown by Miss Marshall and the two South American exchange students who spoke to the group. The other two students were Christina Morales from Argentina and Philip Gonzales from Columbia.

"Even if I had taken six years of English, I couldn't have understood it when I got off the plane in Miami," said Miss Morales. "Everybody spoke so fast."

She said she was very surprised at getting off the plane in Norfolk and seeing dancing girls at the airport. "Then I found out they were cheerleaders."

Miss Morales is impressed with American food. In fact she likes it better than the food she eats at home. "I wish I could take doughnuts and French fries home with me. I never had a hamburger until I got here."

Gonzales brought a number of souvenirs from his country to show the club members. He said he did not expect to be selected for the exchange program, since he had already finished high school in Columbia. "The United States is a beautiful country. Everybody dreams of coming here some day, and now I've realized my dream."

Miss Marshall said that Rio de Janeiro is a city of contrasts which has never been struck by a natural disaster. "There's a saying there that God is Brazilian. After living there I could almost believe it."

She said that the people are either rich or poor with no middle class and that two percent of the population has 99 percent of the wealth. "It's a strict two class population, but the wealth is subtle. You don't see it, but you sense it from the thickness of the carpet, the jewelry that's kept in a safe, the heavy silverware. It's a quiet dignified wealth."

Mansions stand side by side with hovels there. "They're all together. The people are very casual about it."

"I know Harlem is bad and Chicago is worse, but you see cars parked in those slums. You don't in Rio. If ever I should go into some field of social work it would be there," said Miss Marshall.

"Strangely enough these slums have a beauty of their own. The government gave lights to the poor people and each house is lighted at night. There's no describing the sight of the twinkling lights on the mountains at night."

She said that in Brazil students are taught that there are four continents instead of five, that they consider North and South America as one continent. "They consider themselves Americans. We know so little about their countries. There are so many things we don't know that we should know. They have a lot to offer us in architecture, art, music, etc. Ask any Brazilian and he'll tell you that Richard Nixon is president of the United States. But which of you knows who is president of Brazil?"

During the business meeting officers for 1969-70 were elected. Taking office in April will be Mrs. Earl W. Learnard, president; Mrs. C. Earl Evans, first vice president; Mrs. Clarence H. Groceman, second vice president; Mrs. Ralph E. Hoskins, third vice president; Mrs. Paul L. Chevalier Jr., recording secretary, and Mrs. J. J. Basgier, treasurer.

Love has many faces, but organizations such as the Suburban Junior Woman's Club see only the one that shows unselfish work for others in its eyes and expression.

HERE COMES OLGA!

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Foley held their annual St. Patrick's party Saturday night at The Cavalier. Each year this party seems to grow in attendance and I can well understand why it would.

Coleen and Bill Foley are such wonderful people to be around and there is never a dull moment where they are. At this party there must have been about 300 people and you would see Coleen and Bill going around to tables seeing that their guests were enjoying themselves and had everything they needed to make the party a success.

The ball room was beautifully decorated, naturally, in bright green and white. From the chandeliers were streamers of white and green crepe paper with big green and white paper balls nestled in the chandelier openings. On each table were green hats for the men and white crowns for the women with a green shamrock standing high in the front with the words "Erin Go Brach." These words mean "Ireland Forever." Also on each table was a shamrock for both men and women to pin on them.

Behind the band stand was this very large green shamrock with a little Irish girl and boy painted in the center running through a field of shamrocks. To the side of the band stand was a large white shamrock with the name "Foleys" in very large letters of green. All around the walls were shamrocks, little elves and Irish flags with shamrocks in between. As the night progressed balloons were cut loose all over the room.

I have noticed each year that I have covered these parties that the crowd really gets into the swing of things. Everyone dances and when they aren't dancing they are not sitting around like they are lost; they are talking, laughing and visiting tables and really move around until everyone gets to know one another.

One of the tables that really seemed to be having fun included: Mr. and Mrs. William T. McGannon, Mr. and Mrs. V. Russo, Capt. and Mrs. V. Diaz, Jr., R. Foley, John Lilley, Mr. and Mrs. Ian Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. McGarvey, Mr. and Mrs. William Krause, Capt. and Mrs. William Stott, Capt. and Mrs. Don McKenzie and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Adams.

The band played an Irish jig, and surprising as it might seem, the floor was crowded. There were many who knew the Irish jig and those that didn't were at least trying to do it by watching some of those who did. This little dance, believe me, takes a lot of energy and fortitude. When you are through you really know you have been jumping around.

As I moved around the tables I found some of the Virginia Beach people including Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mauch, Mr. and Mrs. Rick Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wolcott, Mr. and Mrs. Garland Caffee, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Karczewski, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Byers, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gee, Mrs. Gus Riganto, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Webber, Mr. and Mrs. William Kellam, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Pete Murden, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Murden, Mr. and Mrs. George Miller and Mr. and Mrs. H. Moore.

I was glad to see friends of mine that I have not seen for many a year—Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Gifford.

Mrs. William Foley was very attractively dressed in a long green formal green shoes and long drop earrings with a large stone of green on the bottom. Her hair was very neatly done with long curls to the back of the head.

Each year after the party the guests are asked to the Foley's home on Sunday. This year I decided I would follow the party all the way through. On Sunday I went to the house about 2 p.m. When I walked in everyone was around the table eating. In the center of the table was a beautiful flower centerpiece of green and white. Around it were green canes with little Irish men with big green hats, napkins and tablecloth of green.

Most of the people were very quiet sitting around talking but some were playing pool. The bar room was decorated in shamrocks with green crepe paper in streamers from one end of the room to the other. In fact almost anywhere you looked in the house you would certainly know that this was a St. Patrick's party.

Well, Bill and Coleen, another St. Patty's day and another wonderful party.

Grandmother

calls his philosophy "a commonsense approach in learning to live with oneself...He stresses the fact that you have to know yourself first before you can correct problems around you". Another important point to be found in Cayce, according to Mrs. Barrett, is the stress on moderation and balance in living.

"It's another type of self-improvement program", she comments, "and everything I've done is involved with this as a background."

Mrs. Barrett is involved in a self-improvement program right now—she teaches a charm class at the Seaside Community Center for 15 girls, ages 11-17. In the class periods she emphasizes good grooming, posture, manners, art appreciation and voice quality.

This is not the first time Mrs. Barrett has worked for the community she lives in. When she was in Baltimore and she taught a charm class at Johns Hopkins Hospital for mental patients, it was a successful program, and plans are underway for a similar program in this area. Mrs. Barrett says that it is very important for the patients to think well of themselves.

Mrs. Barrett does not feel that she is a "do-gooder" in contributing her time, energy and talents to projects such as these. Instead, it is a satisfying experience for her. "I like to think of myself as the new breed of grandmother...I meet many women who want to do something worthwhile and constructive...There are a lot of us with talents, even though we may not have used them for years." She enjoys what she is doing and hopes that her example will stimulate other people to use their own ideas and put to use their creative interests.

Let's hope so...any community could consider itself fortunate having grandmothers like Mrs. Barrett take an active interest in it.

Hors d'oeuvres, served mid-week and for no special reason, lend an instantaneous party atmosphere. Stuff celery stalks with cheese spread. Blend 1 cup creamy cottage cheese with 1/2 cup crumbled American blue cheese. Add to mixture 1 tablespoon horseradish.

Enjoying St. Patty's Day with the Foley's party were Mrs. William T. McGannon and her husband, Mrs. Robert Foley, Miss Theresa Walsh and Miss Joanna LaFrance.

WSCS Annual Meeting Set

"Our Day -- Opportunity and Challenge" will be the theme for the day when the women of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Norfolk District hold their Annual Meeting on Tuesday March 25. The district includes 20 Virginia Beach churches.

The meeting begins at 10 a.m. and will be held at St. John's United Methodist Church, 2709 Greendale Ave. in the Camellia Shores Section of Norfolk.

Dr. Roy E. Bishop, associate minister of Epworth United Methodist Church, will be the speaker. Dr. Bishop is a native Virginian and was educated at Randolph Macon College in Ashland. He served as a chaplain in the Navy until his retirement about four years ago with the rank of captain.

Since his retirement he has been active in the work of the Methodist Church. He served for a time as minister at Community United Methodist Church in Kempville. At Epworth he is associate minister in charge of parish visitation. Dr. Bishop is much in demand as a speaker in the Tidewater area and this is a real opportunity for those who will hear him.

Hot Cross Buns Are Tradition

Hot Cross Buns are cheery coffee companions throughout Lent from Ash Wednesday right up until Easter. Although fruit-stuffed "cross buns" are now a thoroughly Christian symbol, they originated in pagan times.

The early Egyptians began marking cakes with the sign of horns to offer to their moon goddess. Horn-imprinted cakes were also popular with the Greeks who presented them to Astarte and many other deities. It is said that when the horn marking first changed to a cross, it was symbolic of the four quarters of the moon. Later on, bread with crosses was served by Romans at sacrificial feasts, and Saxons baked cross-loaves to honor Easter, the goddess of light.

However, the authentic Hot Cross Bun, as we know it, was created in Merry Old England. During the 1700's, in Devon and Worcestershire, cross buns were hung from the beams of cottages as protection against fire, mice, moths and other catastrophes. The most famous bakery was the Old Original Royal Bun House of Chelsea. According to the historians, crowds rushed to the "royal bun house" and stood in line for hot cross Chelsea buns from six in the morning until six at night. The buns were so popular that pastry cooks and bakers had competitions to see who could produce the best ones. Peddlers of buns were overly enthusiastic in selling their wares and Londoners began complaining that they were awakened by the bun-seller's cry in the wee hours of the morning.

Though we don't claim that our Hot Cross Buns have miraculous powers or will cause riots, we do promise that they have wonderful old-fashioned goodness without old-fashioned fuss. What's more, the addition of a little instant coffee powder actually enhances the color and flavor of the buns. Oh, yes, and do serve them hot with pats of butter and marmalade.

Good coffee, like Hot Cross Buns, must be freshly-made to be appreciated. While your buns are baking, start brewing a large potful of coffee for the mid-morning kaffeeklatsch. Use cold water straight from the tap, a clean coffee maker and this excellent brewing formula: One Approved Coffee Measure (equal to two level measuring tablespoons) of coffee to each six ounces of water per serving. Serve immediately after brewing at peak flavor and aroma.

a fork. Knead on lightly floured board for several minutes, until dough is elastic. Form into 16 balls, place close together in baking pan. Combine egg yolk and water; beat slightly with fork; brush over top of buns. Bake at 450 degrees F. for 15 to 18 minutes. Serve hot, or if desired cool and decorate with crosses of confectioners' sugar icing. Makes 16 buns.

Cards, Fashions, Lunch Set

The Virginia Beach Ballet Society will sponsor a bridge luncheon and fashion show March 25 at Ft. Story Officers Club beginning at 10 a.m.

Fashions will be from Rose Hall. There will be a number of door prizes including a silver service.

Tickets, for $2, will be available at the door or by calling Mrs. Gardner or Mrs. Lussan at 428-8936. Europeans have been doing it for years - following a big meal with small portions of cheese and fruit. It's a dessert so simple, yet so elegant that princes and paupers alike claim it for their own. Try serving mellow American blue cheese with oranges, apples and other seasonal fruits. It's a wonderful heritage from our forebears.

Auxiliary Meets

Banana Splits to Appear Here

NBC's Tidewater affiliate, WAVY Television, will present the Saturday morning children's favorite, the Banana Splits, on Saturday, March 29 at the Virginia Beach Civic Center.

The Banana Splits - Fleegle, Bingo, Snorky, and Drooper - are four rock musicians and comedians whose lives evolve around a "happening" place called the Banana Pad, Fleegle (dog), cool and authoritative, is spokesman and front man of the group. While usually in command of every situation, he is always a little frustrated by the behavior of the others. A born leader and organizer, Fleegle is not as bright as he thinks. When the group is performing, Fleegle plays guitar and sings lead. Off-stage, he considers himself a Don Juan, which results in an ego problem.

Snorky (elephant) is the runt of the litter and the Splits' organist. A lovable non-talker, he is forever getting into trouble. He is always late, seldom does anything right and is always blamed for everything.

Bingo (gorilla), the drummer of the Splits, is a good-natured, easy-going simple fellow. Because of his ignorance of his great strength, he is forever breaking things around the pad. Bingo is assigned all the heavy tasks, but because of his muscles, he usually smashes everything he attempts to clean or move.

Drooper (lion), the smooth-talking guitarist, is an ultra-hippy who is always on, always cool, and always attempting to con someone.

Here is your opportunity to see them in person at the Virginia Beach Civic Center. Don't forget: Saturday, March 29, 1969, for three performances beginning at 10:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m., and 3:30 p.m. Tickets may be purchased for $1.50 per person at the following ticket locations: Virginia Beach Civic Center, Wards Corner Record Shop, Clothes Horse in Portsmouth, Clayton's Men Shop at Newmarket Shopping Center on the Peninsula, the Red Barn on the Peninsula, and the Ticket Stall at Pembroke Mall.

Guy Makes It Official

One candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates has made it official. Richard Guy, who announced that he would run several weeks ago subject to the July Democratic primary, has now filed his declaration of candidacy with the chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee.

At the same time Guy said that since announcing his intention to run he has been "greatly encouraged" by the many offers of support he has received. He said those offers came from a number of different segments of the city's population.

Guy said it appeared to him that economics would be one of the main issues in the campaign, as well as area-wide cooperation and the "willingness and ability of our elected representatives to provide the aggressive, imaginative leadership in legislative matters that Virginia Beach so badly needs."

He also said, "Virginia Beach is having to get along with very substantially less representation than its present population warrants."

He said the city of Virginia

Guy

Beach's population has increased by 100 per cent since 1960, and that it will be necessary for the city's two newly elected delegates to do the work of four until the General Assembly is reapportioned in 1972.

"The question of the extent to which our delegates will involve themselves in affairs of government is particularly important at this time," said Guy.

An Actor Reflects on Acting

A very distinguished and agreeable gentleman visited the area last week. The visitor was Robert Ryan, the star of many motion pictures and theatre productions.

Ryan was at Lake Wright Playhouse to present the Actor's Equity Seal of Professional Theatre to Lake Wright. Timothy J. Jones, producer and director of the Playhouse, and Ernie Price, business manager, accepted the award.

In presenting the award Ryan praised the Lake Wright Playhouse facilities. Lake Wright was the first theatre in the area to join the professional actors union.

The visit was a short one for Robert Ryan; he left right after the presentation to fly to Columbus, Ga. to visit his aunt. But while he was here he talked quite freely to those attending the presentation.

He obviously enjoyed talking about his family. He has two boys, ages 23 and 21, and a 17-year-old girl. He was asked if the boys were interested in acting and he replied, "No, one is interested in writing and one in directing...it's just as well, they don't have any talent, not in acting."

He says that his daughter is a talented artist, but right now she keeps the household in an uproar. "A different boyfriend every week," he grinned.

Ryan was asked if he had to spend much time away from his family. He said that in the beginning, when the children needed him most, he was able to be there. "It was a nine to five job making motion pictures then...it has only been within the last few years that acting requires so much traveling."

Right now Ryan plans to spend the summer and fall with his wife of 30 years building a house in New Hampshire.

There were several questions asked about the acting profession. One question was "What part does luck play in an actor's success?" Ryan's answer was, "Luck is getting into something that will get you recognized."

He was asked if actors were better or worse than they used to be. Ryan said that although there were not as many individuals in the acting profession--they tend to look alike--the acting level is higher. He feels that this is probably due to the excellent training actors receive now. He emphasized the lack of individuality by saying, "You never mistook James Cagney for Clark Gable...even my children have admitted that actors look alike today."

Ryan recalled some of his past performances with a short, humorous statement, "If I kissed a girl, I got shot." He said his favorite leading lady was Katherine Hepburn.

One question that was asked (Ryan says everybody asks the same question) was "What do you think of lewdity and nudity in films. He answered, "It's a dead-end street...they can only get so nude...it's done purely to sell the picture...there is no other value involved...we'll come to the end of it soon, the public will get bored."

Ryan has a big love in his heart for the United States. "We're a really great country...you realize it when you're away so much." He feels that it is a citizen's obligation to be interested in politics. "You should make an effort to get people you want in office."

At the beginning of the 1968 Presidential Campaign Ryan actively worked for McCarthy in the New Hampshire primary. He admits that well-known people working in politics serve as "shills." "But," he said, "you have to get the people there before you can get their interest."

Hahn to Speak On March 25

The Virginia Beach Jaycees will have a dinner meeting on March 25. Guest speaker will be Dr. T. Marshall Hahn, president of Virginia Tech and chairman of the Virginia Metropolitan Areas Study Commission.

The meeting will be held at the Black Angus Restaurant on Pacific Avenue. Cocktails will be served from 7 until 7:30 p.m., followed by dinner.

Plans for Park Expected

Ben Bolen, state parks commissioner, is expected to reveal detailed plans for the proposed False Cape State Park when he speaks at the meeting of the Good Government Association here on March 25.

Bolen will speak before the group at 7:30 p.m. at Linkhorn Park Elementary School on Laskin Road. In addition to Bolen there will be two of his assistants there to discuss plans for the park.

The park is to be located on 4,400 acres of land along the beach south of Sandbridge from the southern boundaries of the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge to the North Carolina state line.

Virginia Beach city council has opposed the plan in a resolution passed Feb. 24. Their objections were that the park would cause the city to lose

Property Fate Still Undecided

The Board of Survey has finished their work on the decommissioned 24th Street Coast Guard Life Saving Station and their report has been sent to the Coast Guard Commandant in Washington, D.C.

At this point the recommendations of the Board have not been made public. The Commandant is expected to finish with the report and forward it to General Services for disposal in a month or six weeks.

a considerable amount of money in taxes and the acquisition of the land would add to state and federal ownership of waterfront property. At the present government agencies own 43 percent of the city's oceanfront.

The state has 976 acres of the land to be developed into the park and is negotiating for most of the rest of the property.

Bolen has said that a lack of communication between the city and state is the basis of the opposition. He has met with Mayor Frank Dusch and Asst. City Manager David Norman to apologize for this failure.

Demo Club Elects Officers

The Bayside Democratic Club met on Feb. 24 to elect officers. The meeting, which was held at Ocean Park Fire House, was attended by residents of the Bayside Borough.

Officers elected were: James C. Donnelly, president; Richard F. Broudy, vice president; Johnny Strickland, secretary; and H. Bates Reese, treasurer.

The next meeting will be held March 27, 8 p.m., at the Ocean Park Fire House. Bayshore residents are invited to join and become charter members.

Architect's rendering of Phase One of Haygood Shopping Center. Lee A. Gifford is the developer.

New Shopping Center Begins

Virginia Beach Mayor Frank Dusch officiated Wednesday afternoon at groundbreaking ceremonies of Haygood Shopping Center at the southeast intersection of Haygood Road and Independence Blvd. A number of other city officials and Linda Phillips, Miss Virginia Beach, also attended the ceremony.

The 30-acre tract is being developed by Lee A. Gifford, who has developed a number of other commercial and housing areas in Virginia Beach, especially in the Bayside section. The new shopping center, being leased by Goodman-Segar-Hogan, Inc., will serve a total of 9,000 homes in the Bayside area of the city.

Architects Spigel, Carter, Zink and Herman of Norfolk have designed Haygood Shopping Center with a Colonial influence to complement the surrounding community.

The site for the center has been set for more than two years, but until recently no tenants were announced. The first phase will be highlighted by a 40,500 square foot Roses Junior Dept. Store. Other principal tenants will be A & P, Peoples Drug Store and Virginia National Bank. Representatives of those establishments were also on hand for the groundbreaking.

Other tenants will include a barber shop, beauty shop, ice cream store, an ABC package store and an appliance store, as well as a number of professional offices.

A second phase of the shopping center will include men's and ladies' ready-to-wear stores in a "fashion village", along with specialty and family shoe stores. It is anticipated that a second department store

Federation Will Meet

The Virginia Federation of the Council for Exceptional Children will hold its annual convention March 21-22 at The Cavalier.

Registration for the convention will begin at 9 a.m. on March 21, with the keynote speech delivered at 11 a.m. by Dr. Frances P. Connor, chairman of the Department of Special Education, Teachers College, Columbia University. A banquet is scheduled for Friday night, which will feature special entertainment by the Hampton School for the Deaf Speaking Choir.

Saturday's sessions will open at 9 a.m. Dr. Michael Marge, director of the division of planning and evaluation for the Bureau of the Handicapped will be the first speaker. Workshops will then be held from 10:30 a.m. until noon.

will also be included in this phase. When completed, the center will contain about 200,000 square feet of retail space and ample parking areas.

Haygood Shopping Center is expected to open in the early fall of 1969, about the same time that the widening of Independence Blvd. in the area is also scheduled to be completed.

Prior to the groundbreaking ceremonies, a luncheon was held for officials, principals and the press at the Shore Drive Inn.

A forensics contest will take place tomorrow in the auditorium.

Students Will Attend Concert

Children from four Virginia Beach schools are scheduled to attend a special concert at the Civic Center tomorrow at 10:30 a.m.

The concert is being presented by the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra, featuring the Little Symphony. The Little Symphony is similar to a chamber music group.

um, P. A. students will vie for first places in the field of poetry, prose and extraneous speech recitations.

Cox Wins Superior Rating

Cox High School won a superior rating in the District 2-A band festival held March 14 and 15 at Lake Taylor High School. Virginia Beach schools which won an excellent rating are: Kemps Landing Intermediate School; Kempsville and Virginia Beach junior high schools; and Kempsville, Bayside and Princess Anne high schools.

Schools receiving a good rating are: Bettie F. Williams Elementary; Cox and Kellam seventh and eighth grades; and Kellam and First Colonial high schools.

The schools were judged by Frederick C. Ebbs of Indiana University, Dr. C. L. Kingsbury of Marshall University and Dr. Louis Wersen of Philadelphia Public Schools.

Dogs, owners, judges and spectators stop for a picture taken. They all participated in the event, which took place in Glenn Wilson's backyard on March 15.

Holiday Goes to the Dogs

Last Friday when children all over Virginia Beach were out of school, and probably pestering their mothers to distraction, Glenn Wilson took advantage of the one day vacation and staged a dog show in his back yard.

Glenn, who lives in Chesapeake Colony, is a fifth grader at King's Grant Elementary school. He started his project by doing what any good showman does...he advertised. He made posters and had friends spread the word throughout the school.

There was an entry fee of 10 cents for each dog. The only rules were that the dogs had to be on a leash and the owners had to bring their own water bowls.

It was a smooth operation, and Friday at 1 p.m. everyone met in Glenn's backyard for the show. Well, maybe there was a little confusion, but nothing Glenn couldn't handle.

The judges—Bill Stanley, Keith Schachle, Mark Forlines and Scott Moser—judged the dogs on show, tricks, obedience and how well they jumped. (Two girl spectators, Kathy Soscia and Diane Marchione, insisted that they were judges too, but the boys would not acknowledge them.)

The dogs who were entered and their owners were: Cretchen von Ritzbach by Tracy Thomas, Gidget by Jimmy Pankiewicz, Sam Payne by Matt Payne, Shanny by Bobby Henegar and Trixie by Melanie Payne.

Oh, yes, they were a gracious gathering, too. The reporter was not allowed to leave without having some orange kool-aid. It was delicious.

Marine Lt. Col. Carl E. Buchmann of Omaha Road, serving as Judge Advocate of Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic (FMFLANT) in Norfolk, recently received a Certificate of Commendation and congratulations from Maj. General Norman J. Anderson, Force Deputy Commander, for the colonel's outstanding performance of duty since his arrival at FMFLANT headquarters in June 1968. Col. Buchmann is to be reassigned to duty in the Republic of Vietnam.

Seniors Set Blood Record

Princess Anne High School seniors donated 147 pints of blood to the Red Cross March 13 during a bloodmobile visit to the school.

The 147 pints of blood were donated by 250 eligible students. The donation is a record for Tidewater high schools. According to Robert Holt, director of the blood program, Princess Anne broke their own record of 98 pints, which was set last year.

The bloodmobile visit was sponsored by the Bible Club of Princess Anne.

Marine Pfc. Barry N. Lloyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Lloyd of Beryl Avenue, has completed recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot here, graduating as "outstanding recruit of his platoon series of some 75 men. With the honor goes a Dress Blue uniform presented by Leatherneck Magazine, and a meritorious promotion to private first class.

City Council met last night in private session to discuss the $45 million budget presented officially to members Monday by City Manager Roger Scott. The private staff briefing with Council was attended by Personnel Director E. A. Culverhouse, Assistant City Manager David Norman and Assistant to the City Manager for Finance Giles Dodd. Scott said the meeting was to discuss the budget generally, and that if Councilmen wished to talk with other city department heads they could call them to future briefings. He also said the briefing excluded the press so that there could be more freedom of expression by all concerned.

What was discussed was expected to be much the same as was discussed at Monday's City Council regular meeting. Cutting the budget came up for a great deal of discussion Monday even before it was presented by Scott and before a public hearing on the budget was set for 10 a.m. Monday, April 14.

Tied to the budget was also the current controversy over real estate appraisals citywide. Discussion on that also was rather full at the meeting. Councilman George Ferrell introduced his much-heralded resolution that he said was not a "slap in the face to the City Manager" as had been implied. He said he was concerned about the rising cost of government and favored economy and fiscal responsibility.

The resolution called for a budget cut of up to five percent and the staying of the effect of the new real estate tax appraisals until after state appraisers could be brought in to study those made by the city assessors. The resolution, following a full airing, was defeated 6-3. Only Ferrell, Albert Bonney and Mayor Frank Dusch favored the resolution. Lawrence Marshall abstained.

Scott's budget calls for a ten-cent per $100 valuation increase in the real estate tax rate, in addition to the new appraisals, which he estimated would bring in about $2 million in additional revenue.

Councilman Curtis Payne said he favored cutting the rate by 20 to 30 cents instead and alluded to a plan he would introduce to accomplish this, but did not offer any specific suggestions.

Most members of City Council

seemed to agree that there might be some errors or inequities in the new real estate appraisals, but said they felt the individual cases could be worked out by Chief Assessor William Connell and his staff. Connell agreed and said there were less complaints now than with the 67 per cent tax increase last year.

Payne said he did not see any need for the resolution, especially since the same intent was likely to be carried out as a result of the budget staff briefings.

City Treas. V. A. Etheridge expressed his concern over the distribution of the new tax bills, due June 10. He said he needed as much time as possible to get the 60,000 bills out and hoped for 30 days prior to that date.

He also suggested sharp trimming of the budget, combined with a one-time windfall of collecting property taxes on June 10, 1970, instead of Dec. 5, as has been the practice. He said that for the reduction of the assessment rate from 60 to 50 per cent. He pointed out that the law says the reassessment must take place, but says nothing about the necessity of raising the assessments.

Etheridge said he had not seen the budget and could not point out specific cuts to be made.

"Although I am Treasurer of the city of Virginia Beach, I was not afforded that courtesy," Etheridge told Council.

Ferrell said he would like to see Etheridge's proposals on paper.

Boy's Condition Improves

A 16-year-old boy received severe head injuries in a Tuesday morning traffic accident near the intersection of 23rd Street and Mediterranean Avenue.

According to police investigators the youth, identified as Clayborn Dean Griffin, was walking with a group of students to Virginia Beach Junior High School at the time. The group moved to the side of the street in single file when a school bus approached.

The driver of the school bus is quoted with saying she heard a noise, like something struck the bus, as she passed the group and looking back saw the students gathered around young Griffin who was lying in a ditch.

Griffin, whose parents were listed as the Delbert Skaggs of Virginia Avenue, on Wednesday was listed as being in very serious condition but showing improvement and had been transferred from the intensive care unit of Portsmouth Naval Hospital.

At the SUN's press time police were still continuing their investigation into circumstances surrounding the accident.

Inlet Plans Commended

City Council commended developer Wayne McLeskey Monday for his work in the development of property at Rudee Inlet. McLeskey presented to Council his plans for a motel and marina on the south side of the inlet.

Some months ago Council approved a use permit for the 74-slip marina and for the 200-plus unit high-rise motel to be built across from the city's temporary marina and just west of the high-level bridge connecting Pacific Avenue with General Booth Blvd.

McLeskey said plans now call for construction to begin on the $300,000 marina and related facilities in about two weeks. He said some boats would be able to use the marina by mid-June but that completion would not come until fall. The $3 million motel will be started about a year later, according to McLeskey.

Council also passed a resolution that was requested by the city's constitutional officers. The resolution paves the way for hearings before the State Compensation Board, which pays half of the salaries of the Constitutional officers. They are requesting a raise to the next higher salary bracket because of the jump in population in Virginia Beach since the 1960 census. The hearing and raise are provided for by law.

The resolution asks that the recent population figures, showing the city to be far above the old "less than 100,000" category, be accepted as a basis for the salaries.

Little Activity Noted

Little political activity in either the gubernatorial race or in the races for the Virginia House of Delegates has developed so far in Virginia Beach. With the April filing date for candidates in all races of the July Democratic primary nearing, it appears unlikely there will be any more candidates emerging. Now the question of support comes up, but to date there has been little bandwagon joining.

Four candidates are in the primary for the House of Delegates from Virginia Beach. The city has two seats available. Incumbent B.R. Middleton, now in Richmond for the special Constitutional revision session of the Virginia General Assembly has joined with businessman Rhae Adams on one ticket, but neither has done much campaigning so far.

Independent Richard Guy, Virginia Beach attorney, is the only candidate who has actually filed his intention to run with the Democratic committee, but the other independent candidate, attorney Bruce Murphy, has hit the campaign trail early. Guy has campaigned little so far.

Murphy spoke before the Pi Beta Phi Alumnae chapter Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Richard W. Barnes. He discussed the woman's role in government and the recent Virginia Beach real estate reappraisals.

Last week Murphy also addressed the Chesapeake Beach Civic League concerning the reappraisals and about parliamentary bettings. The league went on record favoring reappraisals.

SUN SURVEY

QUESTION: Should the city of Virginia Beach employ a full-time industrial development expert to travel constantly in search of new industries for the city in the hope of broadening the tax base?

Highway Projects To Begin

The State Highway Dept. has announced three major projects in Virginia Beach including one that has been long-awaited.

Bidding, long held up, will begin this spring for the four-laning of the final segment of Route 60 (Shore Drive) from the gates of Fort Story to Atlantic Avenue. The 2.72 mile project is to be advertised May 14 with bid opening on June 25.

Bids will also be opened on two Kempville projects on May 21. One project provides for the four-laning of State Route 165 from South Parliament Drive to Edwin Lane, for a distance of 1.6 miles. The other calls for an intersecting four-lane road, 1.3 miles long, along State Route 190 from Wildcat Road to Providence Road.

Route 190 is Kempville Road and Route 165 is Princess Anne Road. Both projects are designed to relieve traffic congestion in the Kempville area.

Readers Want State Help

Some SUN SURVEY readers didn't even wait for the mails. They clipped last week's question and hand-delivered them a few hours after the paper hit the streets. And the large volume of answers was surprising.

It also appears that our readers feel state appraisers should be brought in to check on the new real estate assessments. Not a single negative answer was received to the question, "Should state appraisers be brought in to check on the validity of new real estate assessments made by the City Real Estate Assessor and his staff in light of the storm of controversy that has arisen?" Every answer received was "Yes." Many of those affirmative answers were added to with underlines and exclamation points as well.

Not all the answers, however, were meant as a suggestion of ineptness in the city offices. A number of those who replied said they felt the state appraisers would clear up any doubt and exonerate Assessor William Connell. Others were not so kindly to Mr. Connell or his staff in calling for state appraisals.

Still others said they felt poor management was a part of the present leadership which has created the current controversy. One reply suggested a taxpayers' association be formed to check on the appraisals. This apparently is already being done.

Meanwhile the new budget, the new assessments and money in general continue to be the major topic of conversation of the citizens of Virginia Beach these days, and those who answered the SUN SURVEY had some very definite opinions.

For still more of the same, note money stories this page and editorial comment.

While the public opinion survey does not profess to represent the thinking of all residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent the views of a cross section of those who took time to clip it and return it to us.

Bolen Outlines Park Plans

State Parks Commissioner Ben H. Bolen made two appearances in Virginia Beach this week to present plans for the proposed False Cape State Park south of Sandbridge to the North Carolina line.

He appeared before a special meeting of City Council Monday and before a well-attended meeting of the Good Government Association at Linkhorn School Tuesday night. At both meetings after his presentation he was met with a number of questions and criticisms of taking 4,400 acres of oceanfront and bayfront land for a park and removing the valuable land from the tax rolls of Virginia Beach, a city in need of additional tax money.

While he received possibly a little more support than he has had in the past, the support appeared to be guarded. Council took no further action on the matter, but adopted a wait-and-see attitude. It did not back down from its two resolutions opposing the development of the park, however.

Bolen said that he felt the basic problem between the city and state officials on the park development had been lack of communication. He apologized for this, and promised to keep City Manager Roger Scott and City Council fully informed concerning future plans and actual negotiations.

He added that there had just not been much to talk about before and that plans are still only in the preliminary stages.

"Somehow I think we may not be in as much disagreement as it seems," said Bolen.

He then outlined plans for three large commercial areas with hotels, restaurants and specialty shops that would be leased to private industry. These would be taxable by the city of Virginia Beach. At the same time he pointed out the necessity for maintaining as much of the natural area as possible to meet the recreational needs of city residents and tourists. He said that conservation officials agree their proposed park is a rare opportunity.

Bolen pointed out that the problem of access is of prime consideration. Plans at present call for a feeder road to be built from Pungo near the end of Independence Blvd. and Gen. Booth Blvd., extended across Back Bay through the federal wildlife reserve, then staying behind the dune line to a point just short of the North Carolina line.

He said there has been almost no interest in extending the road from North Carolina northward.

The commercial areas will be surrounded by a large number of campsites, Bolen said. Boat slips on Back Bay are also planned, and the state is also interested in future development of Back Bay boating facilities when and if the Vir-

Bolen explains plans for the proposed False Cape State Park to City Council in an informal meeting.

Architect's rendering of the 74-slip marina planned for the south side of Rudee Inlet and for the 200-room high-rise motel to be built later. Construction on the marina will begin in about two weeks. Some usage is anticipated late this spring.

ional taxicabs for companies operating in the city, and an appropriation of $3,611 for 75 imprints to be carried in police traffic units. The imprints will be similar to credit card imprints and will work with all drivers' licenses issued after July 1, 1969. They will have raised lettering similar to credit cards. The new licenses will also bear a color picture of the driver, and a transfer of photographic equipment funds was also approved.

In addition Council approved an appropriation of $5,000 for the city's 25 per cent share of a feasibility study of airport sites in the city and agreed to hire an engineering firm to do the work. The Mayor's Airport Study Commission said this is long overdue and that the only way the city can hope to get federal and state approval and funds is to authorize the study.

coming. Bolen said he had nothing to do with those projects, but was now trying to help the city.

Councilmen also discussed with Bolen a current study of the Chesapeake Bay side of Seashore State Park. Bolen said it could be reopened to local use. Council suggested the possibility of a golf course there or at False Cape Park or possibly developing the bayfront area commercially. Bolen said he would discuss the matter with his board.

At both meetings Bolen said he felt the reception to the proposed park at False Cape was good. It was generally agreed afterward that the park prospects now appear brighter to city officials and residents also.

Beach attorney and developer appeared on behalf of a number of large land developers he said, would have to pay a total of about $100,000 in taxes if the new assessments are allowed to stand. He too called for a check, possibly by state appraisers, on the new assessments. At the same time he said he paid a tribute to Connell's office for the job it had done based on the facts on hand. He pointed out that the developers were not "antagonistic," but wanted to delay the effect of the assessments until all could be checked carefully. He suggested at least a delay until Jan. 1, 1970.

The largest single item in the budget is for education. Scott suggested that if Council were so inclined to cut the $23.7 school board budget that members should call School Supt. E. E. Brickell to a meeting to discuss it.

The budget also calls for a two-step pay raise for city employees, effective Oct. 1, the hiring of additional police officers, a utility tax hike from 15 to 20 per cent and a hike in the cigarette tax by two cents a pack.

Scott told Council that he had already trimmed the budgets of many departments by as much as 20 per cent before presenting it.

In his 15-page budget message Scott outlined each challenge to be met by the city with the budget. (See chart for explanation of revenue and expenditures.)

Meanwhile the new assessments are receiving a complete airing in a number of quarters. The Tidewater Association of Home Builders, meeting in Virginia Beach Tuesday night, was told by its president, Howard Weisburg, that the reappraisal is not fair not equitable to the home-building industry.

He said it makes no allowance for the ability of industrial and commercial real estate holders to add greatly to city income in the form of income and sales taxes. He added that it discourages new industry and would cause expenses and sales prices to rise.

The budget, is one form or another following a series of staff briefings and much serious consideration of trimming, will probably be passed on first reading on April 14, and will go into effect on July 1.

Scott also told Council, in an informal meeting, that a bond issue to finance purchase of water lines and facilities from the city of Norfolk would probably have to be held this fall if negotiations with Norfolk are successful and the city enters the water business on July 1. But he hastened to add that the bond issue would not affect indebtedness or debt service since the water bills would repay the money borrowed.

Holy Week Services Planned

Dr. Howard Thurman, an author, lecturer and teacher Dean Emeritus of Boston University's campus chapel, will be the speaker for Holy Week Services at Virginia Beach sponsored by the Beach Borough Ministers and the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women United.

He founded, and for many years was the pastor of, The Church for the Fellowship of All Peoples in San Francisco, the first inter-faith, interracial church in the United States.

Dr. Thurman was selected by Life Magazine April 6, 1953 as one of the 12 "Great Preachers" of this century. Profiles of his life and work have appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, A Biography by Elizabeth Yates:

"Howard Thurman: Portrait of a Practical Dreamer" was published in 1964. In this book Mrs. Yates quotes one of Dr. Thurman's seminary teachers, Dr. Strong, "I think, Howard Thurman, you have the ability and the gift to make a creative contribution to American religion."

ious thought. You are sensitive, and you are a Negro. No one could blame you if you battle on the racial problem, but as your friend, I say to you that to do that would be a waste.

"This must be done, but your gifts are in another dimension. I realize no white man has the right to say this, for he does not know what it is to be a Negro, but all social questions are temporary questions. They are a part of the total growth of the race to maturity. If a man's energy goes into social problems, when that is no longer relevant his work is done. You, Howard Thurman, should address yourself to the timeless hunger of the human spirit. Doing so, your greatest capacities will be released." And this he has done.

Services will be at the First Presbyterian Church, 36th and Pacific, at 8 p. m. Sunday through Wednesday March 30th-April 2nd.

Dr. Thurman is one of the nation's leading writers and speakers on the subjects of disciplines of the spirit and worship. He is the author of 17 books including "The Disciplines of the Spirit" published in 1963, and has spoken at more than 500 colleges and universities in all parts of the world. His latest book "The Centering Moment" published in 1969, will be available during the week with many others.

Course Set

A Supervisory Housekeeping Course will be offered by the Distributive Education Service of Virginia Beach City Schools beginning April 2.

Produced in cooperation with the National Executive Housekeepers Association, this course deals with the broad scope of the housekeepers position and will stress employee training, record keeping and executive responsibilities.

The course will be held Wednesday evenings, April 2 through May 21, in room 509 of Princess Anne High School. Classes will run from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuition is $30 per person.

Thomas P. Rusnock, a professor at Old Dominion College, will be the instructor. For further information contact the Distributive Education Services of Bayside High at 497-8919 or Kempville High at 497-4859.

Committee To Check For Answer

A committee has been appointed by the Virginia Beach Development Council to research how tax bases of other cities maintain a balance.

The nine-member committee is made up of the following: Lawrence Sancio, Robert DeFord, George Davis, David Norman, E. R. Cockrell, Roger Provo, Richard Kline, Mrs. Laura Lambe and Clenton Shanks.

The group plans to study cities with social and economical backgrounds similar to that of Virginia Beach. Questionnaires will be sent to these cities, and members of the committee or the VBDC might visit the cities. Cities that are being considered for study are: Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Jacksonville, Fla.; St. Petersburg, Fla.; Myrtle Beach, S. C.; Charleston, S. C.; Ocean City, Md.; and Atlantic City, N. J.

This investigation is an outgrowth of city council's request in September, 1968 that the VBDC examine proposals for tourist industry enlargement in the city.

The nine-member committee intend to show how the tourist industry directly relates to the city's economy.

Dr. T. Marshall Hahn Jr., left, shakes the hand of Jaycees' president, Mickey Hayes at the conclusion of the Jaycees' dinner meeting Tuesday night. Hahn, president of VPI, was guest speaker for the meeting.

Community Colleges Backed

Dr. T. Marshall Hahn, president of Virginia Tech and chairman of the Virginia Metropolitan Areas Study Commission took a strong stand for community colleges in Virginia Tuesday night in his speech made at the Jaycees dinner meeting.

He said that the developing state-wide system of community colleges is vitally important to the education of our young people and will provide the opportunity for many thousands of young people to attend college who otherwise would not be able to continue their education beyond high school.

level as those for four-year colleges and universities, Hahn said, "While I believe it is a mistake to do as some states do and charge no fees, I would hope very much that we in Virginia can maintain reasonably low tuition fees at our community colleges."

In his speech Hahn praised Gov. Godwin's leadership and restated his questioning of the Commission's recommendation that the state be given the power to borrow for capital outlays without prior approval by the people, except where bonds are secured by specific revenue projects.

There was a report presented to the Jaycees by a Real Estate and Tax Study group that had been previously appointed. The outcome of the study, which was concerned with the recent property reassessments was that no official resolution should be made on the matter. The report was then presented as a statement.

Eight Men Rescued

Eight persons were rescued from Virginia Beach waters in two separate boating accidents last Saturday.

Two boys, identified as Robbie Skinner, 12, of Trellway Road, and Kenneth Norman, 13, of Blackberry Road, were credited with rescuing four men from Lake Joyce.

According to the youths, they were preparing for an overnight camping trip on Treasure Island when four fishermen boarded a small outboard aluminum boat and began moving down the lake. A short distance from the island, according to Robbie, the boat overturned throwing the men into the water.

The boys, hearing the men's cries for help, launched their boat and pulled two of the floundering men from the Lake and took them to safety on the shore. The boys then returned in their boat to the sight of the overturned boat, to which the remaining two men were clinging, and pulled them into their (the boys') boat and took them to shore.

Neither Robbie nor Kenneth were able to identify any of the four men they had rescued from Lake Joyce but indicated the men apparently escaped injury in their unexpected plunge into the chilly waters of the lake.

Four Navy men attached to the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base, "all in their 20's, were rescued from the Atlantic Ocean when their 14 foot outboard boat was swamped in the surf off Atlantic Avenue.

Police quote witnesses with saying the men stood up in the boat waving towards shore when a wave suddenly knocked them overboard in the surfing area between the Surf Rider Restaurant and the Steel Pier.

One of the men managed to reach shore seeking assistance for his three companions still in the water, one of whom he said was drowning.

Those on the beach joined surfers in bringing the trio to shore and revived Dennis J. Hoffman with artificial respiration. Police and members of the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad arrived on the scene and began administering first aid to the boaters.

Hoffman was taken to Portsmouth Naval Hospital where he was held overnight for observation. The other men, identified as John E. Wade, Lewis Goin and John Hughes, were released after emergency treatment for exposure.

Monkey Thrives on Attention

A fire which swept through a Black Cove Road home two weeks ago marked the beginning of a journey through the city of Virginia Beach for a two-year old chimpanzee which apparently is far from over.

The chimpanzee, named Chuckie, was displaced when fire broke out in the home of his owners Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Smith.

When volunteers from the Chesapeake Beach Fire Department rushed into the burning home they discovered Chuckie in his room at the rear of the house. Except for being excited over the fire and unusual visitors to the home, Chuckie apparently was not injured.

He was taken to the city animal pound for temporary keeping but the quarters proved unsuitable for Chuckie, and so he was transferred to his own private abode in a cell of the old 2nd Police Precinct lockup behind the fire station at 20th Street and Arctic Avenue.

Chuckie accepts a light for his Salem cigarette from fireman Bill Simmons while resting in his temporary home in the cell block of the old 2nd Police Precinct lock-up.

May Be Recharged

The Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney's office indicates it is considering recharging David E. Vaughn with taking indecent liberties with a minor child. Vaughn's first trial on the charge ended in a hung jury. Police said Vaughn, 24, alleged enticed a 12-year-old girl into a store in the Pembroke Mall last September. Vaughn was employed as part of the store's security force at the time of the alleged incident.

Creditors Seek Money

Three creditors seeking nearly $42,000 from E. C. Womack, Inc., of Virginia Beach, have petitioned the U. S. District Court in Norfolk to declare the firm bankrupt. The sum represents a total of claims from Taylor-Parker Co., Inc., of Norfolk; Alban Tractor Co., Inc., of Baltimore, Md.; and Lutherville Supply and Equipment Co., Inc., of Lutherville, Md. In their petition the companies contend that when the Womack company was placed in receivership as the result of a lawsuit the action constituted bankruptcy. Transamerica Insurance Co., which was the firm's bonding company, filed multimillion dollar law suits against the firm on grounds the company defaulted in a number of highway and construction contracts.

Appeal Granted

The State Supreme Court has granted 61-year-old Douglas P. Lawrence, of Gatesville, N.C., an appeal of his conviction of armed robbery in Virginia Beach Circuit Court. Douglas was found guilty of taking part in the Aug. 31, 1964 of Beach Taxi, Inc. and was sentenced to 75 years imprisonment. The Supreme Court granted the appeal on the grounds that Douglas was denied his constitutional right of appeal when Judge Paul W. Ackiss denied a habeas corpus petition in March 1967.

Navy Men Face Charges

Two Navy men are awaiting court appearance on charges of raping an 18-year-old Virginia Wesleyan College student. Police identified the suspects as Paul J. Orizizi, 22, and Joseph T. Felice, 21. Police quote the girl with saying she had agreed to the offer of an auto ride to Norfolk but was taken instead to a deserted dirt road near the Oceana Naval Air Station where the accused made advances to her. The victim is quoted as saying she first refused demands of her assailants but submitted after they threatened to beat her.

Children See Film on Smoking

The Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society has undertaken a very complete educational program with the cooperation of the Elementary Schools in the City of Virginia Beach. This is part of the Public Education Committee's activities headed by the Rev. Clayton E. Crigger.

Mrs. Paul Coussens, a member of this committee, is in charge of the new program which was especially designed by the American Cancer Society to discourage smoking in young people. Two films are being used; one, "A Breath of Air", planned for the higher grade and high school students is being used by us for the sixth and seventh grades; the other, "The Huffy, Puffy Dragon", for the fourth and fifth grades.

Each film showing is accompanied by appropriate literature which is being taken home. Mrs. Coussens attends each film showing and can report on the reaction to the films and also answers questions when they arise.

This program started on March 10 and will continue each school day until April 29. All programs start at 8:30 a.m. Some ten elementary schools have already seen these films which means several thousand children have received this information already.

Additional dates for both films are March 24, Creeds; March 25, Alantons; March 27, Trantwood; March 28, Shelton Park; April 1, Bayside; April 8, 9, 10, 11, Williams; April 14, Seatack; April 15, Point O' Woods; April 17, Linkhorn Park; April 21, Cooke; April 22, Courthouse; April 23, Windsor Woods.

Lawrence A. Sandillo, president of the Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society stated, "The reports that have been received by us on the reception of this program by the school students is most encouraging. We feel that through these films we will reach many young people and in this way also be able to reach their parents on the harmful effects of smoking. The interest and general attitude of the young people is most important in a program of this type."

"Mrs. Coussens is doing a truly excellent job in presenting these films and I personally express my thanks and the thanks of the entire unit to her and Rev. Crigger for such an outstanding phase of the educational program. It is our hope this year to reach as many people as possible with the American Cancer Society story and cancer's seven warning signals."

Bayside Arms Opens

Bayside Arms Apartments, the first federal rent supplemented apartment project in Virginia was officially opened last Friday in a ribbon cutting ceremony at the apartments, which are located on Witthuck Road.

The ceremony was attended by regional and national representatives of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), representatives of FHA and local businessmen who had helped with the development of the project.

Sidney S. Kellam was master of ceremonies for the event. The ribbon was cut by Charles P. Landt, president of Cameron-Brown Company which financed the project. City manager Roger Scott welcomed the visitors and expressed the city's interest in the project.

Keys were presented to the first tenants of the apartments by Reuben Clay, equal opportunity officer of HUD and Andrew Ferry, supervisor of the FHA Service Office in Norfolk. The tenants receiving the keys were Mrs. F. Simmons and Mrs. A. Rollyson.

Concerning FHA interest in the project, Ferry said, "This is one of the programs FHA is putting their interest in that meet the needs of the low income group, but we are not making sacrifices for out traditional program...This program not only meets, but is a very good example of what can be done for housing of low income groups." Ferry said also that such a project needs a strong commitment and involvement of private industry to use the programs that we have in effect.

Bayside Arms was built by Hickman and Associates, sponsors of the project. Construction plans for the apartments were developed by Laszlo Arany, AIA, Architect, in cooperation with Langley, McDonald and Overman. Construction of the apartments was started Dec. 18, 1967.

Families or individuals who are eligible for rent supplement payments are required to pay 25% of their income for rent. The difference between this and full market rent represents the amount of rent supplement for the occupants. The Federal Rent Supplement payments are paid directly to the owners on behalf of the qualified tenants.

Part of the units can be occupied by tenants who can pay the full market rent without any subsidy. Also, a tenant with rising income can continue to live in the project paying a higher rent and receiving a lower subsidy as his income rises; or continue to live in the project after his income is no longer eligible for rent supplement.

City Council vs. Budget

City Council is now in a serious quandary where money is concerned. City Manager Roger Scott has presented his $45 million record budget that calls for several tax increases.

Actually where the budget is concerned, only a small part is set by Scott. The rest is set by the school board, debt service, city payroll and the like. But to pay the bills for the additional services that are so necessary in a growing city, money has to be found.

City Councilmen face an election next June, and certainly they do not wish to enact any more tax increases, especially serious ones. Some members are talking of cutting taxes, a welcome sound, but hardly realistic, even to the naive voter.

It is indeed unfortunate that the reassessment controversy has to be tied, however unwittingly, to the new budget. The timing couldn't be worse. It seems now that Council has little choice but to delay the effect of those new appraisals in the face of so much protest, as well as little choice than to cut the budget to the bone.

While Councilman George Ferrell's resolution to stay the effect and to call in state appraisers to check on the city appraisers was soundly defeated, other Councilmen are secretly glad he opened the door to doubt, especially in light of hundreds of complaints. For example, it is a known fact that if the major developers of the city are forced to bear the brunt of the new appraisals, they will certainly pass the increase along to the consumers. Then we'll all suffer even more.

While we do not pass judgement on the city assessors, we feel that state appraisers will yet have to be brought in to satisfy the fears and settle any inequities.

While Ferrell today stands beaten back, he and his supporters may yet come out on top by having been willing to admit there is room for doubt and trying to settle it now.

Development of Rudee Inlet

At long last we are about to see something rise along much-maligned Rudee Inlet. Developer Wayne McLeskey has unveiled plans for a 74-slip marina and a 200-plus unit high-rise motel he and his associates will build on the south side of the inlet just inside the high-level bridge.

The marina will be started soon, with plans for using part of it this summer. The motel will follow in about a year.

We have long said that the development of Rudee Inlet can be a boon to the recreational needs and even to the economy of Virginia Beach. The area can provide boating and fishing facilities unrivaled on the east coast. The city has done part of its part by getting the inlet open, keeping it open and by planning for one marina.

Fortunately the city has far-sighted people like Mr. McLeskey who have enough faith in the same dream that is now about to become a reality.

We Want a Raise Too

The Virginia Beach Commissioner of Revenue, City Sargeant, Commonwealth's Attorney and Treasurer are asking for a raise. Half of their salary is paid by the State, based on the population of the city.

They are now being paid on population figures of the 1960 census, but the population of the city has nearly doubled since that time. According to state law they are entitled to a hearing on that raise when a higher bracket of population is reached. Virginia Beach has now reached that plateau, and rightfully they are heading to Richmond to get what should be theirs.

What is ironic is that state law provides for a raise, or at least a hearing for them, when the population grows, but does not provide for the distribution of state funds to localities on the same basis. State funds that are reaching Virginia Beach now from several different tax sources are based on the 1960 census, with no provision for review until the 1970 census. That is unfortunate in the case of Virginia Beach.

The need for fast-growth legislation has been pointed out many times. This legislation, which will at least give us our proper chance for our proper share in the future should be written into the new Constitution or enacted as soon as possible by a future session of the Virginia General Assembly.

Hope For the Park

Hopefully State Parks Commissioner Ben Bolen has been able to ease the pain City Council has felt concerning the development of a major state park at False Cape. The park still seems to be a fine idea, although the land will no longer be available for commercial and residential development.

The preliminary plans Bolen presented to Council Monday are ambitious and look very good. His presentation seemed to answer many questions Council had and the general feeling seemed to be, if not overall approval, at least less objection.

The basic problem has been lack of communication between state and local officials on the matter. This appears to have ended. If it truly has, most likely the park can become a reality with the blessings of everyone.

May Move

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN: I built my home in the southern part of Virginia Beach 17 years ago. At that time my taxes were reasonable. They have been increased twice with a 43 percent increase last year. Now my assessment is increased with another tax boost to be paid this year. I do not have one single thing more in 1969 than I did not have in 1952.

At that time I received full fire, police, water, sewer, telephone, paved streets, sidewalks, etc. I am now paying for all the improvements that have been made in the old Princess Anne County.

Yes, I voted for consolidation, but, by golly, if I had to do it over again, that would never happen. Our city fathers are just too rich for my blood. It will probably mean I will have to sell out and move back to Norfolk.

Name withheld.
Editor's note: Don't be too hasty. Check that Norfolk tax rate. Regardless of the Virginia Beach increases, Norfolk is still higher.

Wake Up

Editor: VIRGINIA BEACH SUN: When will you wake up to realities today in this communist world?

Our people are bled to death with taxes to support communist works, to demoralize, degrade, destroy Christianity, decency, morality, civilization by integration and all other known and unknown, visible and invisible means and by entire public school education in the United States already degraded because of integration. Don't bleed us more to comply with communists. Mrs. H. A. Clopton

Special Report

Waiting in the Wings

The 1968 Democratic primary gubernatorial race can't seem to get underway. Something called a special session of the Virginia General Assembly keeps getting in the way. And from the looks of things a lot of political fuel for the campaign fires to come will come from that special session.

Already there have been more fights that were anticipated in the meeting halls of the State Capitol. While the new Constitution drawn by the Harrison Commission was never expected to make it through unscathed, it is actually having more trouble than expected.

The retention of biennial sessions was recommended. That was defeated. Annual sessions will be held. And the debt limit proposals have caused a great deal more pain than was anticipated.

All of this is taking away from the gubernatorial sweepstakes. But the issues at stake are important enough to do just that. Those closely contested issues in the legislature will no doubt make it easier for the campaigners to campaign when they do get started in earnest.

The Democrats in the legislature have apparently failed in all efforts to find a compromise candidate or to get at least two of the contestants together on a single ticket. There is still a slight chance that as soon as the longer-than-expected special session is over a few more candidates will emerge from wherever it is candidates wait to emerge from. For instance State Sen. Edward Breeden has still stopped short of announcing his candidacy for Lt. Governor on the Fred Pollard ticket. But his voting record in this session would indicate he intends to do so, in spite of his more liberal leanings on some issues in the past. There is speculation that his official announcement of candidacy will come as soon as the final gavel sounds on the session which will have drawn for us a new constitution.

At the same time Pollard, William Battle and Henry Howell continue to march about the state talking to any groups that will listen. Each day's headlines on the inside pages of daily newspapers tell of their speeches before this group or that and about the innocuous speeches they are making. Also news items appear about this or that sub-luminary appointed to this or that committee to work for this or that specific candidate.

But the major news is still about the legislative session. That is still capturing the front pages daily, relegating the news about the candidates to a spot of lesser importance. But this too, in time shall pass, and we'll probably be wishing for these days again. Filing time is nearing for the primary, so if any 11th hour politicians are going to announce it will have to be a well-timed announcement, that is, just at the moment the special session ends and that news dies down and just before the already announced candidates get into high gear.

The following three months still at this moment promise to hold lots of angry words between Democratic candidates all trying for the same votes. And it is still all very much confused, since at least Battle and Pollard are in many cases vying for the votes of the same faction.

The possibility of an August runoff is still quite strong. Howell supporters feel certain that their favorite son will be in that runoff, possibly as the winner of the top spot in July. These estimates are thought to be somewhat optimistic in the Battle and Pollard camps.

Still it can all prove to be extremely interesting. This election will surely mark the first true test of the new breed of moderates that have developed in Virginia in recent years. Up until this time the contests have not really been contests. This one will be.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"No, I don't think it was fair at all," he said. "You didn't have to make such a big thing about how much I like banana pudding. You know I hate it."

"I'm sorry," she said with a laugh, "but when Mother asked if you'd like to try some of the banana pudding she'd just made, I had this irresistible urge to tell her you loved it."

"And so you gave in to your urge. Thanks," he said sarcastically. "I burped bananas and vanilla wafers for three hours; that is when I wasn't burping that awful meat loaf."

"I'm sorry," she said. "But I felt you deserved it after all those things you said about my Mother under your breathe while she was here."

"What was in that meat loaf anyway?" he asked. "I can honestly say I've never tasted anything quite like it."

"It really is my fault," she said. "I told her when she offered to fix dinner that you liked your food moist."

"Oh, fine. Blame me. The last time she was here she cooked the roast so long it was dry enough to resolve my shoe. I ate it somehow, but you didn't. . . . Well, anyway, the meat loaf was moist enough. I almost took it to the sink to wring it out."

"I think she used some tomato puree in it and some wet bread to go along with the hamburger," she said.

"That was hamburger?" he asked. "Somehow I didn't recognize the taste. But I did wonder what turned it red. I thought maybe she cut her finger on the big hunk of carrot."

"I admit it wasn't the best meat loaf I've ever eaten, but it's the thought that counts."

"Yeah, after that first bite, I thought I'd be ill," he said. "I know she used most of the spices in the spice rack, but did she have to use a half jar of cayenne pepper. It was a bit hot."

"I noticed that too, and you know I can't taste very well," she said. "But I tasted that."

"Actually it worked out all right," he said. "When I left to go to my meeting, I bought some of those antacid pills. I kept eating those and burping through the meeting. It was the only exciting thing that happened."

"You drank enough iced tea to sink a battleship," she said. "Did that kill the pepper?"

"Yes, but when I wasn't burping, I slobbered," he said. "And I had to leave the meeting four times."

"The next time she comes, I promise you I'll tell her just to rest and that I'll fix dinner," she said. "Will that be better?"

"That will be a blessing. But why are you being so nice about it?" he asked.

"I thought the meat loaf and banana pudding were terrible too," she said.

"I tried to avoid that in the first place, by taking her out to eat the two nights before," he said. "Pity we didn't go out last night too."

"Well, she's gone now, and probably won't be back for another six months," she said.

"Maybe my poor stomach will recover by then," he said. "But I sure feel sorry for your brother and his wife. She told me just before she left that she liked the meat loaf so much she was going to fix them one just like it when she got there."

The building blocks upon which all society is constructed is the family unit. It is interesting to observe by comparison how the modern family differs from that of our ancestors.

The change from an agricultural to an industrial society is almost complete in America. This transition has had a profound effect on the daily activities and habits of an average American family.

In a family engaged in agriculture, each member had a definite economic role, starting at an early age. Junior, when he got five years old, was able to bring firewood in for the night, or pick apples for his mother, or pick up eggs from the chicken house, or vegetables from the garden. Similarly, a young girl learned to cook early while her mother helped the father in the fields and with the daily chores. When Junior got nine or ten years old he milked cows, fed the livestock, helped harvest crops, dug fence post holes, tilled the soil, hunted trapped, and fulfilled a function quite close to that of an adult.

Everyone worked from sun-up to sun-down; then went to bed at night tired, well-fed, and feeling a necessary part of that economic activity known as a farm. On Sunday church services were the foremost activity of the day followed by such recreations as fishing or cow pasture ball games in summer and sleighing and ice skating in winter.

The family was born, lived, worked and died as a functioning social and economic unit, each member being a necessary part of the whole. Everyone's almost complete interest was absorbed in the victories, defeats, pleasures and problems of each fellow member of such family.

Contrast this with the modern family living in a city or its suburbs, where most Americans live today. The father leaves for work frequently while the children are still asleep. Mother gets up and fixes breakfast as father heads for work. When he arrives at work he finds himself in another world completely divorced from his family. At work they discuss bowling or hunting or next week's wrestling matches or a golf game or the Lion's Club or the Masonic Temple or any one of a hundred activities that will keep him away from his family.

Meanwhile, at home the children get up and prepare for school, while mother prepares to go to work. At school the children are engaged in the serious business of getting an education and preparing themselves to compete in the world of tomorrow. They return home in the afternoon to a house that contains neither a mother nor a father.

Meanwhile mother arrives in her second world; her job. She greets her friends and prepares for her day's activities completely separate and apart from that of her family's. Mother arrives home about six o'clock from the office and suddenly remembers that the P.T.A. meets that evening after discovering that this also happens to be father's night to bowl. She rushes around the house and prepares a TV dinner while instructing the children to study while she is at the P.T.A. meeting.

When she gets home the children are asleep with the television set turned on, father comes in from bowling and the family is reunited. The children are tucked in and given their good-night kisses; mother and father are too tired to relate their experiences of the day; thus the entire family falls asleep.

With this pattern of modern living, it is easy to see how every force and economic factor tends to divide the family rather than to unite it. Each member lives in two worlds or more accurately each member has a separate world; separate from the rest of the family. Lines of communication tend to break down and the results become evident in higher divorce rates and more juvenile crimes.

Willie Is a Part of Wilder's

He is a vibrant little gentleman, full of humor and happiness. His unlined face and energetic actions belie the fact that he is 73 years old. His name is Willie Shields, but everybody knows him as just plain "Willie".

Willie has worked for Wilder Theatres since 1929 when he was employed as a porter at the Newport Theatre on 35th Street in Norfolk. He worked there for several years and then moved to the Wilder office on Colley Avenue. Since then he has moved two more times; once to the office on Little Creek Road and finally to the Wilder Theatre office when it opened in the Princess Theatre building five years ago.

Willie is considered a vital part of the business conducted at Wilder's. When Mrs. William S. Wilder, president of Wilder Theatres, was asked if she remembered anything that happened in the last 40 years that involved Willie, she replied, "Everything that has ever happened involved Willie...he runs all of us."

Mrs. Wilder says Willie is standing at the door looking at his watch if she is late, and she doesn't dare leave before Willie does. "When Willie helps out with a party, he is the party...many times half the party ends up in the kitchen, or wherever Willie happens to be."

Sidney L. Bowden, general manager of Wilder Theatres, says Willie is practically considered a vice president.

Whatever his title, Willie is well-known and well-liked. "No matter where you go with Willie there's somebody there that knows him," says Mrs. Wilder. Recently a gentleman who had been public relations for Walt Disney was in the area. As he walked in the door at Wilder's he said, "Hello, Willie," even though he hadn't been here for 20 years. Willie knew him too.

Willie still lives in the same apartment in Norfolk that he lived in 40 years ago. His wife died shortly after he started working for Wilder's and left him with four pre-school children. With the help of his mother-in-law Willie managed the job very well.

One of his boys works for the post office in New York and is an organizer for a church there. One boy is a porter for the city and his other boy is a T.V. repairman.

Willie's daughter, Rose is a housewife. Although Willie lives alone he says, "Rose looks after me...she cooks for me."

Before he started to work for Wilder's, Willie served in World War I. He spent 13 months in France during that time. His comment about France is, "I'm glad I went...but I don't want to go back."

There is a strong feeling of camaraderie between Mrs. Wilder, Bowden and Willie. They have worked together during Willie's entire 40 years at Wilder's, and they enjoy ribbing each other about the things that have happened in that time. As Willie says, "We understand each other."

One of Mrs. Wilder's favorite stories about Willie concerns his determined nature when a job has to be done. One day Mrs. Wilder's late husband had left word that he was in conference and was not to be disturbed under any circumstances. A workman went to the office to measure it for venetian blinds, and since the windows that were to be fitted were in Mr. Wilder's office, Willie just opened the door and took the workman right in to do his job. Mr. Wilder stopped what he was

Bowden particularly remembers the time Willie got one of the female employees to do her job properly by threatening to hit her on the head with a broom.

Another story about Willie's escapades is the watch story. Willie had bought a girl friend a watch for Christmas. The watch was stolen, and since the girl was an employee of Wilder's, the insurance investigator called Mr. Wilder. "How much was the watch worth?" he asked. "Which watch?" questioned Mr. Wilder. Willie had bought four watches, for four different girl friends.

Willie laughs at some of the things that have happened to him...such as the time he got on a city bus, fell asleep and ended up right where he started from.

Willie could have left Wilder's during World War II to go to work at any one of the Naval bases and he would have made much more money. Willie's answer for staying with Wilder's is, "They treat me good."

"They must, Willie is eligible for V. A. disability and social security payments but he won't put in for them...it would mean that he would have to stop work. So he just keeps working in spite of heart trouble that he's had for 18 years."

All in all you have to agree with Bowden when he says, "Willie is the most loyal employee we've ever had."

Gen. Redling Leaves Area

Maj. Gen. William N. Redling, Ft. Eustis and Ft. Story commanding general for the past four years, will report to Washington, D. C., May 15 for an assignment with the U. S. Army Materiel Command.

He will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Howard F. Schiltz, who is now director of distribution and transportation for the Materiel Command.

General Redling came to Ft. Eustis Feb. 14, 1965. During his tour he administered the expansion of the Army Transportation School from an annual output of 7,000 to a projected 41,000 students in 1969 and trained thousands of soldiers in military transportation skills to fill requirements for Vietnam. Gen. Redling's era of command has covered the period of greatest growth at the installation, both in service to the Army and physical expansion.

Gen. Schiltz, since entering active service in 1941 has held many positions of responsibility, mostly associated with military transportation. Recently he has been director of major items with the Materiel Command, commander of the Aviation Materiel Command, St. Louis, Mo., Army project manager of the Mohawk aerial surveillance system and transportation officer for the United Nations Command and Eight Army in Korea. He has also served tours in Japan and Germany.

Although he has spoken at Ft. Eustis and visited here many times, he was stationed at Ft. Eustis only once during his career when he was with the 7th Training Regiment for five months in 1947.

Among other citations and decorations, General Schiltz wears the Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit and Bronze Star.

W.R. Malbon Jr. Wins Award

W.R. (Billy) Malbon, Jr., outstanding Virginia Beach farmer, received the Agriculture Man of the Year award of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce at a dinner meeting Tuesday night sponsored by the Chamber's Agriculture Committee. About 60 persons attended the meeting at the Holiday Inn on Military Highway.

Malbon became the third recipient of the coveted honor. Past recipients are W. Clark Fleming, general manager of Bayville Farms, and E. R. Cockrell, city agricultural agent.

The plaque, symbolic of the award, was presented to Malbon by Chamber president Frank W. Kellam. Recognition of Malbon made him the "Man of the Year for 1968."

Malbon and his partner-brother, Thomas, are believed to be the largest feeders of hogs on the East Coast. In addition they farm approximately 3,000 acres producing small grain, corn and soybeans.

Malbon is active in many farming, as well as civic pursuits, and the Malbon Brothers operation has gained national publicity in agricultural magazines. He is a member of the Princess Anne Farm Bureau, the Chamber's Agriculture Committee, the Lions Club and Ruritan Club.

Questions Remain In Death of Suspect

Mystery surrounds the death of Edward Grant Lewis who Virginia Beach police say had been charged with taking part in the June 8, 1968 $35,000 jewel robbery of the Miller & Rhodes department store in the Pembroke Mall.

Police officials tell the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN Lewis' body was found in a roadside ditch outside New Philadelphia, Ohio. According to Ohio authorities, Lewis had been shot in the head. Thus far there has been no indication as to what motive was behind his demise.

Lewis, 27, of Atlanta, Ga., reportedly turned himself in to Virginia Beach police on the 21st of last month and was given a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court on that same day. During this hearing Lewis was placed under $20,000 bond, which was posted for him, and he was released pending further court proceedings.

On the 5th of March Lewis' case was forwarded to Circuit Court for grand jury proceedings. This grand jury is to convene Friday, at which time a decision would have been made whether the charges against him constituted a true bill and be tried at a future date or whether the charges should be dismissed. With the exception of reporting the finding of Lewis' body, his cause of death, and that he was identified by means of fingerprints, Ohio officials have said little else regarding his death. However, Virginia Beach police say they are expecting additional word on the investigation within days.

Police officials also say none of the loot from the robbery has been recovered, and that other suspects are still being sought in connection with the crime.

importance of agriculture in America is fully realized. He said that countries and civilizations that have fallen have all neglected their agriculture industry.

As far as Virginia Beach is concerned, Rowe said while it would bear some investigation, he felt that agriculture and supporting businesses contributes more to the economy (than the tourist industry).

Guests at the meeting included City Manager Roger Scott, Mayor Frank Dusch and several City Councilmen.

'Luv' Is Top Show

"Luv" is not a simple thing, especially in the hands of the actors of Stage Door Dinner Playhouse. The play, "Luv", by Murray Schisgal, is a very funny comedy, and the intricately played production at Stage Door is downright delightful.

There are only three characters in the play, and the three work so hard for the excellent result that the audience is just about as breathless as they are by the time of curtain calls.

Director Jon Dawson has put together a fast-paced, complicated movement show that is complimented by the timing of three outstanding players.

"Luv" is a satirical comedy study of marriage, divorce, emotional hangups, "grass is greener" attitudes, sex and life itself. Schisgal takes a healthy poke at all conventional mores and standards at one time or other in the play.

The action revolves around a man about to jump in the river to commit suicide when an old friend happens along. While the man is in the depths of despair, the old friend is seemingly happy and well-healed. The problem is he would like to get rid of his wife and marry another woman. He sees an opportunity to pass his wife along to his destitute buddy after convincing him that love is the only thing that counts.

The clever plot works, except that it doesn't work out and a few months later, the old friend is not happy with his new life. His ex-wife, then the wife of the other man, is not happy. And the downtrodden one is ready to jump in the river again.

It is all lots larger than life and deals with the story in an almost slapstick manner. All three characters are played very broadly to great advantage.

All three cast members have played the roles before and handle themselves well. The timing of Toby Stephens as the one about to jump in the river and G. F. Rowe as his old friend is excellent, especially in the jumping off scenes.

Stephens plays the poor man for all the comic sympathy there is. Rowe changes beautifully from puffed up to deflated.

Marty McGraw underplays the role of the woman. In fact she is so straight-faced that the role becomes even funnier.

All three do a fine job trying to top each other's story of a miserable childhood.

Easter to Be Busy Day

If you really want to show off your Easter finery, Virginia Beach this Easter Sunday will be the place. There's a full day of activities planned.

First there is the traditional sunrise service at the Cape Henry Cross.

Promenading along the Boardwalk will begin at 1 p.m., giving churchgoers time for lunch before the annual Easter Parade. A concert by the Navy School of Music Band will be from 12:35 to 1:35 p.m.

The center of activities for the parade will be the Norwegian Lady at 25th Street and the Oceanfront. The band and judges will be located there.

The parade will be between 24th and 26th streets, and judging will be from 1 to 1:45 p.m. There will be winners in 10 categories: Best Dressed Woman, Best Dressed Man, Best Dressed Couple, Best Dressed Family, Best Dressed Teen Boy, Best Dressed Teen Girl, Best Dressed Boy, Best Dressed Girl, Best Dressed Toddler Boy and Best Dressed Toddler Girl. There will be prizes and judges for each division.

Mrs. George Leary is chairman of the Chamber of Commerce sponsored event, according to Mrs. Laura Lambe, events chairman for the C. of C. Other chairmen include Mrs. Edward Derring, judges; Mrs. Patricia Joyce and Mrs. Jo Myers, decorations; Mrs. Douglas McDonald and Robert Whitley, prizes, and Roger Provo, publicity.

Judging will be completed by 2 p.m., so that persons will have plenty of time to attend the Kiwanis-Gospel Singers Concert at the Civic Center at 2:30 p.m., which will benefit retarded children. Four quartets will be featured. There will also be a later show.

There's a Pattern to Leadership

Anyone can be a leader if she makes up her mind to it—at least that's the feeling of Mrs. Donald D. Funk, a Registered Professional Parliamentarian who conducted an all-day leadership workshop for the Virginia Tidewater Unit of the National Association of Parliamentarians last Thursday at the Shore Drive Inn.

"A leader has a very different picture from a loser," said Mrs. Funk. She has many looks. She may be a whirlwind of energy or she may be an intellectual. She may look like you."

She suggested that a definite plan be mapped to develop leadership qualities. These qualities, she said, are energy (physical and mental), purpose, courage, and preparedness. The first step is participation. "Get with it and volunteer for anything."

Another step is to give opinions, she said. "As a member of an organization you have as much right to speak as the next person. In fact if you have an opinion you have the responsibility to speak. Know the basic steps of parliamentary procedure then you can speak positively. Know the background facts. New members or old, you should participate."

"When you take the first step toward leadership, your enthusiasm will bubble up. Enthusiasm is contagious. Think positively; a negative attitude is contagious too."

Why should women develop leadership? Mrs. Funk gave several reasons. One is to improve the organization of which you are a member. Another is to improve yourself professionally if you work.

The second step to becoming a leader is to be a committee chairman. "Don't become too efficient and over-organized," warned Mrs. Funk. "Listen to the committee members. Guide rather than command."

From there future leaders may rise through the ranks of officers to become president of their organizations. Mrs. Funk said more thought should be given to filling offices in organizations, because they require special qualities.

A treasurer must have absolute accuracy, honesty, thrift, patience and efficiency.

A corresponding secretary is a communications expert. She must keep a record of all correspondence and the membership roster up to date. "This office is more important but given less thought than the others," said Mrs. Funk. If she does not know proper grammar or spelling, or cannot express herself well, she gives a poor image of her organization.

A recording secretary should write and spell accurately. Her minutes should reflect a complete and accurate record of what is done, not what is said. "Minutes are the legal document of an organization," said Mrs. Funk. As an added word, she said that minutes should never close "respectfully submitted." The correct form is to say, "There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned," followed by the secretary's signature.

Mrs. Funk said the first vice president should hold no committee chairmanship. "This is no longer an honorary position. She must know as much about what is going on as the president. She should have the same qualities as the president."

The president's office required all the qualities of the others plus public presence—being able to communicate with the outside world and speak authoritatively. She should delegate responsibility, guide but not dictate.

Mrs. Funk said that the best way to assure a good meeting is to have good preparation. "Check the calendar in advance. Check with committee chairmen and only call on the ones who have reports."

She also suggested that all members have a working knowledge of parliamentary procedure. "Knowing the rules is important to anyone who is important."

As a final point on the importance of leadership, Mrs. Funk said, "The ability to attract and hold new members reflects on the organization's officers."

Can Your Child Hear?

Are you sure your child can hear? That's a question being answered by members of the Suburban Junior Woman's Club as they test pre-school children in Virginia Beach and Norfolk.

The first tests given to Beach children were at Everett School on Tuesday. The test, which takes about five minutes, is geared to the level of preschoolers.

The children (two at a time) listen to a tape recording which first allows them to hear sounds at a normal speaking level and then gradually decreases in carefully calibrated steps. The child is asked to point to different pictures on a chart.

Members of the club have been trained to give the test. They check the children's responses to the tape. Any child who misses two straight levels of sound is rechecked later. If he again has difficulty, his parents are notified. The Easter Seal Society is cooperating in the screening.

It is estimated that one out of every 10 four-year-olds suffers from a hidden hearing deficiency. The test is being made at local kindergartens without charge. Schools desiring to have their students screened may contact Mrs. D. M. Dale, or Mrs. E. C. Stone, Suburban Junior chairmen for Hearing Screening.

She's Thankful to Be Vertical

By Yatta Jones

The hardest thing to capture on paper is spirit. And for this reason, no matter what is written about Mrs. Richard Warren Barnes, most of her effervescent nature will escape.

If you are acquainted with Mrs. Barnes at all you probably know her better as "Douglas", "Doug", or even "Cassandra Jr." (She adopted the last name for use in her journalistic work—she says it's a perfect descriptive name because Cassandra was considered slightly bawdy until she was proven to be an accurate prophetess.)

To call Douglas "active" is an extreme understatement. Since becoming a permanent resident of Virginia Beach in 1951, she has served (in some cases still serving) as public relations chairman for the Virginia Beach Council of Churches, Linkhorn Park Garden Club, Gallie Episcopal Church, the Virginia Beach Heart Drive, League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women.

In addition to serving with these various organizations she has engaged in substitute and home-bound teaching, worked in the Headstart program and launched a career in journalism. Oh yes, she also babysits.

That is not a bad schedule for a woman with teenage grandchildren. Douglas, who is 65 years old, does not own a car so she walks to all of her appointments. Or, when the distance is too great, she may take a bus. In her spare time she walks along the beach or she swims.

Douglas strongly advocates her schedule. When she and her husband, Dick, moved to Virginia Beach she was ill. She is in excellent health now and says, "Swimming, activity, my church and belief in my husband helped me to get well."

Douglas believes in taking things as they come. She knows from experience that nobody knows from day-to-day how changes in life will affect him. Her life is a perfect example of this statement.

At the outbreak of World War II she lived in Roanoke, Va. with her husband and two children—they had been there for almost 20 years. Her husband, who was then 43 years old, was commissioned a captain in the Army. They moved from a three-story house in Roanoke to a four-and-a-half-room apartment at Columbia University in a student complex (the ceiling fell on their son the first night they were there).

That was the beginning of many moves and changes. There were financial reverses in the family; Douglas learned to get along without two maids. The whole family adjusted.

Douglas feels that circumstances have served to make her more independent. She has learned to draw on her own influences to push her along.

It's hard to imagine anything pushing Douglas along. She has embarked upon one enterprise after another with bravado and vigor.

She began to work in journalism six years ago. Her background in that field consisted of having been a reporter on "The Tattler" at Randolph-Macon while she attended school there from 1919 until 1923.

As soon as she was qualfied, Douglas joined the Virginia Presswomen's Association. The first year with the Association she won second place in the state for weekly news writing and first place for photography. Douglas is proud of her membership in the organization. She says, "Membership in the Virginia Presswomen has meant almost as much to me as my degree."

And that is quite a compliment from Douglas, because education has a continuing place in her life. Her father taught history at Randolph-Macon; she has taught for a total of 15 years. One of her favorite memories is of the $10 her father sent her when she took her first teaching position at Accomac, Va. She used part of the money to buy a cane so she would look very professional.

After teaching for awhile, Douglas went back to school. This time she went into nursing training at Roanoke Memorial Hospital. She had two years of training, but she never got her cap. During the time she was in school she met a handsome young pharmacist, Richard Warren Barnes, and married him three months before she finished training.

Douglas continues to go to school. She has taken graduate courses at ODC in journalism, English and child psychology.

Since moving to Virginia Beach, Douglas has made many good friends. One of these friends, former City Manager Russell W. Hatchett gave her a memento several years ago that she treasures. It is a gold charm, a replica of the first manned space capsule. He gave it to her for a story

Show Me the Way To Go Home...

Spring has really sprung--along with a few of my muscles.

The girls wanted to go bike riding Sunday, and since it was a beautiful day I couldn't think of a reasonable excuse not to. We hadn't been all winter.

I had fond memories of last spring when we went riding and the six-year-old, then five, was exhausted after a mile. Unfortunately she had gained a considerable amount of endurance over the winter.

After about a mile I asked if she wasn't getting tired. She wasn't. And the seven-year-old encouraged her to go on. About a mile later I asked if it wasn't about time to turn around. It wasn't.

Then they decided they wanted to go to the school playground. I at last got to sit down for a few minutes while they released some of that pent up energy on the monkey bars.

By the time they were ready to go home, they were also thirsty. So then we had to ride to the store to get something to drink.

From there we returned home to pick up little brother (in the car) to go back to the playground. They spent almost another hour there.

To say the least, they all had healthy appetites that night. Monday morning the girls were fine; I could hardly walk.

Just out of curiosity I retraced our route and checked the mileage on the car speedometer. We had ridden a little over four miles, which I think is pretty good for kids that age (or my age either).

I remember how horrified my parents were when they found out that the girl next door to me and I had ridden 18 miles through city traffic one day when we were 12. I hope mine don't try to top that—at least not with me along.

I can't even keep up with the joggers who trot around the two acre circle in Kings Grant.

HERE COMES OLGA!

Friday night at The Cavalier was the final dance for the season of the Cottillon club. I never cease to wonder about these young boys and girls. We hear so much about the generation of today being so bad, but these young people are such little ladies and gentlemen that at times I think I must really be imagining that they are so well behaved.

There must have been at least 100 couples, and the amazing part of it was that not a single one of the girls dresses was duplicated. I just couldn't believe my eyes as I checked each one as they came in that each dress was different. Some wore pant suits, some long-formals and some wore the micro mini skirts. Of course each young lady wears a corsage either on her shoulder or arm. It was amazing to sit and really watch these young people in their dancing. First of all they get rid of shoes and make themselves comfortable and ready to let go.

Sitting there I watched one very pretty blonde who was dressed very attractively. The young lad with her was really good looking. As she danced with him I watched her and she was really snoring him. My thoughts were "look out, Buddy, she is really out to get you", and he was really falling for everything she said.

Another thing I have noticed at these dances that the girls stick with their date through the entire dance. In my day we changed partners. In fact if I only danced with my date I felt as if I were a wall flower. Of course there was always one out of the crowd you enjoyed dancing with more than the others. Half of the time these days I don't think they know who they are dancing with. The way they dance away from each other is almost like getting up on the floor and just dancing alone.

Easter decorations was the scheme and the table was beautifully decorated with Easter bunnies and ducks. Dyed Easter eggs and candy Easter eggs were also part of the setting. For snacking they had brownies, peanuts, dips and potato chips, soft drinks, and petits fours. The band was known as the Soul Hustlers, and believe me they kept these young people hustling.

This party was only one of many this weekend. The Princess Anne Country Club dance was called "New Orleans" with menu and decorations to match.

The Princess Anne Woman's Club celebrated "Husband's night" at the Americano and there was also the Phantom Philing at Oceana.

Look for me next week, Where I am not sure as yet, but maybe I might see you, I hope so.

Lt. and Mrs. Almasi enjoy the festive atmosphere of the Second Annual Phantom Philing. The get-together of the Atlantic Fleet Phantom Community was held at the NAS Oceana Officer's Club March 22.

Queen Gives Check to Camp

Miss Beverly Jean Ward, Miss Tidewater Beauty Salon Queen, representing the Norfolk chapter of Hairdressers and Cosmetologists, consisting of members from Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Portsmouth and Norfolk, recently presented a check for $1700 to Mrs. Robert Summers, president of the board of Camp Civitan.

The contribution was raised during National Beauty Salon Week, Feb. 9-15, with Mrs. Kathleen Miles Chairman of all activities conducted during that week including an annual ball.

Miss Ward

The goal of Camp Civitan is to have a camp similar to the Easter Seal Camp near Roanoke. This would provide cottages for the mentally and physically handicapped children of Tidewater, so they could spend a two-week camping session at Camp Civitan, without commuting.

Blue Cheese Livens Menu

The seemingly endless "slush months" find most everyone with a good case of the doldrums. Time hangs heavy, appetites lag, spring seems light years away.

Take courage; take a tip from homemakers who've found a way to buck winter's appetite blues by using American blue cheese as a flavor accent.

Crumbled over salads, blended into dressings or dips, enhancing canapés or playing a prominent role in casseroles and other main dishes, blue cheese is an unmatched versatility food with a distinctive tangy taste.

Douglas

she had done on the Norwegian Lady and for the work in general she had done for Virginia Beach.

Anything Douglas does for her city is not considered work to her, because she loves it here. She has nothing but praise for the schools, hospital and government here. She likes the whole atmosphere and gets upset at people who speak disparagingly of the city. In her words, "I find Virginia Beach is such an international city that anyone who is bored here just will not adapt himself to the advantages it offers."

Even with all of these interests Douglas feels that her biggest accomplishment is found in her family. She and her husband have been married 40 years and they have seen their two children grow up, get married and have children of their own.

In thinking back over everything that has happened to her, Douglas says it brings to mind an old family expression, "are you still vertical," meaning, "are you all right?"

Douglas Barnes is thankful that she is "still vertical."

Golden Age Clubs Meet

The monthly meeting of the Princess Anne area Golden Age club met in the home of Mrs. Sara P. Cason, its president.

The Lynnhaven area Golden Age Club met in the home of Mrs. Sadie Barnes, the club's Secretary. The final report was received from the sale of candy. Plans were laid for the club anniversary to be held in Mt. Oliver Baptist Church the second Sunday in April.

The Creeds Golden Age Club held its third anniversary at Little Piney Grove Baptist Church.

The No. 2 choir of Oak Grove Baptist Church sang two numbers. The Baker singers, the Old Fashion Gospel singers, the Senior choir of Camble Chapel, the Harris Singers, the Zion Gospel Singers of Weeping Mary Baptist Church presented numbers.

The Future Homemakers of America at Princess Anne High School joined 12,000 chapters throughout the U. S. in observing National F.H.A. Week this week.

Activities got underway last Saturday night with a slumber party. On Sunday members attended church together, followed by a brunch at school.

On Monday they showed two movies on cooking foreign foods and invited mothers, neighbors and friends to attend. This was followed by a bake sale of foreign foods.

A faculty coffee was held Tuesday morning at the school and featured homemade coffee cake and buns. Brenda Holcomb was in charge.

On Thursday members will meet to discuss "Teenagers and Good Neighbors" as a part of the year's theme of "Neighbors Near and Far."

The special week is set aside each year to focus attention on the objectives and accomplishments of this national organization of junior and high school home economics students in meeting youth responsibilities of today and preparing for the challenges of tomorrow.

Joyce Cyrus is president of the P. A. chapter, and Mrs. James E. Spencer is faculty advisor.

In the Middle Ages it was the practice for housewives to take their dough to the baker for shaping and baking. A familiar cry in the streets was, "Come to the bakehouse," called out by bakers' servants when the ovens were hot. To attract a larger crowd, some bakers bought their servants horns to blow; competitors retaliated with hand bells. The bedlam in the streets finally became unbearable, and at one time the lord mayor of London banned all noisy advertising.

Roses Date Back in History

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins, Extension horticulturist at Virginia Tech.)

Roses are delightful in any garden. They flourished in ancient China, Greece, Rome and Persia. They have remained a favorite flower in this modern era and are cultivated and enjoyed in all parts of the world.

Now is the time to plant roses and prepare the ones you have for a season of beautiful blooms. The planting of new varieties should be done about four weeks before the average last frost date in your area, if you use bare root plants. Container-grown plants may be planted anytime.

Prune your roses when the leaf buds swell, but before active growth starts. This will be about the time forsythias are in bloom. Cut off all winter-killed, broken or insect-damaged or diseased canes.

Most bush roses should be pruned to leave about five vigorous canes about two feet tall. Severe pruning gives more, but smaller flowers. Hybrid tea varieties may be cut back about one-fourth to give an abundance of small blooms, about one-half to produce a moderate number of medium sized flowers and about three-fourths to provide a smaller number of exhibition size roses.

Climbing and rambling roses should be pruned after they bloom. They produce flowers on one-year-old canes from buds which developed late last summer. If the canes are too long they may be reduced now to a suitable length for the trellis. Do not cut drastically and leave only short stems as you would for bush roses. This would eliminate most of your flowers this year.

After the pruning is done, cover the cut end of the canes with asphalt wound dressing or caulking compound. This will prevent the entrance of carpenter bees. These insects lay eggs which develop into larvae that burrow in the canes and weaken the bush.

Weeds and grass should be dug out or pulled for a distance of at least 18 inches around each rose. This can be done easily when the soil is moist after a rainy period. Do not dig too deep and damage the roots of your roses.

To promote vigorous green growth, scatter one-half cup of 5-10-5 fertilizer around each bush. If your soil is quite sandy or infertile, use twice as much. Scratch this into the top inch of soil and water thoroughly.

Renew the mulch of sawdust, wood chips or peat moss to a depth of about two inches. Your roses should now be ready for a season of vigorous growth and flower production. Of course you must remember to spray faithfully every week during the summer to control diseases and insects.

Do not forget miniature roses when you select new varieties this spring. These are not just small mutations of regular roses. They are tiny plants which have been developed from hardy little bushes from the Swiss Alps. They are fine for low border planting, rock gardens, window boxes and as house plants.

Miniature roses are very hardy and produce blooms less than one inch across. They are fine for tiny arrangements which may be used as place cards at a dinner table.

Many of you readers no doubt enjoy growing plants in the house in fancy little containers just as much as you enjoy growing the lovely landscape plants and the annuals and perennials outdoors.

One seldom goes into a home where plants are growing that he does not find at least one of the cacti. This group of plants offers many possibilities for those who like to make miniature gardens.

Cacti grow in a variety of shapes and sizes ranging from very small to quite large. Many bear beautiful blooms. Most are very prickly, having many spines. The plants referred to as cactus require no attention as long as they are in bright light and are well drained. They are a succulent type of plant and are, thus, able to store water in their leathery tissues.

Some of the more popular ones are Opuntia, Bishop's Cap, Blue Cactus, and Old Lady.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. W. H. Brown, Mrs. J. T. Ellis, Mrs. J. A. Murphy and Mrs. Reuben Trant.

Blue ribbons were won by Mrs. Gordon Atwell, Mrs. F. G. Baraham and Mrs. H. W. Brown.

Princess Anne

Princess Anne Garden Club has a number of new members. They include Mrs. Arthur J. Hall III, Mrs. Charles M. Burington, Mrs. John M. Ballio, Mrs. M. Bagley Walker, Jr., Mrs. J. Davis Reed, Mrs. D. D. Conkright, Mrs. Henry Thompson, Mrs. John G. Pollard III and Mrs. Ronald Michelson.

Just Wait 30 Years

The year is 2000 - and the little woman has just returned from the local salon de beauté, where the shattering tab for hair styling was $40.00. (Makes today's $12.00 or so look positively frugal.) Her husband will be along any minute to announce that his haircut was only ten dollars and why don't women ever learn? (Takes you back to good old 1968, when his haircut was only two dollars...and he never stopped mentioning that, either.)

But, by the time she whisks out a beautiful beef roast, vegetables and chocolate chiffon pie (all turned out in 64 seconds in her electronic oven) peace reigns once more. Of course, the same amount of food that would total about $40.00 now, will come to about $112.00 then.

Can any of us afford to live to see this incredibly expensive decade dawn? Only if we're robustly healthy and don't plan to see much of hospital rooms. Today's $65.00 for your half of a semi-private will have skyrocketed to $700.00 a day.

Does this take us all automatically on the road to ruin, financially? Not in the least. Experts projecting the food, clothing and shelter costs of the future, also see the rate of income undergoing a spectacular rise. So it leads us right back to the same old problem: today's discretionary spending. Or-how much can we expect to have left over after we pay our basic bills. And how best to employ it to help protect us in years to come?

Panicking about the future is a waste of time and energy. Preparing for it sensibly is more practical. To make money work hard requires a plan. Create your own or talk with Travelers Financial Planner.

Too soon to worry about the year 2000? No. It is only 31 years away and half the current population will still be working and supporting their families!

It was a work session Friday as chairmen met to plan the Council of Garden Clubs flower show to be held April 10 and 11. Left to right are Mrs. August Culpepper, Mrs. M. J. Schwartz, chairman; Mrs. Joseph Davis, co-chairman; Mrs. Arthur H. Gallagher, Mrs. Norman Perry, Mrs. Richard Dunaja, co-chairman; and Mrs. Robert J. Lancaster.

Pretty as a picture Easter ham shining with an easy corn syrup glaze. The Easter Bonnet Cake is made with a cake mix plus a simple no-cook Fluffy White Frosting.

Plan Early for Easter

When family and friends gather for traditional ham 'n eggs with fresh-from-the-oven bread on Easter at noon, surprise everyone with a specially decorated cake.

It's ever so easy to do with standard mixes of your choice and this fluffy frosting recipe. Make the ham a spectacular success with one of the glazes shown here a rich, glossy mustard glaze, or an Orange or a Pineapple glaze.

Easter Baked Ham

- 1 ready-to-eat ham (about 13-pounds)
- 1 C. dark corn syrup
- 2 teas. dry mustard

Trim ham, then place, fat side up, on rack in roasting pan. Heat in 325 degrees F. (slow) oven about 1 hour and 15 minutes. Remove ham from oven; score making cuts about 1/8-inch deep, about 1-inch apart across fat surface of ham. Mix corn syrup and dry mustard until well blended. Drizzle corn syrup and mustard mixture over ham. Continue baking, basting frequently, until ham is well glazed and heated thoroughly, about 45 minutes. Makes 25 generous servings. Glaze may be used for vegetables if desired.

Orange Glazed Ham: Pour about 1 cup dark corn syrup into a mixing bowl. Stir in 1 teaspoon grated orange rind and 1 1/2 teaspoons dry mustard. Use this mixture to drizzle over ham as a glaze. Follow baking directions for Easter Baked Ham.

Pineapple Glazed Ham: Pour 1 cup dark corn syrup into a mixing bowl. Stir in 1 teaspoon grated orange rind, 1 1/2 teaspoons dry mustard and 1 (1-pound 4-ounce) can crushed pineapple. Use as glaze for ham and follow directions for Easter Baked Ham.

Easter Bonnet Cake

- 1 pk. cake mix (for two layers)
- 1 recipe Fluffy White Frosting
- Flowers, candies or other decorations

Prepare and bake cake according to directions on package, making 1 (8-inch) and 1 (9-inch) layer. Cool on wire rack. Lightly frost top of 9-inch layer. Set 8-inch layer on top so there is an even border of the 9-inch layer showing. Spread frosting on top border and sides of 9-inch layer. Smooth with spatula. Spread generous amount of frosting on sides and top of 8-inch layer. Swirl with spoon or spatula. Decorate as desired to create an Easter bonnet. Makes 8 servings.

Fluffy White Frosting

- 2 egg whites
- 1/2 C. light corn syrup
- 1/2 C. sugar
- 1/8 teas. salt
- 1 teas. vanilla

Combine egg whites, corn syrup, sugar and salt in double boiler top. Beat slightly with electric mixer or rotary beater. Place over rapidly boiling water and beat constantly until frosting holds stiff peaks when beater is raised, about 3 to 4 minutes. Remove from boiling water. Continue beating 1 minute. Add vanilla. Beat well. Makes enough to cover top and sides of 2 (8 or 9-inch) layers.

Wondering where those blue fish went last fall? This happy foursome says to try the surf about six miles north of Palm Beach, Fla....but then, how are we going to get 'em back? Guess the best thing is to wait until the blues finish their winter vacation and migrate northward. The enthusiastic fisherman are, left to right: (kneeling) Burnell Harris, former Virginia Beach resident; Bill Bradt, of Virginia Beach; (standing) Anne Bradt of Virginia Beach; and Charlie Branch of Waverly, Va.

Rain Wins First Round

Eastern District baseball favorite Cox has had a tough time showing its stuff. Rain cancelled all the games scheduled last Friday afternoon, where all Virginia Beach high schools were to have seen action.

Cox then rescheduled the game with Kellam for Monday, but rain again was the winner, and the game was postponed until a later date. Thus Cox took its lone game victory over Union Kempsville last week (10-4) into Tuesday afternoon's clash with the defending Eastern District champions, the Princess Anne Cavaliers, who still look good.

The Falcons proved their favorite role may not hold up. They were downed by the Cavaliers, 5 to 1. In another game Tuesday afternoon, First Colonial was downed by Kempsville, 5 to 3.

Other sports also moved into full swing this week following the advent of spring. In Tennis Tuesday afternoon Cox took Lake Taylor 8 to 1, Granby downed Kellam, 9 to 0, Booker T. tied Bayside, 4 to 4, and First Colonial downed Kempsville, 5 to 4.

Track meets began Wednesday afternoon with Princess Anne at Booker T., Cox at Norview, Maury at First Colonial and Kellam at Kempsville. Eastern District golf matches are scheduled to begin today.

Only one baseball game is scheduled this afternoon. That contest pits Deep Creek against First Colonial in an inter-district clash.

Virginia Beach baseball teams play a full schedule Friday afternoon. Cox is at Bayside, Kellam is at First Colonial and Kempsville is at Princess Anne.

Kellam plays a Saturday baseball game in another inter-district match with Great Bridge.

Also Friday afternoon all six of Virginia Beach's district high schools will play tennis matches. Cox will be at Norview, Princess Anne at Maury, Kempsville at Kellam and First Colonial at Bayside.

Three Virginia Beach schools placed in the Virginia High School Gymnastics championships top 10 last weekend in Alexandria.

The Kellam Knights, in finishing fifth statewide, placed five of its six entrants among individual top 10 listings also. Doug Hickman placed third on rings; Joe Parker was fourth on rings and ninth on parallel; Craig Davis placed fourth on trampoline; Tom Leahy was eighth on trampoline; and Charles Russell was ninth in floor exercise.

Kempsville High School placed seventh statewide, and Ross Fulcher of that school placed second in side horse competition. Bayside High School won the tenth statewide spot.

In track a minor problem was facing officials of the Eastern District. Not enough interested persons have been found to help out with helping run high school meets on Saturday afternoons, but officials hoped to have this cleared up by the time of the first dual meet this weekend. The cooperation of the public in finding interested persons was asked.

First Colonial High School is one of the favorites in track in the Eastern District this spring.

Juniors-Seniors Compete

By Rosemary Stallings
Princess Anne H. S.

Last Saturday night the Juniors and Seniors held a Junior-Senior basketball game. The girls played the first game; the boys battled in the second.

Many students are busy preparing for the up-coming SCA talent show. The show will be held on April 25 and 26. Any P. A. student may enter in any field of talent.

April 14-18 is Citizenship Week at Princess Anne. Students have planned to be extra courteous, polite and conscientious during that week.

Stephen Lall, an English teacher at P.A., is sponsoring a five-week trip to Europe this summer. This tour is open to any Tidewater student, and other high school students are invited to look into this.

"Geek Week" is fast approaching. During this time there will be the initiation of new members into the Key Club. The week is traditionally topped with the "Geek Week Dance" where the girls ask the boys for dates and foot the expenses. It is P. A.'s type of "Sadie Hawkins Day."

Cooke defeated Linkhorn Park and Star of the Sea to advance to the finals, where they met and defeated Kingston 29-16. High scorer in the game was James Risper of Cooke with 14 points.

Marine Buffs Organize Club

By James McCracken
Cox H. S.

A group of marine biology buffs have formed the Cox Oceanographic Research Seminar.

The club, aided and abetted by the entire Cox science department, operates under a division-of-labor system. Don Webster handles the chemistry and physics angle, Steve McNair plans the field trips, Robert Smalley identifies fossils, and Paul Morgan holds down the marine end.

Past projects include a film on the Navy's Ocean Lab I, Mr. Grant speaking in the mysteries of manganese nodules which "grow" just under the bottom of the ocean and excursions to Lynnhaven, Sandbridge and the Mariners' Museum.

Presently the club is growing shrimp in the biology aquariums and studying the influence of chemical ions introduced into the water. Don Webster and Sue Holland have undertaken a qualitative and quantitative analysis of manganese nodules.

Future plans include a field trip to Ocracoke, boating and scuba diving.

Elections for 1969-70 Cox class and S.C.A. offices are now underway. Members of each class may run for offices which vary with rising grades 9 through 12. S.C.A. offices include chaplain, treasurer and secretary. (Only rising seniors are eligible for president and vice-president.) There are no academic restrictions.

Planned by Matt Tignor and his elections committee, activities started with students visiting English classes March 10-13, each day devoted to one grade. These students explained the election schedule and application forms. They also encouraged students to run for office. During the week and the following one students could register to vote by presenting their S.C.A. cards in the cafeteria during lunch.

W.T. Cooke Wins Tournament

W. T. Cooke Elementary School won the First Annual Star of the Sea Sixth Grade Tournament and Virginia Beach Junior High won the Seventh Grade Tournament as 16 teams from ten schools battled in the basketball invitational sponsored by the Star of the Sea Men's Club.

Cooke defeated Linkhorn Park and Star of the Sea to advance to the finals, where they met and defeated Kingston 29-16. High scorer in the game was James Risper of Cooke with 14 points.

Hargrow To Appear In Court

William E. Hargrow, 19, of Pandora Lane, is scheduled to enter court tomorrow on charges of burglarizing Bayside High School on Dec. 20, 1967. Hargrow, who was arrested on Feb. 28 of this year, has been identified by police as one of five men who took part in 17 commercial burglaries in the city between December 1965 and December 1967.

Hargrow's attorney, Bruce G. Murphy, filed a motion in Circuit Court last Friday calling for dismissal of a malicious wounding charge filed against Hargrow. The charge contends Hargrow struck Bennie Glenn during an alleged Nov. 17, 1967 assault, causing Glenn to experience extensive head injuries and medical bills.

Murphy's motion states Hargrow did not receive a trial within three regularly scheduled terms of court, and therefore under "speedy trial provisions" of state law the charge should be dismissed.

Glenn has been quoted as saying he would drop charges providing Hargrow is ordered to pay medical bills resulting from the alleged assault. Glenn also reportedly wished to drop the charge due to his not being able financially to leave his job for repeated court appearances in a continued rescheduling of Hargrow's trial.

This is the city's central heating plant at Princess Anne, although it is often mistaken for one of the court buildings by citizens.

It's There--What Is It?

by Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

The city's central heating plant is conspicuously hidden in what will eventually be the very hub of the municipal complex at Princess Anne.

The building, which houses all the heating and cooling equipment for all present buildings there and which is expandable to meet the needs of future buildings, is of the same Colonial design as other city buildings nearby. Unless one is looking for it specifically, it could easily be mistaken for any one of the other public service buildings in the complex.

In fact, according to workmen in the building, never a day goes by without someone opening the door, stopping short with a startled look and backing away mumbling something about thinking it was a court building.

The concept of a central heating or cooling plant is not new. The major difference in Virginia Beach's is that modern methods have eliminated the need for a huge smokestack belching black smoke and that all the necessary equipment can be placed compactly in a tastefully designed, functional building.

The Virginia Beach plant serves 12 separate buildings, including a fire station, welfare building, all court buildings, school board building and administration buildings. The jail and health department are heated by the heating plant boilers, but no air conditioning is provided.

Basically the plant appears to be a two-story building with two one-story wings. Inside, however, the central portion is only one high ceilinged area with a maze of pipes extending to the roof. One of the wings is a shop-storage area, but the other is not really a wing at all. It is merely three walls with no roof built around two water cooling towers and a transformer that would otherwise be rather unsightly.

The flat roof houses other equipment including the small smokestack for the boilers. None of this can be seen from the ground because of the high sloping walls that make the building appear to have a much higher roof.

There are nearly two miles of pipes that run three to four feet underground through the complex. Hot water at 180 degrees leaves the plant in one set of insulated concrete and asbestos lines and returns through another set at 160 degrees for recirculation.

Cold water leaves the chiller at 43 degrees in a third set of pipes and returns in a fourth at 54 degrees. A total of 31,100 gallons of water is recirculated in the two systems. In a year's time it is estimated that 864,000 gallons of water is used either by evaporation or by bleeding it off.

At present there are two boilers, which operate on clean-burning, economical No. 4 oil. The maximum consumption of both is 36 gallons an hour. With future buildings expected to be added to the system, another boiler and possibly two will be needed. The compact instrument panel is already set up for two more, but another large building the size of the new Administration Building can still be served with the present system.

The air conditioning centrifugal compressor chiller is also not yet operating at a maximum load, but another large building would require another chiller, for which there is already space provided in the building.

The central heating plant went into operation in early 1968, but at that time only served a few new buildings. Since that time work has been continuing to install new lines and new air handling units in older buildings. As those buildings have been joined into the system, the old, less economical, individual boilers have been removed.

There is little maintenance required on the equipment. Two men handle all the regular and preventive maintenance in all city buildings both in the municipal complex and elsewhere throughout the city.

The master plan layout for the municipal center calls for a number of additional buildings in the future as Virginia Beach continues its rapid growth. The central heating plant will stand ready to add to the comfort of those who will work there. At the same time the building itself is an attractive asset to the complex.

Real Estate Course Set

The Distributive Education Service of the city schools will offer a course in preparatory real estate training beginning April 9.

The course is designed to introduce the theories and principles of real estate as it is practiced in Virginia and to prepare individuals for the Virginia Real Estate License Examination.

The instructor will be "Bill" Glover who is the president of Glover Realty, Inc. Glover was active as a representative and instructor of the world famous Dale Carnegie Course in southeastern Virginia, in both the Human Relations Course and the Salesman's Instructor Program. For the past several years, Glover has conducted classes in real estate for persons applying for the Real Estate Examination, classes in Real Estate Salesmanship and other subjects for the Norfolk School Board.

The 30 hour course will provide more than adequate instruction to obtain a license for those meeting the educational requirements. For individuals without high school or GED certificates, the course will constitute the first third of the full 90-hour course approved by the Real Estate Commission.

Interested persons should contact Clifford H. Lewis, Distributive Education Service at 499-1261, Princess Anne High School. After 5 p.m., call 497-1401.

BADGES & BANTER

Col. W. W. Davis, Virginia Beach Police Chief, has announced the promotion of two police officers as of April 1. Patrolman E. L. Jackson has been promoted to the rank of Sergeant, and will remain on duty with the Traffic Division. Det. Edward G. Casey is promoted to detective sergeant, and will transfer to duty with the Commonwealth's Attorney's office. Det. Louis Taylor, who formerly served with the Juvenile Division and recently on duty with the Commonwealth's Attorney, will transfer to the police Detective Division.

Three members of the Virginia Beach Borough Fire Department have returned to duty after completion of special training in Memphis, Tenn. Asst. Chief Garland Atwater, Russell Ramsey and Epton Pinner spent last week attending a special fire department instructors conference.

A Memphis newspaper reports that during one of the training sessions fire fighters were summoned to an alarm at one of the Memphis public schools. Class was immediately adjourned to the site of the alarm, and those in attendance had a chance to witness the Memphis fire fighters in action.

Word has been received from Capt. W. J. Moore, Jr., 2nd Police Precinct C. O., attending the FBI National Academy. "Bucky" says he is finding the course very interesting, and that he and his fellow classmates are really being kept busy "burning the midnight oil."

Men of the Beach Borough Police Precinct have been "having some luck" as fishing starts to pick up around the area. Sgt. N.C. Morse and officer C.E. Gmitter are reportedly bringing back some rock, while Lt. F.S. Krabenbill says he and his son Gary have been landing a few bass and crappie.
